Old killers poised for L.B. dance of death

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Southland cities are in a race against time to beef up or tear down the unreinforced masonry buildings that will be mass killers in the next major earthquake.

Long Beach has a chance of winning. But in most cities the race will probably be lost, because city officials are just beginning to acknowledge that they're in a race, like it or not.

And no one is sure when time will run out and a major temblor will strike. Earthquake prediction is still an infant science.

"Most cities are doing nothing to get rid of these buildings," said Robert Olson, executive director of the state's Seismic Safety Commission. "I'm afraid that they'll eventually pay a heavy toll in both money and human misery."

Edward M. O'Connor, chief of Long Beach's Building and Safety Department, said that the Palmdale Bulge, recent earthquake predictions, and earthquakes in Guatamala and Italy, have made more people think about quake hazards in their own cities.

"But we've always known that we'll have another major quake and a lot of smaller ones," he said. "We've known since 1933 that these old buildings will be death traps in a major quake. People just tend to forget about it when it's not in the news."

Anyone who has seen O'Connor's films of downtown Long Beach dancing in the throes of the disastrous 1933 temblor would have a hard time forgetting about it, however.

Walls of unreinforced brick buildings smashed into city boulevards, parapets toppled off buildings, and scores of people died of head injuries from chunks of the structures they'd trusted—or taken for granted—for years.

It was the same story in Santa Barbara in 1925, Bakersfield in 1952 and parts of the San Fernando Valley in 1971.

Although it is possible for modern buildings to collapse with enough shaking—the soil beneath them can betray them—it's the pre-1934 unreinforced masonry struc-

Hughes may have died 'poor'

Court order ties up assets

By DONALD L. BARLETT and JAMES B. STEELE
Knight News Service

When billionaire industrialist Howard Hughes died April 5 he did not have the legal authority to give away one penny of the assets of his wholly owned Summa Corp.

In fact, Hughes was barred by an obscure court order—and his estate remains barred by that same order—from distributing the assets of Summa to charity, relatives, friends, business associates or anyone at all.

The court order—handed down by a Delaware state judge in 1962 and upheld by the Delaware Supreme Court—placed all Hughes' stock in Hughes Tool Co. under the control of the Delaware court.

In 1972 Hughes sold off Hughes Tool Co., which makes the famous oil-drilling bit invented by his father, and reincorporated all his other interests under the name Summa Corp. It is those other interests that are now enjoined by the Delaware order.

That little-known order has been in effect now for more than 14 years and could remain in effect until a long and bitter legal battle between Hughes, and now his estate, and Trans World Airlines, a company he once controlled, finally is resolved.

That could take years. In the meantime, Summa's assets cannot be given away, notwithstanding the provisions of any will or probate-court action directing the distribution of Hughes' estate.

Summa Corp. is the wholly owned holding company through which Hughes controlled his gambling casinos and hotels in Las Vegas and Reno, massive land holdings in Nevada and California, a helicopter-manufacturing plant, gold and silver mining properties, Hughes Airwest, a Las Vegas television station and other assorted investments. (While Hughes maintained some assets in his own name, the bulk of his estate was and is held by Summa Corp.)

The existence of the 14-year-old Delaware court order—and its effect on the Hughes estate—was turned up last week by the Philadelphia Inquirer in a continuing investigation of the Hughes business empire, a probe that was started in February 1975.

"Buddy, can you spare a quarter?"
Staff Drawing by ERWIN DeGROOT

For TWA, which has been in a legal battle with Hughes since 1961, there is a bittersweet irony in the Delaware court order.

Three years ago, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned a federal court decision in New York City that had resulted in a judgment against Hughes in favor of TWA.

The Supreme Court decision was long hailed as a significant Hughes legal victory. In fact, it turned on a legal technicality and had nothing to do with the merits of the case.

Since the decision, TWA has been quietly pursuing a parallel case in the Delaware state court, a case that ultimately will test the company's claims for damages against Hughes.

As long as that lawsuit is proceeding—the one in New York lasted nearly 12 years—TWA is in a position to tie up Summa assets.

If TWA should ultimately win the Delaware case and a judgment is entered, then the airline the eccentric billionaire once owned could in fact become a major beneficiary of the Hughes estate.

Reagan tax data 'hazy'

'Paid less than most'

By EILEEN SHANAHAN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California almost certainly paid no federal income tax in 1970, despite an income in excess of $73,000. In at least two other recent years, he also appears to have paid less federal income tax than most people with a small fraction of his income.

These conclusions are based on an analysis of information about his income and taxes for the years

EXCLUSIVE

1970 through 1975 that Reagan has made public since the start of his formal campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

The data he released do not contain enough details to make it possible to determine with certainty either the exact amount of income he had in any of those years or the amount of income tax he paid for any year except 1975.

Reagan refused last week, through his press aide, James H. Lake, a request from the New York Times that he provide this information.

President Ford, Reagan's competitor for the Republican presidential nomination, has made much more detailed disclosures of his financial and tax records. They show that Ford paid substantial amounts of federal income tax in each of the last 10 years.

Analysis of the limited information that Reagan has so far made public indicates that what he has done is within the law. It appears that he has made investments that

Wild parties led to Mayer

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Long Beach Planning Director Ernest Mayer, Jr., free on $25,000 bond after his arrest Friday for allegedly accepting a $25,141 bribe paid in gold coins, was in seclusion Saturday in Capistrano Beach with a girl friend.

And as the suspended city official hid out, another facet of his continuing story unfolded, an angle that also had to do with pleasures of several sorts.

Parties at Mayer's Marina Pacifica "rendezvous and party" condominium— "parties tending to be ribald," were mentioned in an affidavit filed by a disctrict attorney's investigator before Mayer's arrest.

But even before that information, word of swinging private parties attended by city officials had come to the police department's intelligence unit. And it was this information—not anything to do with alleged bribes solicited by Mayer from two Long Beach architects—that was the basis for what City Manager John Mansell believed was a call to the district attorney's office in early December asking for an investigation.

Lt. Ray Henry, head of the intelligence division, Saturday told the Independent, Press-Telegram his recollection of the matter.

"In either late November or December I received word of conversations by Mr. Mayer in which he reportedly had told several persons that he had parties to which city officials were invited. I cannot reveal the nature of these parties but it was such that I relayed the information to Chief Ralph Kortz and to City Manager John Mansell at that time," he said.

"I remembered nothing further about the matter until Friday when I reported to Mr. Mansell after Mr. Mayer had been arrested. At that time he was in his office with Jack O'Neil (Assistant City Manager)

Oklahoma all for Reagan

By WALTER STOVALL
Associated Press

Ronald Reagan, criticizing Ford administration farm policies Saturday at the Oklahoma Republican Convention, won all the state's national convention delegates, while President Ford rolled across Michigan on a train in quest of votes in Tuesday's GOP presidential primary in his home state.

Democratic frontrunner Jimmy Carter rested at his home in Plains, Ga., as he does every weekend, while other Democrats campaigned without letup in their attempts to derail Carter's drive for the presidential nomination.

Reagan spoke to Oklahoma Republicans just a few hours before the convention voted to give him the second half of their 36 votes at the GOP national convention. Eighteen delegates were chosen last week at district meetings, and 18 more were selected Saturday. All 36 are pledged to Reagan.

"Having told the grain farmers for months to plant fence-to-row, fence-to-row," Reagan said in a keynote speech, "the administration clamped an embargo on future grain sales to the Soviet Union. During the weeks of that embargo, American farmers lost sales of approximately $2 billion.

Marina Pacifica plans to fix cracking floors

By AL MURRELL

The Marina Pacifica Corporation will spend more than $700,000 to prevent further cracking of the floors at the huge condominium complex in Long Beach.

The $24 million, 570-unit complex on Second Street was designed and contructed to now-outdated Uniform Building Code specifications and it was not built with enough support "In some places, so they are having to go back and beef up the pilings," according to Mel Carpenter, executive director of the Southern California Regional Planning Commission.

Carpenter said "From a layman's view, there is just too much weight on the first floor in some places and that is causing the cracks in the concrete."

$1.5-million medical award

A 30-year-old Norwalk woman has won more than $1.5 million in what was believed the largest medical malpractice judgment in Orange County history.

By unanimous vote, the 12 jurors found Drs. H. Rudolph Alsleben and Charles Henderson and their Alsleben Clinic guilty of malpractice in their administration of the drug EDTA to Patricia Beverly Gail Phillips. They ordered the two doctors and the clinic to pay the Norwalk woman—who is also blind and diabetic—a total of $1,512,500.

The five-week trial in the courtroom of Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Robert Kneeland ended with the jury's decision late Thursday.

Donald B. Caffray, the Long Beach lawyer who represented the plaintiff, told the jurors in his summation that the two doctors knew that EDTA was a nephrotoxic drug but continued to prescribe it for Miss Phillips for a prolonged period ending in 1973. As a result of the regular administration of the drug, Caffray said, Miss Phillips suffered "renal shutdown"—failure of all kidney function—and has been placed on permanent, thrice-weekly dialysis.

A representative of the California Medical Association was called to testify on behalf of the plaintiff. He said that California doctors had been warned of the dangerous side effects produced in using EDTA in the treatment of arteriosclerosis cases.

Neither Alsleben nor Henderson was available for comment, a spokesman for the clinic said. John Cobb of Los Angeles, who represented the doctors and their clinic, also was unavailable to say if his clients planned to appeal the huge judgment.

Disabled vet has lot of motivation

Combined News Services

Hilliard Carter is winding up a thesis on motivation as applied to rehabilitation and will soon earn his master's degree, a degree he can neither see nor touch.

"It was a long and sometimes discouraging rehabilitation period in Walter Reed Hospital," said Carter, 30, a former Army man who lost his sight and forearms in a booby trap blast in 1966. "Blind veterans would try to explain how it was. Veterans without hands would tell me how it was. But not once did I meet anybody blind and also handless.

"I finally made up my mind that I was useless physically, but I could develop brain power and could put it to work helping others."

When he receives his master's from the Illinois Institute of Technology, Carter said a job of counseling awaits him at a Veterans Administration Hospital.

Minnesota lass Miss U.S.A.

Barbara Elaine Peterson, 22-year-old daughter of a Minnesota supreme court judge, was named Miss U.S.A. of 1976 on Saturday night in Niagara Falls. The 5-foot-8, brown-haired Miss Peterson lives in Edina, Minn., and is a student at the University of Minnesota. She plans to enter law school.

Runners-up were Miss Michigan Kevin Gale, 22; Miss Oregon Gail Atchison, 22; Miss South Carolina Virginia Murray, 22; and Miss Louisiana Robyn Sanders, 24.

Just clowning

James O. Stephan stood out in his graduating class at Southern Illinois University. He wore a pink wig, floppy pink shoes and a ruffled collar with his navy blue gown.

"I thought it was fitting that I graduate this way," said Stephan, 25, of Carbondale, Ill. "I've been clowning since I was 10 years old and paid for my entire undergraduate education with money I earned as a clown."

Anarchist buried

Ulrike Meinhof, a cofounder of the anarchist Baader-Meinhof gang, was buried Saturday in West Berlin amid heavy police security precautions and an outpouring of sympathy from young followers.

Miss Meinhof, 41, whose death by hanging in her prison cell a week ago has been officially ruled a suicide, was buried in a Protestant cemetery in the Tempelhof district without a religious service.

Police said some 4,500 people gathered at Holy Trinity cemetery and then marched to demonstrate their solidarity with the onetime ideologist of the radical German student movement. The marchers, many of them carrying red banners and Maoist emblems, were mostly silent at the cemetery. But on the march they burst into chanted slogans.

Adventure ends

A Japanese adventurer went for days without food and long hours in total darkness, through broken ice and a confrontation with a polar bear to complete the longest one-man sled dog trip in history.

"It was just my dream," said 115-pound Naomi Uemura, 35, after an 18-month, 7,500-mile journey from Jakobshavn, Greenland, to Kotzebue, Alaska. He arrived on May 7.

Uemura's trip was sponsored partly by Mainichi Shimbun, a Toyko newspaper which described him as the first man ever to have climbed the major peaks of five continents — Mt. Everest in Asia, Mt. Kilimanjaro in Africa, Mt. Aconcagua in South America, Mt. Blanc in Europe and Mt. McKinley in North America.

Mayor Richard Daley, who says retirement is a word that "ought to be stricken from the English language," celebrated his 74th birthday Saturday.

He has been mayor of Chicago since 1955, a reign longer than any of his predecessors. At the city's 139th birthday party in March, he said he will be mayor "as long as I'm alive."

Master political prankster

Dick Tuck 'just along for ride' on Ford train

By RICHARD E. MEYER

DICK TUCK 'Retired' Prankster

ABOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL (AP) — He says he has retired. But one wonders.

Dick Tuck, master political prankster who rigged Richard Nixon's fortune cookies and slipped a comely spy onto Barry Goldwater's campaign train, rode President Ford's whistlestop express Saturday as it rolled across Michigan.

He promised to behave.

"Welcome aboard," the President told him as he shook his hand.

"Thank you, Mr. President. Thank you very much," Tuck replied, with a puckish grin.

Ford grinned back and said he was glad Tuck had come aboard formally instead of sneaking on.

"I'VE BEEN doing this (riding campaign trains) for 50 years," Tuck told him, "and this is the best train I've been on — this week."

Ford smiled. White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen cleared a path for passengers who had gathered around, and the President made his way down the aisle.

Dick Tuck was a campaign worker for several past Democratic presidential candidates. He is 52 now and he has a little paunch. There is some gray in his curly hair. But his light brown eyes still twinkle.

Over a cup of coffee — 20 cents on the "Presidential Express" — Tuck said he didn't really don a railroad cap and wave Richard Nixon's train out of Tulare, Calif., years ago when Nixon was seeking votes for the vice presidency.

Apocryphal. The train had pulled out in midspeech, but Tuck said he wasn't responsible.

Idly, he flipped the lapel of his black coat. Brass buttons. The words "Union Pacific" were stamped across each one. A conductor's coat.

"I get my old clothes from Averell Harriman."

The father of the former ambassador was a railroad magnate.

Tuck's eyes twinkled.

He recalled the shapely young lady he managed to sneak aboard Barry Goldwater's campaign train in 1964. She distributed a newspaper Tuck published called "The Whistlestop" which she slipped under every compartment door at night.

It cautioned against walking off the edge of the earth. And it reassured that the water abroad the train was not fluoridated.

And he recalled the fortunes he slipped into some cookies Nixon distributed in Los Angeles' Chinatown during his 1962 campaign for the governorship of California.

They said: "Richard Nixon for Mayor of Whittier; Pat Brown for Governor."

Why wasn't he doing these things now? Was he discouraged by Watergate and its dirty tricks?

"No, I came out ahead on Watergate," Tuck allowed.

"What I did wasn't illegal. Secondly, it wasn't ever malicious. I've always tried to lighten things, to touch them with humor — and that's not always easy. And thirdly, I tried, you know, in most cases, to dramatize a serious or important issue. Finally, what I did wasn't surreptitious or anonymous. Some have said that I not only claimed credit, I demanded it."

"If anything happens on this train, I'll get the blame — or the credit — for it. If Nixon had stepped on a banana peel at the Great Wall of China, I'd have gotten credit."

Did he mean it? No mischief on this trip?

"No way. I'm retired. And I'm fully accredited."

He flashed an official White House press pass accrediting him to Playboy magazine.

No tricks? Was he certain?

"I'm too old for it," he grinned. He came up with an engineer's hat and put it on.

Was it because Ford's security is too tight? Just how tight did he find security on this trip?

"WELL, you know," said Tuck, "when I got accredited, the Secret Service checked out my Social Security number to check out who I am, and all that. Now, look."

He pointed to his White House pass. It was made out to Richard Puck.

"The real reservations the White House made for me say 'Puck,' too."

His eyes twinkled.

"Did you see the sign somebody put under the name 'The Presidential Express' two stops back?

"It said 'The S.S. Titanic.' Now, I don't know who put it there.

"This couldn't be the Titanic. If it is, it is the first ship that ever ran into an iceberg in the middle of the Panama Canal."

Student tries to teach streetwalkers a lesson

MIAMI (AP) — A 27-year-old student majoring in social work at a small Christian college here has set up an organization for prostitutes and is trying to teach them that "streetwalking is a short-lived career."

Barry College student Evelyn Young, with the approval of law enforcement and college officials, began by visiting prostitutes in jails and now has taken to the streets, bars and hotels to recruit women for membership in her group, called Health and Happiness of Women.

"Our major goal is decriminalization of prostitution," said Ms. Young. "But we also want to improve the physical and psychological well-being of these women. We want them to know of their rights."

About 30 women, most of them current or former prostitutes, are members of the organization.

"We help prostitutes in any way that we can," said Ms. Young. "I teach a class Tuesdays on health and body care, and we have rape-awareness and vocational training. We try to make them realize that streetwalking is a short-lived career."

Ms. Young decided to establish Health and Happiness of Women after working in a "participant-observation study — that's where you live and mingle with those you are studying."

She said that "as a feminist, I was very involved in NOW (National Organization for Women). Abortion was already taken (as a study subject) and this was the only untouched subject."

Miami and other resort areas are favorite gathering spots for prostitutes, said Ms. Young, who has been working on her project now for two months.

"The only way you can get a prostitute to change is if she is too old, too sick or in trouble," she said. "That's why we can attract them in jail and the sick ones on the street."

Ms. Young, who graduates in two years, said she plans to continue her work.

"I'm dedicated to this job," she said. "I think that within three to five years, prostitution will be legal, but we still want to help the girls find something else."

Busing foes encouraged by report of Levi aid in court

New York Times Service

BOSTON — White anti-busing activists here were encouraged Saturday by reports that Atty. Gen. Edward Levi was considering urging the Supreme Court to reconsider busing as a solution to school segregation. But some blacks expressed fear that the move could spur more violence.

The attorney general is considering filing a friend of the court brief within the next few days in connection with the Boston school desegregation case that would support a petition filed by opponents of the court-ordered school desegregation plan here.

In effect, the brief would ask the court to reconsider its landmark, unanimous decision, written by Chief Justice Warren Burger, in 1971, in which the court held that federal district judges had the authority to order extensive busing to remedy school desegregation fostered by local authorities. The case involved schools in Charlotte, N.C.

Boston Mayor Kevin White, who has said that busing is causing white flight from the schools and the city, said Saturday that the possibility of Justice Department intervention was "welcome news to the city of Boston" which he said had been "sorely tested" by the busing order.

The city council president, Louise Day Hicks, a leading opponent of busing, hailed the possibility of Levi's intervention, saying the "people of Boston need a powerful friend in court" in order to "get better treatment."

But Thomas Atkins, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, denounced the proposed plan as "a political move." It was the NAACP which brought the suit that led to the federal court finding that the schools had been deliberately segregated.

"While we are somewhat aware of the current primary season and the effect it may be having on policy considerations, we are hopeful that the President will reflect this invitation to further contribute to the turmoil which has gripped this city from time to time," Atkins told newsmen Saturday morning.

The NAACP leader referred to the Michigan primary this Tuesday, in which the reportedly desperate Ford campaign is making an all-out effort to avoid defeat by Ronald Reagan in the President's home state. Busing has been a strong issue there in the past.

Atkins said he was confident the appeal could not succeed, but he said he was concerned about the comfort the action "might give to some who have chosen calculated violence as the means of changing a federal court order.

"The President of the United States should not be giving rocks to those who would stone buses, nor gasoline to those who would start fires, nor sticks to those who would seek to chase American citizens off a constitutionally protected ground," Atkins said.

Levi met Friday evening with Solicitor General Robert Bork, who strongly backed the proposal to support the anti-busing position before the Supreme court, and with J. Stanley Pottinger, chief of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, who was understood to strongly oppose such a move.

Ford had previously spoken out on the busing issue in the midst of one of the frequent spates of racial violence over the past two years here when, after urging citizens to be peaceful and respect the law, he declared: "I respectfully disagree with the judge's order."

At the time, Mayor White charged that the President had "fanned the flames of resistence."

U.S. man arrested in Mexican jail breakout

DALLAS (AP) — One of three men accused of staging a daring raid on a Mexican jail to free 14 U.S. citizens was arrested in Dallas shortly after Mexico said it was asking extradition of the escapees, U.S. authorities said Saturday.

The authorities also said a federal grand jury in San Antonio will investigate the raid on the Piedras Negras jail, just across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass, Tex.

William McCoy Hill, 32, a used-car dealer, was arrested by U.S. Customs special agents in his attorney's office Friday evening. He was charged with violation of the Munitions Control Act for exporting guns into a foreign country without proper authorization and was released on a $1,000 bond.

Hill was identified by Customs officials as the back-up man in the raid led by Don Fielden, an unemployed ex-Marine.

Fielden surrendered to U.S. authorities in Dallas last week and was released on $5,000 bond after being charged with violating U.S. neutrality laws by taking guns into Mexico to free the Americans.

Women's military role unchanged, study finds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most women in the military are still assigned to administrative and medical specialities, a government study said Saturday.

The General Accounting Office blamed the continued concentration of women in those two traditional areas on:

—The failure of Army and Marine Corps recruiters to fully describe to women their occupational options.

—The tendency of some women to seek specialization in those areas even when other choices were offered.

—Restrictions on women's participation in combat-related activities.

GAO collected data showing that by December 1974, nearly 22,000 of the Army's 33,525 women served in administrative or medical jobs, as did nearly 9,000 of the 15,114 enlisted Navy women and nearly 14,000 of the 22,198 Air Force women.

The Navy provides medical services for the Marine Corps, but 2,000 or 72 per cent of the corps' 2,574 women were involved in administrative work.

The GAO, an auditing and investigative agency of Congress, said virtually every non-combat specialty has been opened to women in the military.

But the performance by women and men has been different in some cases where they were assigned to the same physical tasks.

The GAO said some women have been assigned to specialities in which they cannot perform effectively because of strength limitations or because of the combat-related nature of the job. Some others have not been assigned to specialities for which they were trained because of combat restrictions or because their supervisors believed they could not do the work. And others have not been required to meet the same training and performance requirements as men.

"We believe the services should develop physical and operational standards for potentially troublesome specialities as well as procedures for measuring the ability of both men and women to satisfy the standards," the GAO said.

The Air Force is the only service that has begun taking steps in this area, it said. In developing standards in 1974 for evaluating men's and women's capabilities, representatives from the Air Force Office of the Surgeon General asserted that an average woman has 60 per cent of the strength of an average man.

The standards were developed over the next year and have been applied to all new Air Force recruits since January 1976 to determine what jobs they are eligible to fill.

The armed services intensified their recruitment of women and began to diversify their job assignments because the end of the draft meant a reduction in the number of men in the services. These steps were also taken in anticipation of passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The Navy and the Air Force are limited by law to assigning women noncombat positions, but the GAO said its investigators could find no similar written prohibitions for the Army and the Marine Corps.

The Defense Department said it concurred with the GAO's findings and has set up a study group to address the issues raised by the agency.

Calley, convicted of My Lai killings, weds

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — William Calley Jr. and Penny Vick, daughter of a Columbus jeweler, were married Saturday night in a candlelight ceremony at St. Paul United Methodist Church.

Calley, 32, met his 29-year-old bride several years ago when he was a customer in one of her father's stores. She is a buyer for her father. It was the first marriage for both.

Five years ago this spring, the former Army lieutenant was convicted of the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians in the longest court-martial in U.S. history at nearby Ft. Benning.

U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott of Columbus, who reversed Calley's conviction in 1974, and former Macon Mayor Ronnie Thompson were among the several hundred wedding guests.

Calley was sentenced to life imprisonment in March 1971 for the murder of unresisting Vietnamese citizens.

President Nixon ordered him removed from the Fort Benning stockade and placed under house arrest, where he remained for three years.

Later, Calley's sentence was reduced to 10 years but a court appeal won a reversal of his conviction. However, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans reversed Elliott's ruling and reinstated the conviction.

Menace of old walls

Quake killers still poised

tures that collapse first and take the heaviest toll.

MOST OF THE 120 deaths in the 1933 disaster occurred inside or beside such buildings. Building codes enacted after 1933 prevented more such structures from being built. But in most cities the old killers have been left standing.

Renewed interest in the dangerous old buildings has resulted from the uplift known as the Palmdale Bulge on the San Andreas Fault, which scientests say may signal a great quake of 1857 or 1906 magnitude.

Caltech scientests have also predicted a moderate quake, perhaps of the 1971 variety, in the San Fernando Valley area in the next year.

On Thursday, following up on an earlier declaration of the bulge as a menace to safety in the Los Angeles Basin, the California Seismic Safety Commission asked for federal aid in getting action on unreinforced masonry buildings.

THE COMMISSION stated that there are several thousand buildings in the Los Angeles Basin that pose "a significant danger to life" and that local and state governments need help in bearing the cost of getting rid of them.

It asked federal agencies to assign high priority and "make adequate financial resources available over the next ten years" to repair or demolish the buildings.

Long Beach has been working on that for several years.

"The city is known throughout the world as being a leader in getting rid of unsafe buildings or bringing them up to standards," said Caltech's Clarence Allen, one of the nation's leading earthquake scientists.

"Long Beach suffered so much in 1933 that an earthquake hazards program has been more acceptable there."

HOWEVER, DESPITE O'Connor's vigorous earthquake hazard program, only 11 per cent of the city's 825 unreinforced masonry buildings have been reinforced or demolished since new laws were enacted in 1959.

Most are located downtown. A few are further east in old districts along streets such as Fourth and Anaheim. There are a few more scattered along main streets in North Long Beach.

Los Angeles, which has the second most effective program, and where the greatest problem lies, has only just begun.

Robert J. Williams, O'Connor's Los Angeles counterpart, said that an earthquake hazard ordinance that would require public assembly buildings of unreinforced masonry to be beefed up or torn down is on its way to the City Council.

BUT THIS WOULD cover only 300 structures such as theaters, churches, libraries and restaurants. There are 14,000 more buildings—most of them hotels and apartments—of the type that Long Beach has been condemning.

"There are 75,000 to 100,000 people living in these structures," Williams said. "Depending on the time of day, thousands of these people would probably be killed if a major earthquake occurred on the San Andreas fault."

Allen and other earthquake scientists say that such a quake is inevitable. The last big one occurred in 1857 and they seem to occur every 100 years, Allen said. The Palmdale Bulge may be a precursor of such a quake.

BUT A MUCH smaller quake, slightly larger than the 1971 temblor or centering closer to old sections of Los Angeles, could pose almost as serious a threat.

"The 1971 quake lasted 11½ seconds," Williams said. "If it had lasted another five seconds or so, a lot of these old buildings in the downtown area would have come down."

Ninety-three per cent of those buildings are in the metropolitan Los Angeles area bounded by Century Boulevard, La Cienega Avenue, Griffith Park and the eastern city limits.

Three per cent are in San Pedro and the rest are scattered in West Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley.

THERE ARE thousands more unreinforced masonry buildings in other older cities such as Glendale, Pasadena, Compton, San Gabriel and Santa Ana.

If it's been known for so long that the buildings are hazards, why hasn't concern for human life caused them to be torn down?

When hearings were held on the proposed Los Angeles ordinance, most theater owners whose buildings were involved opposed remedial action, Williams said.

Long Beach officials said that when O'Connor was trying to draft tougher laws, the Downtown Long Beach Association and the United Property Owners Association succeeded in watering them down.

IT'S USUALLY appeals by property owners—often accompanied by considerable political clout—that keeps the unsafe buildings standing and occupied, Southland building officials agree.

There's no doubt that property owners take a loss—often a major loss—if their buildings are demolished or reinforced, Williams said.

THE SOLUTION may be to arrange somehow for owners, lending agencies and government agencies to share the cost in reducing the hazards, he said. That's the direction the commission's Thursday resolution pointed.

O'Connor said that because city building officials know they're in for a fight if they try to act against earthquake hazards, many don't even try.

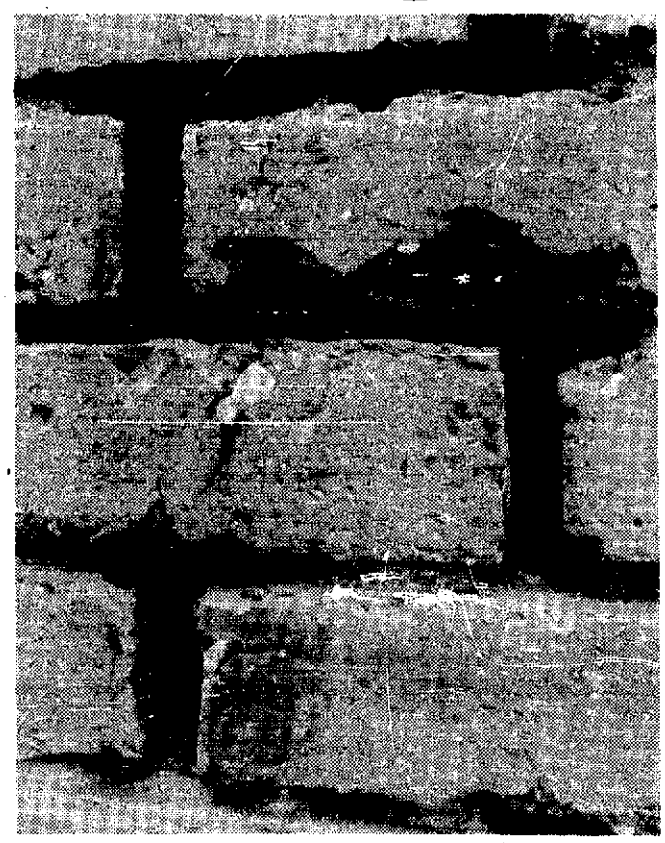

"Most building officials just use the ostrich approach," said the 63-year-old building official, a 30-year veteran in the department. "They don't have the guts to take on such a bucket of worms. And it is a bucket of worms."

HE SAID THAT building officials must be willing to do battle and they must have the "right environment"—support from other city officials, businessmen and the media—if they're to succeed.

That right climate has existed in Long Beach, by and large, O'Connor said.

It existed in Santa Rosa after that city's 1969 earthquake, according to Olson, of the Seismic Safety Commission.

But Santa Rosa and Long Beach are the exceptions, Olson said.

L.B.'s quake-prone buildings

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

"Old buildings are not like whisky. They don't get better with age."—Ed O'Connor

The old wall is a crazy patchwork of decaying mortar and deteriorating brick.

In some spots, the mortar just isn't there, having crumbled away almost completely around some bricks.

Some of the bricks are askew and can be wiggled out of place. Halves and quarters of other bricks are missing.

A centuries-old building in Italy? An old garden wall in New England?

Not quite. It's a side wall of a large, three-story apartment building in earthquake-prone Long Beach.

You can see where bricks toppled off the building in the city's 1933 earthquake and were replaced by cement along the roof line.

Those patches — hanging up there atop the original brick work — could prove more dangerous than the bricks that tumbled down in 1933, according to Ed O'Connor, the city's building and safety chief. They will come down in large chunks.

The apartment building and more than 800 like it were built before 1930 of brick or hollow clay tile with wooden floors, joists and roofs. They were designed to bear only the vertical load of the buildings themselves.

No one considered how well the structures would survive the sharp back-and-forth motion of a major earthquake.

A 1933 report by one of O'Connor's predecessors, C. D. Wailes Jr., describes how such buildings were put together.

"...The 1913 building code permitted a straight lime mortar (unmixed with cement) for all walls except isolated piers, foundation walls, parapets and chimenys on the roof line...

"During the period when this code was in effect much of the sand used for both mortar and concrete was a dirty, fine sand comparable to beach sand...workmanship was decidedly inferior..."

A 1933 report by Caltech's Robert A. Millikan notes that such methods were an "all too prevalent class of construction (used in Long Beach): the stores and apartment houses...were built as cheaply as the inadequate building codes would permit by those who were interested only in speculative profits."

Modern building codes call for high-quality mortar, reinforced walls and better ties of floors and ceilings to the walls.

And not all pre-1933 buildings are unsafe, O'Connor said. Most of the old wood-frame homes built in the teens and 20s throughout Long Beach pose no serious hazard. The steel-reinforced public utilities building, built before 1933, survived the quake nicely.

Many old brick buildings have been reinforced. Steel-reinforced vertical concrete ribs have been implanted in the sides of the structures.

Large sections of decaying brick have been scalloped out and replaced with cement.

"You can't blame property owners for being unhappy when you tell them they have to do that," O'Connor said. "If I came and told you to spend thousands of dollars on your building or tear it down, you'd be unhappy too.

"But on the other hand, if I took you into one of these buildings and said, 'if a moderate earthquake struck right now we'd have a slim chance of getting out alive,' you'd demand that I do something about it."

Hundreds of persons — many of them poor and elderly — still live in the old apartments. Hundreds more go in and out of small businesses in such buildings each day.

Series offers vacation tips

Columnist Sylvia Porter has prepared a five-part series designed to answer an important question facing vacationing families every year.

The question: should families take public transportation to their vacation site and rent a car there, or should they take care of those long deferred repairs on the family car and drive it?

Whichever way your family goes, you should take time to discover Ms. Porter's findings.

Her series begins Monday in the Independent, Press-Telegram. She discusses what drivers should know about rental cars—and their insurance—in the first two articles and auto repairs in the final three.

New jobs, tax cuts planned by Demos

By RICHARD D. LYONS
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Democratic majority in the House of Representatives has proposed a massive realignment of legislative priorities for the next five years aimed at restoring national economic prosperity by creating 12 million new jobs and cutting taxes by $10 billion.

The program envisions a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress

working together starting next year to bring about a revitalized economy that would produce federal budget surpluses by 1980 that in turn would be invested in national health, educational, energy and environmental programs.

The 271-page proposal, prepared over the last nine months at the direction of the House leadership, will be offered to the meeting starting here Monday of the Democratic platform committee, which is expected to incorporate large sections as planks in the Democratic presidential platform.

In addition to the views of the Democratic leadership, the proposal includes ideas from all the Democratic committee chairmen in the House. It will be the first time that such a coordinated effort is presented to the Democratic platform committee.

The plan is expected to be the keystone of the Democrat's legislative program starting next year and was drawn up, in part, as a result of their frustration in dealing with two successive Republican Presidents who have in the last eight years vetoed 86 pieces of legislation drafted by Democratic Congresses.

The proposal has a decided new deal flavor, emphasizing that only through the creation of new jobs will budget deficits be reduced, the economy restored and the quality of life improved.

"Attainment of full employment is our primary objective," according to the proposal, a copy of which was obtained by The New York Times.

While large parts of the proposal are political in nature, several economists familiar with its content have stated that they believe it makes fiscal sense and is not, as one put it, "merely pie in the sky."

Its drafters urge on what they foresee as the future Democratic administration a detailed list of domestic proposals including:

— Passage and implementation of the Hawkins-Humphrey full employment bill now before Congress to reduce unemployment to 3 per cent of all adults by 1981.

— A $10 billion tax cut effective in July 1978, that would be structured to give the most relief to low and middle income workers.

— Stepped up antitrust action by the Justice Department as part of an effort to damp price increases and constrain inflation.

— Redrafting the tax code to simplify returns and increase federal revenues by plugging the loopholes whose costs are expected to rise to $135 billion a year by 1981.

— Improving the efficiency of local governments by encouraging through legislation the consolidation of jurisdictions, even across state lines.

— The offering of low-interest loans and tax incentives to small businesses in an effort to make them more competitive with the major corporations.

— Assisting consumers through the federal testing of products and ending price fixing in, for example, the drug industry.

— Enactment of standby wage and price controls that could be used in the event of a sharp increase in the inflation rate.

Some proposals, such as one calling for the passage of "workable handgun control legislation," are bound to run into opposition and could either be left out of the platform or ignored if a Democratic administration does come to power next year.

One of the weakest sections of the proposal is what it terms "reform in the public sector" through selective overhauls of the federal bureaucracy to improve its performance, curtail its cost and make it more responsive to the needs of the people.

"We must eliminate dead weight, outmoded, inoperative, wasteful and inefficient programs," the document states but no where does it specify which programs would be ended and who among the federal government's 2.8 million workers would be discharged.

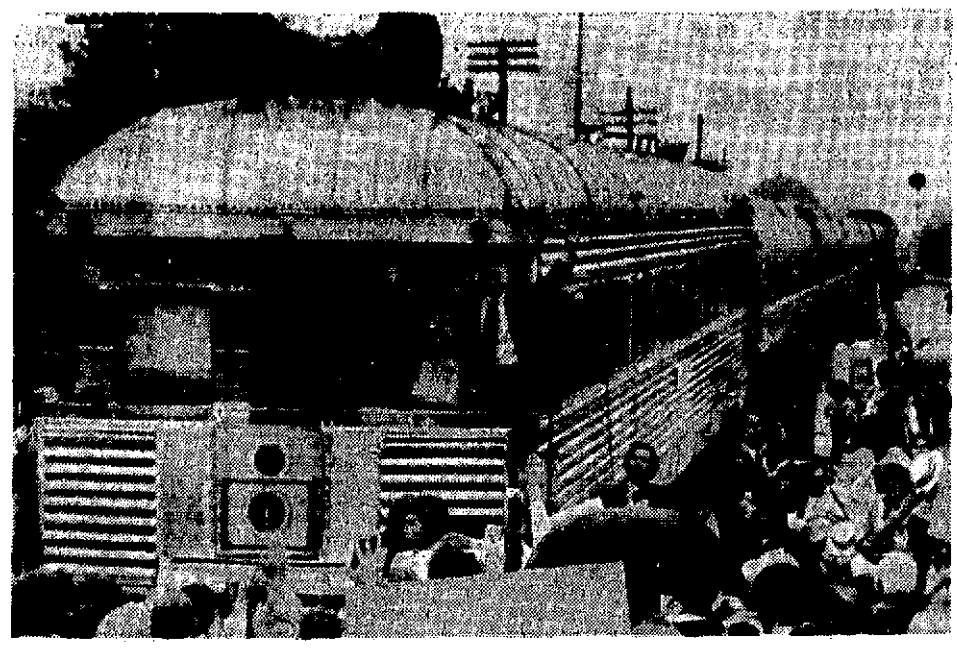

The recommendations run to 124 pages, of which 115 are devoted to domestic problems. But a section on foreign and defense policy does call for increasing efforts to control both nuclear and conventional arms, seeking the reduction in Europe of both American and Soviet armed forces and attempting to smooth out the on-again, off-again nature of detente.

Included with the proposal are three appendices that together form a partisan critique of the Nixon and Ford administrations which are accused of gross inefficiency, corruption and abuse of power.

These appendices contain scores of examples of what the Democrats consider to be Republican wrong doing and, in the language of the proposal, are "a veritable catalogue of malfeasance in office, bad policies, poor administration, improper and illegal actions, bad judgment and downright criminality."

The proposals were drafted by what has been called the "speaker's task force on the Democratic platform" which was assembled by Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., and placed under the direction of John E. Barriere, the executive director of the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee.

Yet the package will be formally presented to the Platform Committee on Tuesday by Majority Leader Thomas J. O'Neill, D-Mass., rather than Albert, another indication that Albert intends to retire at the end of this year. O'Neill is regarded as his probable successor.

DEPARTING ON whistle stop tour through the heartland of southern Michigan Saturday, President and Mrs. Ford wave to a crowd gathered at Flint, Mich., to greet the Chief Executive. Ford is locked in a head-to-head battle with Ronald Reagan in Tuesday's Michigan primary.

Reagan gains delegate support

"Now, (Secretary of State Henry) Kissinger has just returned from his African junket, having talked fluently about the creation of 'buffer stocks' of agricultural commodities — the sort of thing we have just gotten rid of domestically to get the government out of price fixing."

76 CAMPAIGN

It could not be learned how Reagan arrived at the $2 billion figure. Government spokesmen say the sales-loss figure cannot be determined.

Ford set out on the Michigan rails Friday — making the first whistle-stop presidential campaign tour since Harry Truman did it 28 years ago — in an effort to get his drive for election to a full term back on the track. He is trying to overtake Reagan in the race for convention delegates.

As the nine-car, bunting-festooned "Presidential Express" rolled across southern Michigan's farmland through a stubborn rain, Ford extended the same message at every station:

"I ask you to help me on Tuesday. We must win in Michigan."

The turnouts were large despite the weather, with an estimated crowd of 8,000 in Flint and 7,000 in Durand. Ford took time to jump off the train and shake hands.

Ford, who with his wife and entourage rode in a yellow-carpeted executive car, told reporters aboard the train he was optimistic about his chances Tuesday against Reagan in Michigan.

"I couldn't feel better," he said in one of the crowded press cars. "I think it's just great."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., whose flash-fire candidacy has brought him even with Carter in the race for Democratic delegates in Maryland, drew a crowd of thousands — mostly teen-agers — at a Friday night fund-raising rock concert near Baltimore. Brown, 38, pledged to bring a "new spirit" to politics."

Here is a look at other delegate-selection developments Saturday:

—In Virginia, Republicans in three congressional districts chose a total of nine national convention delegates Friday night and Saturday. Five were Reagan supporters, two were Ford supporters.

—In Louisiana, Republicans held three congressional-district caucuses to pick nine more national convention delegates. Reagan picked up eight of them and one was uncommitted.

—In Missouri, Reagan won 12 delegates and Ford took six as Republicans continued their selections.

—In New Mexico, Carter maintained an edge over Udall as Democrats chose their 18 national convention delegates. The former Georgia governor got eight delegates, while Udall got six.

—In Arizona, Udall picked up four additional delegates in his home state as Democrats completed selection of their national convention delegation. The 25 Arizona delegates consist of 19 pledged to Udall, five to Carter and one to Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

Reagan tax data analyzed

were specifically designed for their tax-avoidance potential.

In addition to his apparent complete avoidance of both federal and state income taxes in 1970, Reagan, who is assumed to file a joint tax return with his wife, appears to have paid only about $2,200 in federal income tax in 1971. This is about the same amount that a typical married couple with an income of $16,000 would have paid. The Reagans had an income in 1971 that exceeded $87,000.

In 1973, with an income of more than $110,000, they appear to have paid around $7,800 in federal income tax, or about what a typical couple with an income of $36,000 would have paid.

In 1972 and 1974, the Reagans appear to have paid a federal income tax that was only about half as large as that paid by typical taxpayers in their over-$100,000 tax bracket.

In 1975, the only year for which Reagan has disclosed his federal income tax payments, the $65,000 he paid on an adjusted gross income of $252,000 is about $20,000 less than the average tax paid by those at his income level.

It has been known for some time that he paid no California state income tax for 1970. That fact was disclosed in 1971 by a college radio station in California and confirmed by Reagan, who was then governor.

He declined to provide any details at that time or any explanation, other than a statement that he had suffered "business reverses" in 1970.

He continued to refuse to discuss his financial and tax affairs until February this year. Then, in an apparent response to prodding by Ford, he made an abbreviated disclosure covering the years 1970-1975. Last month, he made slightly more detailed disclosures for 1975.

The information that Reagan has released for the years preceding 1975 avoids disclosure of how little federal income tax he has been paying by lumping together in a single figure for each year his "total taxes paid," a figure that he said included federal and state income taxes, local property taxes, sales taxes and miscellaneous taxes.

RONALD REAGAN
On Campaign Trail
—AP Wirephoto

Records of the property taxes that he has paid on three pieces of expensive real estate that he owns in California are, however, available for public inspection.

By subtracting the property taxes he paid from the figures provided by Reagan on his "total taxes paid" and then making certain standard calculations, it is possible to estimate about what he must have paid in federal and state income taxes.

In 1970, Reagan paid $12,201 in property taxes. His financial statement of Feb. 25 said that his total taxes paid for that year were $12,536.

Thus the difference between his property tax and his total federal, state and local taxes was only $335, a figure that almost certainly represents state and city sales taxes.

It therefore appears that Reagan paid neither federal nor state income taxes for 1970.

In 1971, he paid $14,319 in property taxes. He said that his total tax payments for that year were $17,053. That leaves a total of $2,734 for federal and state income taxes, sales and miscellaneous taxes. The amount of federal income tax almost certainly could not have exceeded $2,200 and might have been less.

Similar calculations indicate that he paid, at most, $10,000 federal income tax in 1972 on an income of more than $116,000; $7,800 in 1973 on an income of more than $110,000, and $25,000 in 1974 on an income of more than $140,000.

All of these figures might be off slightly (but in a way that would make Reagan's estimated federal income tax payments even smaller) if he followed the practice of prepaying part of his California property tax, as many citizens do.

It is possible that he had considerably more income than he has indicated.

What Reagan has disclosed is his adjusted gross income, which does not necessarily include all of his real economic income, plus other proceeds that he calls "tax-exempt" income.

It is not clear what kinds of income are and are not included under the heading "tax-exempt income."

Questions concerning this matter were among those that Reagan, through Lake, the press secretary for Citizens for Reagan, refused to answer for the New York Times.

Lake said that the income and tax data that Reagan previously had made public "is all that he cares to submit to the press."

"The information is all derived from his federal tax returns and he feels it more than meets his obligation to the public," he added.

The heading "tax-exempt income" may cover only interest from municipal bonds. Reagan reported holding $200,000 worth of such bonds in his February financial statement, and the interest in 1975 on those bonds, which is exempt from both federal and California tax, would have been $8,980.

He reported $15,704 in tax-exempt income for 1975, however, and it is not certain whether this all represented interest on tax-exempt bonds.

His statements show that he had had almost $40,000 in tax-exempt income in each of three succeeding years, 1970, 1971 and 1972. In 1973, the amount rose to $43,000.

Sued doctor wins own suit against drug company

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A 1968 medical treatment that caused brain damage to a 7-year-old girl has resulted in an unusual jury finding in favor of a doctor who blamed a drug company.

A Superior Court jury ruled Friday that Astra Pharmaceutical Products is liable for harm to Dr. Gordon Runnels, who says he was forced to give up his Sacramento medical practice because of the incident.

The family of the girl, Kimberly Gerringer, already has collected a $1.3-million malpractice settlement, with Astra's insurance company paying $550,000, Runnels' insurance company $100,000, and others the rest.

RUNNELS SAID THE girl suffered permanent brain damage after he used an Astra-recommended procedure in treating her for a severely cut leg at a Sacramento hospital in September 1968.

He said he bound her leg, as the drug company recommended, and injected Xylocaine solution, an Astra product, into her ankle vein in an attempt to anesthetize the cut.

The anesthetic seeped through the binding and Miss Gerringer went into convulsions for 26 minutes, suffering an oxygen loss to her brain and permanent mental retardation, Runnels said.

The 10-2 jury vote, sufficient for a verdict in a civil case, followed six months of testimony. The jury returns Monday to consider Runnels' request for $6.55 million from Astra in damages to him.

Hearings on new state work rules set

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 50-cent minimum wage increase, rest facilities for men and women and a four-day work week provision highlight proposed revisions of State Industrial Welfare Commission regulations.

IWC Chairman Howard A. Carver said Sunday that the proposals cover household occupations and work standards for 14 industries and occupations in effect since 1968.

Carver said the new minimum wage would affect 1.6 million workers primarily in retail trade, eating and drinking establishments, hotels and motels, amusement and recreation and the apparel industry.

Also, new standard overtime provisions would require employers to pay premium wages after eight hours work in a single day and 40 hours in a single week. These would apply for the first time to agricultural workers, including field workers.

The proposals would allow a 40-hour, four-day week with overtime required for any additional days worked in the week. But 10-hour days must be consecutive and by mutual consent of employer and employe.

Public hearings on the proposals will be held in Fresno June 7-8, Los Angeles June 9-11 and San Francisco June 15-17. Final regulations should be in force by Sept. 6.

The proposals would lift the minimum wage from $2 to $2.50 per hour, with a special rate of $2.15 an hour for "learners and minors," those under 18. The federal minimum wage, now $2.20 in some categories and $2.30 in others, will become a uniform $2.30 Jan. 1.

Employers would be required to provide rest facilities separate from toilet facilities, a provision previously only applied to women.

Men would be covered for the first time under provisions compelling employers to provide a rest period of 10 minutes for each four hours worked, a meal period of 30 minutes or more when an employe works more than five hours, seats at or adjacent to work stations, elevator or similar service for workers on the fourth floor above or below ground level, and all equipment and uniforms required for the job.

Rather than specifiying weights for lifting regulations, the commission proposed, "No employe shall be required to lift, push or carry any object which is beyond the individual employe's capability."

The proposals also disallow deductions from pay for cash shortages or breakage unless employe dishonesty or integrity is involved.

The IWC deleted a section of its 1968 work orders which permitted employers to apply workers' tips or gratuities toward the minimum wage. This was done after the Legislature declared such earnings the sole property of employes.

Carter said the proposed regulations are based to a large extent on recommendations by labor and management representatives on wage boards.

Under those covering household employes, a live-in worker would have at least 12 consecutive hours free of duty each day and and the total number of work hours could not exceed 12 hours a day. Overtime would be time-and-a-half.

Non-live-in household employes would receive time-and-a-half pay for all hours exceeding a 40-hour week or an eight-hour day.

In the agricultural orders, the commission proposes that workers get double pay for all hours worked in excess of 12 in one day.

The manufacturing order states, "If a meal period occurs on a shift beginning or ending at or between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m., facilities shall be available for securing hot food or drink or for heating food or drink," and a sheltered place must be provided for eating.

The proposals also call for a $2.50 daily payment in addition to the minimum wage if the employe works a split shift in manufacturing.

Exempted from some or all of the provisions of the proposed orders are persons employed in administrative, executive or professional capacities; federal, state or local government; student nurses; outside salespersons; personal attendants and babysitters; professional actors and actresses and regularly indentured apprentices.

Tornadoes, heavy rains hit Carolinas; four left dead

Associated Press

A violent spring storm, triggering tornadoes and torrential rains, swept across the Carolinas on Saturday, killing four persons, including three children and injuring at least eight others.

Three of the dead were children killed in Pembroke, N.C., when a tornado overturned their family's mobile home.

The children's mother, Molly Locklear, 29, was reported in critical condition at a hospital, and another child, Bobbie Gail Locklear, 7, was in satisfactory condition.

A hospital spokesman identified the dead children as Francis Locklear, 5, Mickey Locklear, 9, and Anna Locklear, 15 months.

Several twisters touched down in South Carolina where one death was reported killed. Floyd Durham, 25, of Timmonsville died of third-degree burns after he was electrocuted by a fallen power line Saturday.

The storm also forced the evacuation of people along the flood-swollen Pigeon River in the mountains in the western part of North Carolina.

Robeson County authorities in North Carolina said two other persons from the Pembroke area were admitted to the hospital shortly after the tornado struck, but no other details were available.

Six other persons were injured when a tornado hit Troy in central North Carolina.

Sex Who's Who is no guide for the layman

By LYNNE OLSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring there are too many amateurs offering sex advice, a national organization has published a consumer guide to certified sex therapists and educators.

The $3 guide, issued by the American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists — AASECT — is a state-by-state listing of persons in the United States, Canada and abroad who have been certified under AASECT guidelines.

It was published in response to a huge number of requests from the public for help in choosing qualified counselors and steering clear of quacks and amateurs, says Dr. Patricia Schiller, AASECT executive director.

"The American people seem to be suddenly plagued with sex problems," the association has stated. "As the demand grew, the supply grew to meet it. "In recent years, the qualified and unqualified alike have moved into the field, with a variety of motives ranging from human compassion to cupidity.

"Their credentials have ranged from long years of rigorous professional training to a smattering of superficial information picked up in a weekend crash course ... This is no field for the well-meaning but incompetent amateur."

Those listed in the "National Register of Certified Sex Educators and Sex Therapists" are definitely not beginners.

To be certified, educators had to have a bachelor's or master's degree, plus three years of experience in sex education — or a doctorate plus two years. At least 1,000 hours of clinical experience and a minimum of a master's degree or equivalent were mandatory for therapists.

"A good number of people, including doctors, have been turned down because they didn't meet the criteria," Dr. Schiller says.

The guide lists 184 therapists, including the Masters-Johnson team in St. Louis, and 492 sex educators, including prominent psychologist Albert Ellis of New York.

In the case of each educator, the booklet tells the population he educates (children, adolescents or adults) and the environment in which the education takes place (college, church, clinic, hospital and the like.)

For therapists, the guide gives the method of treatment used and the groups treated by each — adults, teen-agers, couples, engaged or divorced people, homosexuals, the aged or the handicapped.

Anyone looking for a little hanky panky under the guise of therapy will be disappointed. The educators and therapists listed have agreed to an ethical code which bans nudity and body contact between patient and therapist for the purpose of erotic stimulation.

"If a therapist says he has to have sexual intercourse with a patient in order to help, he's totally wrong," Dr. Schiller says. "You advise the patient's partner to do what should be done. You don't do it yourself."

The director, who is also an assistant professor at the Howard University College of Medicine, adds that there is no law to stop a person from advertising himself as a sex therapist, despite lack of credentials.

Recent best sellers on sex and "the simplistic approach used in professional journals and books" explaining how to get more enjoyment from sex, have inspired many people to go into the sex-counseling business with no special training, Dr. Schiller says.

"They think they can do it by reading a couple of books and going to a couple of workshops," she says. "But they know, or think they know, only about physical capacities. They don't understand the dynamics of interpersonal relationships, which is the most important."

Over new life forms

Dilemma for biologists

New York Times Service

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Biologists, who have recently discovered the potentially revolutionary technique for creating new forms of life, believe they have acquired such a fundamental power that they face ethical dilemmas comparable to those of nuclear physicists who, a generation ago, learned to manipulate the power of the atom.

The new techniques make it possible to select genes from one organism and transplant them into the chromosomes of another. Most of the researchers use bacteria as the recipient species and suggest such benefits as new bacterial strains that could be grown in vats to produce such medically needed substances as insulin or growth hormone or safer antibiotics.

The scientific debate over the wisdom of such research has been under way for three years, and the National Institutes of Health is expected to promulgate guidelines soon for the containment of such research to prevent bacterial escapes. But it appears that only one major academic research center, the University of Michigan, has considered the pros and cons at its highest administrative levels.

Over the last few months, the university's president, Robben Fleming, and its Board of Regents have conducted symposiums and hearings and appointed faculty study committees to evaluate whether the school should proceed with such research.

The controversy goes to the heart of one of the most fundamental issues confronting science in a free society — how to balance the right to free scientific inquiry with the need for scientific responsibility to humanity at large.

One key difference in the current situation is that, unlike the early atomic energy debates, the genetics questions are being discussed publicly.

"This is a significant issue and our procedures have always been to give the fullest possible airings to matters like this," Dr. Fleming said. "We have a highly articulate group here that is opposed to this research, and we feel they should be heard."

Proponents of the research also suggest that it could enable agricultural crops to generate their own fertilizer, vastly increasing the world's food supply. Some even talk of modifying the normal bacteria inhabiting the mouth so that they do not produce tooth decay.

Critics warn, however, that the research could accidentally produce new microbes that secrete dangerous toxins or that cause new disease in people, animals or plants. They say that unless stringent precautions are taken, such microbes might escape from the laboratory, causing epidemics or disrupting ecological balances.

World fears 'limit future of A-power'

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Nuclear power poses such a threat to safety, peace, civil liberties and sound economy that it may never develop into the worldwide energy source once envisioned, according to the assessment of a private study group.

Worldwatch Institute, a Washington-based research organization, Saturday released a study that posed a generally pessimistic picture of nuclear power.

Denis Hayes, author of the report, said worldwide sentiment against nuclear power is growing, adding, "the world is already beginning to rethink the consequences of a future based on nuclear energy."

Hayes told a news conference he was largely indifferent about nuclear power when he began the study. He said he has concluded conservation and development of such alternative energy sources as wind and solar power are the best solutions for world energy needs.

HAYES SAID the spread of nuclear power and proliferation of nuclear weapons are inseparably linked. Nuclear material for peaceful power can be diverted for bombs because of inadequate controls, he said, noting that India had done just that.

At the end of 1975, there were 158 commercial reactors in 21 countries, and many more planned or under construction, the study said.

"Widespread weapons proliferation is sure to follow on the heels of commercial nuclear power facilities," Hayes said. "With each additional finger on the nuclear trigger, the chances of an accidental or intentional nuclear war grows greater."

A shortage of uranium fuel will increase costs and push the move toward planned plutonium-powered reactors, the report said. Plutonium, a radioactive byproduct of uranium power, has been proposed as a fuel produced by so-called breeder reactor to power other reactors.

If nuclear development follows original plans, Hayes said, 440 million pounds of plutonium would be produced by the year 2020. The highly toxic substance could be used to make bombs not only by governments but also by terrorists.

"THIEVERY INSIDE plants, or external raids, could put plutonium in the hands of terrorists," Hayes said.

In order to counter terrorists, governments will have to increase police measures. Hayes said this is likely to lead to more authoritarian societies in which civil liberties are violated in the name of security.

Hayes said nuclear power costs more than most figures indicate because many true costs are hidden by so much government-sponsored research and investment.

Nuclear power will not be economical for wealthier industrial nations, he said, let alone developing countries with little capital.

Hayes said the debate over nuclear power has been dominated by technical issues, but in the future more of the debate will center on values and ethics.

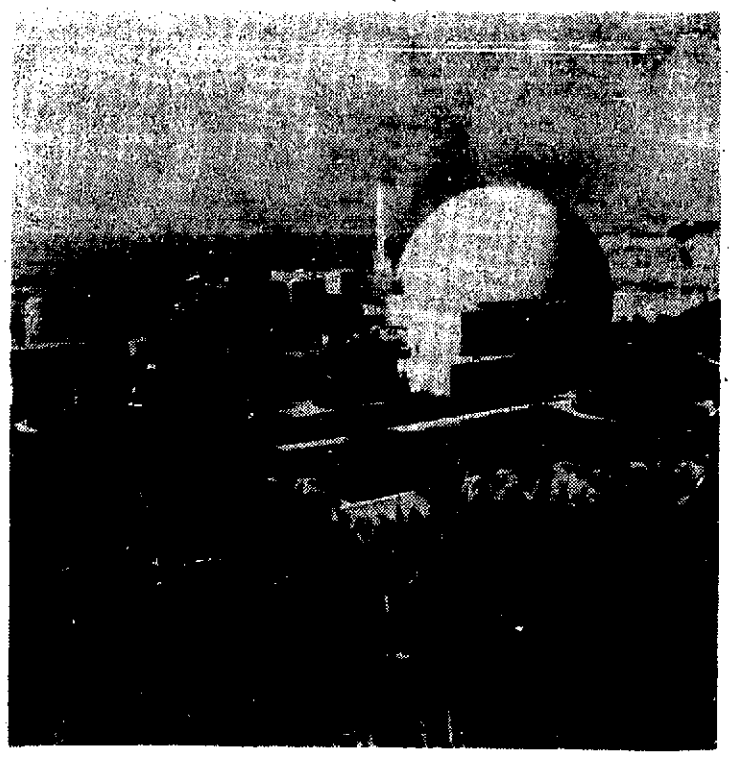

"The most important decisions to be made are political, and will be made on the basis of what kind of world people want to live in," he concluded.

The Worldwatch Institute is a private, nonprofit research organization whose aim is trying to anticipate global problems and social trends.

Orville L. Freeman, former secretary of agriculture under the late President John F. Kennedy and current president of Business International Corp., is chairman of the board.

Lester R. Brown, an author and former senior fellow of the Overseas Development Council, is president of the institute.

According to an institute booklet, its major financial support comes from the Rockefeller Brothers Fund. Other funding sources, it says, are the Federal Energy Administration, the Charles F. Kettering Foundation and the United Nations Environment Program.

SAN ONOFRE POWER STATION illustrates the best use of nuclear energy, but a private study group says the potential for conversion to weaponry poses a major threat as nuclear knowledge becomes more widespread.

U.S. 'facing bondage' over foreign oil ties

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe said Saturday that America faces "political and economic bondage" if it continues to depend on foreign oil sources.

"We are now importing between 40 and 45 per cent of our oil and this could reach 60 per cent in the 1980s," Kleppe said. "We are threatened with a political and economic bondage not unlike that which touched off the American Revolution some two centuries ago."

The secretary delivered the warning in a prepared speech at the commencement exercises of Assumption College.

Despite the worsening energy crisis, the government, industry, the academic community and the press have failed to communicate to the public the extent of its severity, Kleppe said.

With the 1973 Arab oil crisis now a fading memory, "Americans either do not believe there is an energy crisis or choose to ignore it," he added.

The secretary defended against environmentalists' complaints his decisions to lease Outer Continental Shelf — OCS — regions off the West Coast and the Gulf of Mexico and to allow federal coal easing.

"These outer continental shelf areas represent new frontiers which promise substantial supplies of gas and oil ..." Kleppe said. "We share the great concern over the environmental impact of these OCS developments.

"But we are convinced that the OCS wells are much less detrimental to the environment than the inevitable oil spills which occur when petroleum is imported by the tanker."

But all this energy planning for the future, Kleppe conceded, "is based on what might be best described as educated guesses. We have techniques for estimating the quantities of energy resources remaining in the world, but we cannot say for certain they will be found or that when found will be usable."

Alaska pipe facing costly hassle

By TAD BARTIMUS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—Completion of the $7 billion trans-Alaska pipeline could be delayed for an undetermined period because state and federal overseers disagree with pipeline builders on the quality of about 1,700 steel pipe welds already installed.

The varying interpretations of pipe welds are contained in a $4.5 million audit of the 35,600 x-rays, or radiographs, of welds made to date on the pipeline project. The audit was conducted by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the consortium formed by eight major oil companies building the pipeline.

A summary of the audit results were obtained Friday by the Associated Press.

State officials in Juneau said if the project's completion is delayed three or four months beyond its scheduled target date of July 1977, Alaska has enough money in its treasury to meet the cost of running the government "but beyond that there will be some problems."

Larry Eppenbach, deputy commissioner of revenue,said during the first year of pipeline production, at 1.2 million barrels per day, Alaska stands to receive $520 million in severance taxes and royalties. The $900 million it received from the 1969 Prudhoe Bay lease sale already has been spent.

Further, oil company officials have said in the past that 85 per cent of the money used to build the pipeline is borrowed, and debt service on that money will amount to more than $1 billion.

Effenbach said that if, for example, the pipeline were delayed for a year, it could add substantially to that interest figure.

Sources who asked not to be identified told the Associated Press Friday a delay of several months could occur on the pipeline construction portion of the project if Alyeska is ordered by the Interior Department to dig up some disputed steel pipe welds already buried at river crossings along the pipeline route.

The finished tube will stretch 800 miles from Prudhoe Bay on the Arctic Coast to Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska. The 48-inch-wide pipeline is more than one-half installed. Completion is due by December 31.

Robert Miller, a spokesman for Alyeska, said of the audit Friday that "different interpretations can be placed on the (pipeline weld) radiographs. We have our interpretations and undoubtably the federal government inspectors will have their interpretations. There will be joint discussions held as often as necessary to resolve whatever interpretive differences may result."

Miller emphasized that in Alyeska's opinion, "we do not anticipate any delay in our schedule for completion of the pipeline ... the radiograph audit did not reveal any deficiencies which cannot be corrected without affecting the schedule. The final decision, however, is up to the federal government."

Vietnam war history begun

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—The Pentagon has begun a study, coordinated by former South Vietnamese generals, of the final two years of the Vietnam war.

The purpose of the study, according to U.S. Army Col. Paul Palmer, deputy commander of the Pentagon's Center for Military History, is to view the war through Vietnamese eyes and to look at the American effort from a Vietnamese perspective.

He denied that the study was an attempt to determine what forces led to the U.S. defeat in Vietnam. However, a U.S. Army officer familiar with the project said that the study could serve such a purpose.

The study will draw on knowledge of Vietnamese refugees who have settled in the United States. "We feel it is very important to know their feelings on things," said Palmer. "And knowing them will be good for our historians."

According to Palmer, the Pentagon has contracted with a defense research group called General Research Corp. to carry out the project. General Research of Sterling, Va., has a "roughly $250,000 contract" for the first year of the study, which began in March, said Palmer.

Palmer says the study could run three or more years. He said it would initially cover strictly military aspects of the war, but it could be expanded into other areas such as the U.S. pacification program.

He said that when the project is completed future American military officers can benefit from it by studying in military service schools the way in which American and Vietnamese military units worked together in battle.

In all, according to Palmer, the Pentagon plans to study 14 topics. They include logistics, the U.S. adviser system and pacification among others.

For Moslem-unity talks

Arafat invited to Syria

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The Islamic foreign ministers conference called Saturday for the expulsion of Israel from the United Nations. It also announced the creation of a $50 million fund to counter Israeli rule in occupied Arab territory. The 42-nation conference passed a resolution condemning Zionism as a "colonialist, expansionist, racist and imperialist doctrine," according to a communique issued at the end of the meeting.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian President Hafez Assad Saturday invited Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat to travel to Damascus for talks to try to avert a conflict between Syria and Lebanon's Moslem alliance.

The split between Syrian forces on one side and Moslem leftists and most Palestinian guerrillas on the other threatened to add another front to Lebanon's continuing Christian-Moslem civil war. However, one Palestinian unit, the Syrian-controlled Saiqa group, continued trying to stop attacks on Christian positions by the leftist alliance.

A spokesman for Arafat said he had not yet answered Assad's invitation.

Fighters on all sides ignored a new cease-fire call. A police spokesman said 68 persons were killed in the fighting Saturday.

"Skirmishes are continuing along all front lines. No one is respecting the cease-fire agreement," said a spokesman for the right-wing Phalange Party, which fields the largest Christian private army.

Christians were battling Moslem leftist forces along the front line dividing Beirut and around the edges of the 800-square mile Christian-held enclave north of the capital.

The latest of some three-dozen cease-fires in the 13-month war which has taken more than 18,500 lives was called by Premier Rashid Karami for midnight Friday.

A spokesman for the military coordination committee of Lebanese, Palestinian and Syrian officers which had arranged the cease-fire said it "hardly lasted 15 minutes."

Tension escalated as Syrian forces tried to control the military activities of the coalition of Moslem leftists and Palestinian guerrillas.

SAIQA issued a statement attacking the Lebanese Moslem fighters and those Palestinians supporting them as "terrorists."

In the Moslem-controlled sector of Beirut the leftists clashed several times with Saiqa forces, reportedly including Syrian troops in Saiqa uniforms.

But an immediate major confrontation appeared to have been averted in the northern port of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, when Palestinian troops of the Palestine Liberation Army obeyed an Arafat order to pull out of a Syrian-ordered crackdown on Lebanese Moslem leftists.

THE Palestine Liberation Army is nominally under the command of Arafat in his role as chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization, but its units are armed and equipped largely in Syria.

Arafat and other Palestinian leaders in Lebanon fear coming under the thumb of Syria and losing the freedom of action they have enjoyed in Lebanon.

At a rally supporting the Palestinian statehood movement, Moslem leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt delivered a thinly disguised attack on the Syrian president. He said a plot being carried out against leftist and Palestinian forces in Lebanon "was dressed as an Arab revolutionary but has an American-Zionist personality."

Soviet secret police arrest watchdog leader

New York Times Service

MOSCOW — Soviet authorities began cracking down Saturday on a dissident watchdog group formed three days ago to monitor the Soviet Union's compliance with the human rights provisions of the Helsinki declaration.

Yuri Orlov, the leader of the group, was picked up by three plainclothesmen and driven off for questioning as he walked along a street in southwest Moscow Saturday with another group member, Mikhail Bernshtam. Orlov, a physicist unemployed because of his dissident activities, was released after an hour of interrogation.

A few hours later, Tass, the official press agency, took the unusual step of confirming that Orlov had been picked up by the police and "officially warned of the inadmissibility of his anti-law actions" in connection with the new group.

Tass, which rarely acknowledges dissident activities, said that the warning was intended "to cut short Orlov's provocative activity as well as to prevent the perpetration by Orlov and persons connected with him of actions punishable by law."

The speed of the reaction by authorities underscored the Soviet Union's continuing sensitivity on the human rights issue, particularly following criticism in the West that it has not lived up to the minimum standards set on humanitarian issues by the 35-nation European Security Conference that would up last summer at Helsinki.

The Kremlin has denounced Western efforts to monitor Soviet compliance as interference in Soviet internal affairs. It has also responded by accusing the West in turn of violating the human rights of its citizens.

However, the prospect of having Soviet citizens, even dissidents, watch its actions in a formal manner poses a more awkward problem for Moscow. Saturday's incident suggested that authorities planned to head off such a threat by treating it purely as anti-Soviet activity, which is a criminal offense under Soviet law.

Orlov told reporters after his release that security officers had called the new group illegal and warned that legal action would be brought if its "crude activities" continued.

Tass asserted that "it is difficult to qualify Orlov's actions in any other way than an attempt to question in the eyes of the international public the sincerity of the Soviet Union's efforts to undeviatingly implement the international obligations.

Meatless days hit cafes in Moscow

New York Times Service

MOSCOW — A campaign launched this month to save meat by having "meatless Thursdays" in Moscow cafes is pushed by authorities as intended to improve the variety of the Russian diet.

The program replaced meat with fish and other dishes on the local menus. The campaign does not include restaurants serving foreign tourists, who have been unaware of the lack of meat elsewhere.

"This will help improve the food pattern of Muscovites," Nikolai Zavyalov, who heads the city's board of public catering enterprises, was quoted as saying by the official Tass news agency Friday. Zavyalov said nutritional experts had approved the idea.

Though Soviet authorities have refused to admit it, the program seems aimed at conserving meat inventories, which have been running low in Moscow shops as well as in some provincial cities.

The extent of the shortage is not known. But it was reported earlier that Soviet meat production had dropped 11 per cent in the first three months of 1976.

Expected violence fails to break out on West Bank

NABLUS, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Scattered Palestinian unrest tested a mass Israeli security force on the West Bank Saturday, but serious violence failed to materialize on the anniversary of Israeli statehood.

The military command said troops in Jenin shot a 16-year-old Arab boy in the leg after he failed to obey orders to return home under a curfew.

No major rioting was reported in the West Bank or Israel. The statehood anniversary date recognized by non-Israelis has been a favorite target for past Arab violence. Israelis themselves observe the anniversary according to the Hebrew calender, which this year put it on May 5.

The military government put a curfew on East Jenin and the old quarter of Nablus after morning skirmishes with youths throwing stones. The curfew on Jenin was lifted by noon.

ARMORED cars rumbled through the streets of West Bank trouble centers and Israeli soldiers patrolled in groups, armed with assault guns, riot batons and teargas.

Troops pried open Arab shop doors in at least four West Bank towns, preempting a planned merchant strike against Israeli rule.

Units of Israel's paramilitary border police were pulled off their frontier outposts as an added security measure.

Troops also guarded the old city of Jerusalem, the site of frequent Arab outbreaks, from rooftop vantage points overlooking throngs of tourists.

The heavy precautions coincided with the continuing United Nations Security Council debate over the West Bank, where Palestinian demonstrations have left seven Arabs dead, and Israeli settlement policies are in dispute.

Cuban troops suffer heavy losses in Angola

LONDON (AP) — Cuban troops are suffering heavy casualties from guerrilla warfare in Angola three months after the Soviet-backed Popular Movement proclaimed victory over two pro-Western factions, the Sunday Telegraph claims.

The paper, without naming sources for its report, said some 1,500 Cuban soldiers have been killed in the "secret war" in the past few weeks.

The corpses are in a refrigerated ship anchored off Pointe Noire in the neighboring Congo, "presumably awaiting shipment back to Cuba for burial," the Telegram said.

Tons of detergents dumped on oil spill

MERA, Spain (AP) — Some 200 tons of detergent have been used to try to clean up an oil spill along 60 miles of the northwest Spanish coast, but fishermen say any shellfish that survive will probably taste of petroleum.

Oil continued to wash ashore Saturday, blackening the clam, mussel and oyster boats. It was the second time in six years that this area, famous for its seafood, has been hit by a large oil spill.

Officials said they have stopped the oil leaking from the wreck of the Spanish tanker Urquiola, half-sunk on a reef at the mouth of the La Coruna harbor 10 miles away. Estimates of the amount of oil poured into the sea since the ship went down Wednesday range from 35,000 barrels to more than 200,000.

A government tourism official told newsmen the situation was not as serious as first feared. The official said that if the estimated 520,000 barrels of oil believed still inside the tanker could be kept out of the sea, the beaches around La Coruna would be clean within one month.

Biologists fear the oil spill and the detergents may have destroyed much of the sea life in the area. They said fish could swim ahead of the oil as it spread, but that crustaceans and small marine life would be contaminated and killed.

Oceanography experts said the oil could be carried by gulf currents as far as the Caribbean in the next few months.

In 1970, a Norwegian tanker spilled oil at the La Coruna port entrance. It took four years for the clams to come back.

"If Mera is cleaned up, it will be God that does it," said one of the village's 50 fishermen. "We will need tides and tides and tides."

La Coruna Mayor Lieano Flores asked the government Friday to declare the spill a disaster and provide aid to the 5,000 fishermen in the area.

Officials Friday began questioning the 37 crewmen of the Urquiola, which was carrying Persian Gulf crude to a local refinery, to find out why it strayed from the safe channel and onto the reef.

The captain, Francisco Eduardo Rodriquez, died in the accident. The last to leave the ship, his oil-covered body was washed ashore Friday.

Historian Samuel Eliot Morison dies at 88

By GUY DARST
Associated Press

BOSTON — Samuel Eliot Morison, chronicler of his state, his Navy, his country and his college, in histories characterized by elegant prose, died Saturday. He was 88.

Morison died at Massachusetts General Hospital of a stroke he suffered May 1 at his home on Beacon Hill, the house where he was born.

Twice winner of the Bancroft Prize in history and the Pulitzer Prize for biography, Morison two years ago completed — to rave reviews — the two-volume work he yearned all his life to do: "The European Discovery of America."

HIS textbook, "The Growth of the American Republic," written with Prof. Henry Steele Commager of Amherst College, was read by generations of high school and college students and was in print 46 years after the first edition. In the 1950s, it sold 50,000 copies a year.

A writer of great productivity who produced more than 50 books, Morison wrote the 15-volume official and monumental "History of U.S. Naval Operations in World War II" and the four-volume "Tercentennial History of Harvard University."

He still held the Harvard title "historian on the 300th anniversary of Harvard College." He retired as a Harvard professor in 1955, but he still had an office there.

He won the Bancroft Prize for the third volume of his war history and for the first volume, "The Northern Voyages," of the European discovery work.

Pulitzer Prizes were awarded to him for "Admiral of the Ocean Sea," a biography of Christopher Columbus, and "John Paul Jones: A Sailor's Biography."

Sailing and the sea were his lifelong passion and often were reflected in Morison's choice of subject — Columbus, Jones, Matthew Perry, Samuel de Champlain, the Navy, the maritime history of Massachusetts.

A NO-NONSENSE son of one of Boston's famous families, Morison was a historian who had to see for himself. He served on 11 ships in World War II, seeing combat several times.

For his Columbus and European discovery works, he retraced the sea routes of his subjects. Though sometimes in later years he flew part of the way, he was always careful to duplicate his subject's departures and landfalls.

His second wife, the former Priscilla Barton, accompanied him on many voyages, even on the 40,000-mile round-the-world retracing of Magellan's voyage while she was dying.

Mrs. Morison, who died in 1973, was the subject of the dedication that always appeared in Morison's later books: "To the lady from Baltimore." In recent years, they had lived in Northeast Harbor, Maine, as well as in Boston.

His first wife died in 1945.

Another historian of America, Bernard Bailyn of Harvard, remarked recently on Morison's insistence on literally covering the ground — or water.

"For my judgment, he was the greatest narrative historian this country ever produced," Bailyn said.

"His personalization of his work made him a better writer than the great 19th century historians such as MacCaulay, Treveleyan, Parkman and Bancroft."

At Oxford University Press in New York, Executive Editor Sheldon Meyer recalled Morison: "He was the ultimate professional."

Morison, he said, drafted his manuscripts four or five times in longhand before getting them typed and setting to work on them with his editors.

"He had no truck for nonsense of any kind. He is the natural heir to Parkman and the greatest historian of that kind since Parkman," Meyer said.

Francis Parkman, historian of the settling of the American West, died in 1893.

Morison himself asked a rhetorical question of great explorers in a 1974 interview with Boston Magazine.

"Why did they do it? Why did they risk it? Why did they keep going back?"

And he answered his own question after drawing a long breath: "I wish I knew."

A friend, poet Archibald Macleish, wrote in the city of Boston's official 1975 Bicentennial poem:

"... AND YOU, our Yankee Admiral of the Ocean Sea,

"come too, come walk with me.

"You know, none better how the Bay wind blows

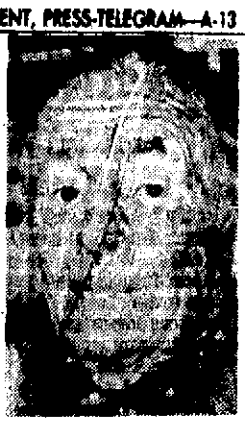

"fierce in the soul as in the streets its ocean snow ..."

Macleish said in a recent interview, "I think he was a great man. If any New Englander ever knew the depth of the New England soul, he did."

Funeral services are scheduled for 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Church of the Advent in Boston.

Morison is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Edward Spingarn of Washington, D.C., Mrs. H. Brooks Beck of Canton, Mass., and Catharine Cooper-Morison of London, England, and eight grandchildren.

A son, Peter G. Morison, died in March 1969.

Groom killed in car crash

ALEXANDRIA, Neb. (AP) — A bridegroom and two members of the wedding party were among those killed in a two-car head-on crash early Saturday as they returned from a bachelor party near here.

Dead were Dennis Cecrle, 21, of Daykin, the groom; Lloyd Willis Niederklein, 23, of Lincoln, brother of the bride; Larry W. Meeske, 28, of Lincoln, brother-in-law of the bride, and James D. Strain, 22, of Alexandria, driver of the second car.

Four other persons were injured.

Six solons hit for consumer apathy

WASHINGTON (AP) Three senators and three congressmen "failed to cast a single vote in the interest of consumers" during a recent 1½-year period, a lobbying group affiliated with Ralph Nader said Saturday.

Missing

My brothers and I are trying to learn the whereabouts of another brother. We think he was arrested about 16 to 18 months ago. We don't know the charge. He has a history of drug abuse and isn't completely mentally competent. Last December we heard he was in prison in Chino, but when my brothers went there they found someone else with a similar name. We want to know where he is, regardless of his legal status. He's our brother, and we care for him. Please help us. N.M., Long Beach.

Your brother has been in prison at the California Men's Colony at San Luis Obispo since last September and has a pending parole date of Oct. 26. We have given you his prison number and mailing address. Anyone seeking addresses of any inmate in the California state prison system can contact the Information Office, State Department of Corrections, 714 P St., Sacramento, Calif. 95814, (916) 445-4950. Give them the inmate's full name and date of birth. Most prisoners in a jail in Los Angeles County are listed with the sheriff's Inmate Location and Booking Information Office at 680-9600. Inmates in federal prisons are listed with the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, 320 First St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20534, Attention Inmate Locator. A person who writes them should give his full name, address, phone number, association with the prisoner, the prisoner's full name, possible aliases, date of birth and possible offenses. The prisoner's address and number will be mailed to the letter writer.

We are a group of senior citizens on fixed incomes, and we'd like to know if there are any food-buying clubs in Long Beach. J.C., Long Beach.

The Alternative Market, 702 Cedar Ave., is a food-buying cooperative whose members save on the cost of food by buying it in large quantities at wholesale prices. The food is purchased at wholesale outlets in Los Angeles and sold to members Thursdays from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m., Fridays from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from noon to 5 p.m. The variety of food is limited, but includes fresh produce, dairy products, bread, chicken and fish. To join, you can attend one of the distribution sessions. A $10 membership fee per family is required, and members must donate at least three hours a week to the co-op because all responsibilities are shared on a rotating basis. For more information, you can call 432-9502.

Thrifty

I'm interested in investing my money in the certificates of deposit offered by certain thrift and loan associations. How safe are such investments? M.C., Paramount.

Unlike virtually all bank and savings and loan accounts, deposits with thrift and loan associations, which basically are finance companies, are not federally insured, although they are insured by a private company. By state law thrift and loan companies must belong to the Thrift Guaranty Corp. of California, a private, nongovernment association. This corporation collects a fee from each member company to insure its accounts up to $10,000 each, according to a spokesman for the California Department of Corporations, which regulates such firms. Because the thrift and loan industry is self-insured, the spokesman said some investors believe there may be more risk involved than with banks and savings and loan associations. For this reason, state law prohibits such firms from using the term "savings" in their advertisements; they must refer to depositors' accounts as investments. Generally, thrift and loans pay slightly higher interest.

Unsnarl

A year ago you helped me straighten out a problem with my Medi-Cal stickers. I need your help again. The stickers for my daughter and me are supposed to be mailed to us each month, but for a long time I have had to go down to the Department of Public Social Services office monthly to pick them up. I don't have a car, and it is a hardship for me to go there. My daughter is 10 and has a heart condition, and I need the stickers for her, especially in case of an emergency. C.S., Los Angeles.

The problem should be straightened out now. We contacted DPSS' public relations office for you, and hours later we were informed that your Medi-Cal stickers had been mailed to the prepaid health plan group you joined some time ago and the ones you picked up each month weren't supposed to be given to you. Your social worker has contacted you and explained the mixup, and, according to the public relations office, the social worker will help you cancel your unwanted membership in the health plan group. Then, in about four to six weeks, you should start getting your stickers in the mail.

Rockefeller sees victory for Ford

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, completing a Bicentennial visit under tight security, reaffirmed his support Saturday for President Ford and said he was confident that Ford would win the Republican presidential nomination.

"I think he will be nominated and will go on to victory," Rockefeller told reporters before boarding Air Force II for the return to New York.

Earlier, hundreds of German police sealed off St. Paul's Church in downtown Frankfurt, where Rockefeller and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt addressed 1,000 guests at the German celebration of the American Bicentennial.

Authorities feared that leftists would attempt to disrupt the event, which coincided with the funeral in West Berlin of anarchist leader Ulrike Meinhof.

Demonstrations were banned in Frankfurt, and only a few nonviolent protesters were seen outside the church.

In a 35-minute speech, Rockefeller appealed to the Western allies to beef up naval power because of Soviet naval threats.

"We are being challenged by the worldwide growth of the Soviet Union's naval power — in ships, submarines, in missiles and in technology," the vice president warned.

He said the time was at hand "to greatly accelerate the rebuilding of the free-world naval power" to counter the Soviets.

Concorde due as bid for ban opens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversial Concorde supersonic passenger jet will make its first trip in two years to the United States on Monday when French President Giscard d'Estaing begins a six-day visit.

The flight will come only two days before a federal appeals court begins hearing arguments aimed at banning the fast but noisy aircraft from landing in scheduled service at two U.S. airports. It will come only seven days before the Concorde is to begin regularly scheduled flights into Washington's Dulles International Airport.

Giscard d'Estaing is to travel on the Concorde to Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, the same airport that President Ford uses for his travels aboard Air Force One.

THE PLANE, which can fly at nearly 1,400 miles per hour, also will be used for the French president's trip from Washington to Houston and from New Orleans to the Caribbean Island of Guadeloupe and to Paris, the State Department said.

Giscard d'Estaing will use conventional subsonic jets from President Ford's fleet for trips from Washington to Philadelphia and to Yorktown, Va., and for the trip from Houston to Lafayette, La. and New Orleans.

Although the Concorde wil be operated above the speed of sound during the Atlantic crossings, the plane will be flown subsonically across the United States. Federal law prohibits supersonic flights by commercial aircraft over the 48 contiguous states.

The Concorde has been certified as airworthy and already is operating commercially between London and the Persian Gulf nation of Bahrain and between Paris and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Clouds and haze forecast today

Early-morning low clouds with hazy afternoon sunshine are forecast for the Long Beach area today.

The National Weather Service forecast for today and Monday is for warmer days and cooler nights, with highs in the upper 70s and overnight lows in the upper 50s.

The high temperature at Long Beach Airport Saturday was 70, while the low Saturday morning was 61.

Bomb kills three Irish policemen

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A booby-trap bomb believed set by Irish Republican Army guerrillas killed three police officers and badly wounded a fourth Saturday, authorities reported.

They said it was the highest police casualty toll in a single incident since sectarian warfare erupted in this British province in 1969.

Another policeman and five civilians were killed in Saturdan night bombings and gunfire.

Portugal shuts doors on journalist's trial

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The trial of a journalist accused of slandering Portugal's president has been closed to spectators, even though Portugal's new constitution calls for public trials.

Judge Herminio Moreira Romas refused Saturday to say why he ordered spectators out of the courtroom at the beginning of the trial of Mrs. Vera Lagoa on Friday.

Peru's interior struck by quake registering 6

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The Geophysical Institute reported an earthquake registering six on the Richter scale struck a central Peruvian jungle Saturday.

It pinpointed the location as near the village of Satipo some 280 miles east of Lima and said the tremor was recorded at 2:55 p.m. PDT.

The institute said that because of lack of communications with the area it was not known if there were any casuaties or damage.

On the Richter scale, every increase of one number, say from 5.5 to magnitude 6.5, means the ground motion is 10 times greater. Some experts say the actual amount of energy released may be 30 times greater.

In populated areas, an earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 can cause moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 can be severe. A 7 reading is a "major earthquake, capable of heavy damage; 8 is a "great" earthquake, capable of tremendous damage. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 registered 8.3 on the Richter scale.

and Jack remembered the conversation about Mayer.

"Mr. O'Neil asked Mr. Mansell 'Didn't you tell him to tell the District Attorney about that?' and Mr. Mansell answered 'Yes,' " Lt. Henry said. "Mr. Mansell very often tells me to tell the District attorney something and when I do I log it—either a phone call or a letter or whatever."

However, Henry said Saturday, "I just re-checked my records and I find no such notation. Which means I apparently did not relay that information by phone. I may very well have relayed the information in any number of conversations that I have with the DA's office but I honestly cannot remember whether I did or not.

Thus, he concluded, "Mr. Mansell obviously believed that his statement Friday about being 'aware of suspicions involving Mr. Mayer's activities last December at which time the Long Beach Police Department brought these concerns to our attention' was correct."

The request for an investigation of Mayer's alleged solicitation of more than $50,000 in bribes since 1971 came from Long Beach architects James Coppedge and Claflin A. Ballance, according to the District Attorney's office. Bruce Campbell, head of the DA's Special Investigations unit, said the two men came to his office last Jan. 21 with that request. Both will be immune from prosecution, the DA's office says.

Subsequent investigations, detailed in a 36-page affadavit by DA investigator William R. Burnett, revealed details of the alleged bribes in connection with six multimillion dollar construction and development projects which the firm handled. These ranged from $200 to the $25,141 in Mexican 50-peso gold coins which police say the architects turned over to Mayer Friday morning.

The information which came to Lt. Henry about the swinging Marina Pacifica parties is borne out in Burnett's affadavit. In that statement, Coppedge says Mayer once described the "rendezvous and party" condominium at Marina Pacifica and "parties tending to be ribald." Mayer told the architects "We keep things of a very private nature at Marina Pacifica," according to the affadavit.

Meanwhile, neither Coppedge nor Ballance were available for comment, both reportedly having gone out of town for the weekend.

Energy official blasts Prop. 15 nuclear cutbacks

Associated Press

A federal energy official told a congressional subcommittee Saturday that California "cannot forego the nuclear energy option."

Robert D. Thorne, chief of the Energy Research and Development Administration's (ERDA) San Francisco office, cautioned against nuclear cutbacks implied in Proposition 15.

He told the House subcommittee on Energy Research and Development and Demonstration: "If Proposition 15 passes, the utilization of nuclear power as a viable energy option will be deferred 20 to 30 years.

Considering our precarious energy position, I feel quite strongly that California cannot forego the nuclear energy option."

ERDA Regional Administrator William Arntz told the five committee members meeting in Los Angeles that California can't expect to fill its energy needs with oil and gas from other areas if it rejects nuclear power.

"Unfortunately, California cannot rely on resources such as Alaskan oil, Northwest power, or the coal, water or land resources of the Southwest. All of these resources are already committed to meet increasing national or local energy needs," Arntz said.

Arntz refuted the findings of a University of Texas study which concluded that restrictions in Proposition 15 would have minimal effects if California could secure adequate supplies of alternate energy sources.

Israel bid to sell Austria jets told

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — An Austrian newspaper said Sunday that Israel has offered to sell Austria jet fighter planes for nearly 20 per cent less than U.S., French and Swedish manufacturers.

Austria plans to buy 20 fighters at an estimated total cost of about $100 million to replace its old Swedish-built Saab aircraft.

The newspaper Kronenzeitung said that the Israeli plane offered was the Kfir, which is similar to the French Mirage.

determine what was causing the cracks in the floor, confirmed Carpenter's statements, but cautioned, "There is absolutely no danger."

Curtis said the building supports were erected to specifications required by the code in 1972, when the constuction plans received final approval, but that in 1973, the code was revised to increase the weight support requirements.

He said the project will consist of adding reinforced concrete supports and masonry walls to about half of the existing pilings and that the additional support will prevent further cracking of the floors.

Plans for the repairs have been submitted to the city Building and Safety Department, but the staff hasn't had a chance to review them yet, according to Cyril Blesener, superintendant of building inspection.

Blesener also said that the building was built to code, "or it never would have passed the final inspection."

The condominium complex was designed in 1970 by Long Beach architects James Coppedge and Claflin A. Ballance.

On Friday, city Planning Director Ernest Mayer Jr. was arrested on charges of soliciting and accepting $50,000 in bribes from the architects.

Coppedge and Ballance, who were granted immunity by the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office, told investigators they paid bribes to Mayer for his help in pushing through six multimillion-dollar real estate developments in Long Beach — including Marina Pacifica.

Little-known court order ties up Hughes' assets

In the New York case, the judgment entered against Hughes was for more than $145 million; TWA claimed it was entitled to a half-billion dollars.

The importance attached to the control of the stock certificates was underscored by Hughes executives themselves in a little-noticed lawsuit filed in New Castle County Chancery Court in Wilmington, Del., earlier this month.

In a nine-page complaint signed by William E. Rankin, described as "a duly authorized officer" of Summa Corp., the company acknowledged that its stock had been seized as a result of a court order issued April 18, 1962, and that the "sequestration order and seizure remain in effect."

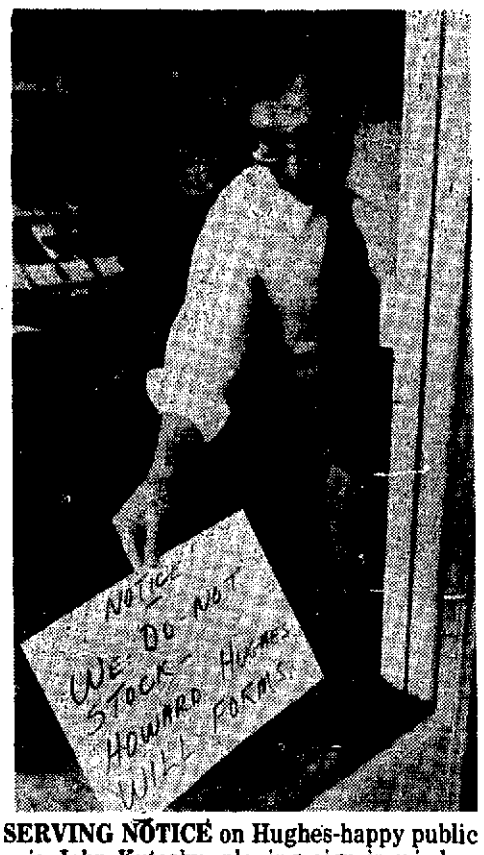

The Summa Corp. complaint asked the court to:

—Recognize Houston attorney William Rice Lummis as Summa's sole stockholder. Lummis was a first cousin of Hughes and a member of the Houston law firm that has long represented Hughes business interests.

—Cancel the outstanding Summa stock certificates and "issue new certificates in the name of the person determined by (the) court to be the owner of (Summa's) stock."

Summa contended the court action was necessitated by conflicting demands and claims on the estate and because the company needed "to have someone who can effectively act as its stockholder for the orderly conduct of those aspects of its business which require stockholder action."

At the same time Summa executives filed that lawsuit, aimed at maintaining control of the Hughes empire, a companion legal proceeding was initiated in the office of the New Castle County Register of Wills by Mrs. Anette Gano Lummis, the mother of William Rice Lummis, who, as Hughes' aunt, is his closest known surviving relative.

SERVING NOTICE on Hughes-happy public is John Kutosky, placing sign in window of downtown Los Angeles stationery store as purported Hughes wills proliferated.

—AP Wirephoto

The legal papers were filed on Mrs. Lummis' behalf by the same Wilmington law firm that is representing Summa and has represented Hughes in his TWA case, Morris, Nichols, Arsht and Tunnell.

In her petition, Mrs. Lummis, who is 85 and lives in Houston, asked that her son be appointed to administer the Hughes estate in Delaware. He was so appointed.

The Hughes estate in Delaware, of course, consists of the stock certificates of Summa, which was organized in that state.

When Lummis was appointed administrator, a $100 million bond was posted on his behalf by Summa, with William E. Rankin, the Summa executive, signing the bond.

At the same time, William Marvel, vice chancellor of the New Castle County Chancery Court, authorized Summa to temporarily recognize Lummis as the company's "sole stockholder" pending a final determination.

A hearing on the Summa petition, the first in what is expected to be a long series of court hearings, probably will be scheduled early this summer.

The legal actions indicate that Summa executives and members of one side of the Hughes family have banded together in an effort to control the late billionaire's business organization.

That group includes long-time Hughes aides and the relatives of Hughes' mother, Allene Gano Hughes. (Mrs. Lummis was a sister of Mrs. Hughes.)

It does not include the relatives of Hughes' father or the public administrator in Los Angeles County, which is seeking to administer the estate publicly to avoid even the appearance of any impropriety.

As an attorney representing relatives on the paternal side of the Hughes family told a Los Angeles County judge at a hearing on April 27, in support of a move to have the public administrator administer the Hughes estate:

"This will be like the Kennedy assassination. We have a very fundamental interest in obtaining credibility. We want the public to know."

But as matters now stand, there will be no distribution of the assets of Summa as long as the Delaware court order sequestering the company's stock remains in effect.

There is no indication the court order will be lifted in the near future, and attorneys familiar with the case say TWA probably would vigorously oppose any such action.

They reason that for TWA the court order sequestering the stock represents the airline's only assurance that it would be able to collect any judgment that might be rendered in the case.

As has been the case over the years with many business dealings of the eccentric Hughes, the story underlying the origins of the court order tying up the Summa stock is buried in a maze of legal documents found in courthouses in two states.

It is a story that grows out of:

—Hughes' long-standing refusal to appear in court proceedings in which he was named as a defendant, whether the action was brought by an agency of the federal government, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission, or by a large corporation, such as TWA.

—One of the longest, costliest and most bitter legal battles in American business history, which TWA and Hughes have waged against each other for 15 years now, a battle which—barring an unforeseen settlement—will go on for some years to come.

—A subtle legal maneuver initiated in 1962 by the architect of TWA's legal action against Hughes, John F. Sonnett, a prestigious Wall Street lawyer and onetime Justice Department antitrust chief, who since has died.

It all started back in the mid-1950s, when the nation's airlines were getting ready to enter the jet age and Howard Hughes, through Hughes Tool, owned 78 per cent of the stock of TWA.

After Pan American World Airways placed the first order for jets in 1955, one airline after another began entering into contracts for the manufacture and delivery of the new equipment. The planes were scheduled to be put into service in 1959 and 1960.

The one major exception in the scramble to order the jet aircraft was TWA. Hughes, as was his custom, procrastinated.

When he finally decided the following year to place an order—a decision that represented a substantial financial commitment for any airline—Hughes devised a financial plan peculiar to his personal business empire.

The planes were to be purchased not by TWA but by Hughes Tool Co., which in turn would then lease the planes to the airline.

The plan, as outlined in court records, had two purposes:

—To allow Hughes to use the tool company's investment in the jets to offset the company's soaring profits, thereby sharply reducing Hughes' federal income-tax payments.

—To allow Hughes to maintain firm control of the airline—a long-cherished Hughes business practice. If he were to borrow money in the traditional money markets, the lending institutions might impose restriction on the way he ran TWA.

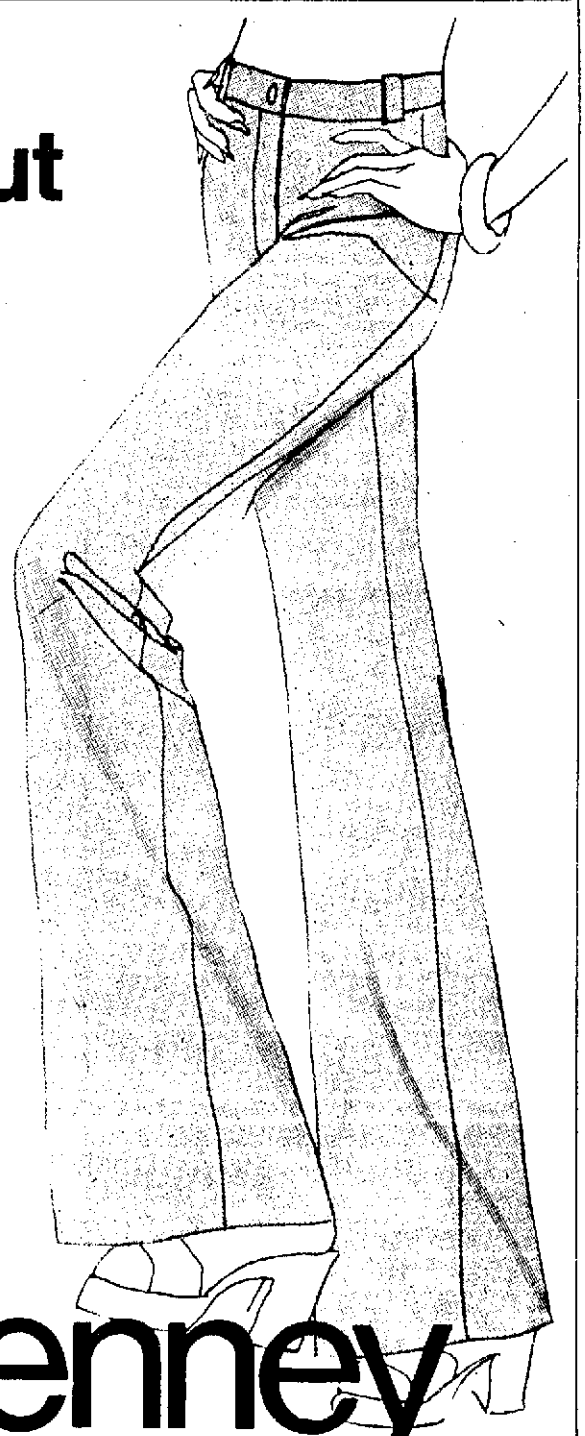

So it was that in 1961 TWA went into U.S. District Court in New York City and filed a damage suit against Hughes and Hughes Tool Co.

But Hughes remained in seclusion, beyond the reach of process-servers. And even when the reclusive billionaire's attorney finally accepted the subpoena on his behalf, Hughes refused to appear in court.

Huge productive capacity handicaps manufacturers

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press

If you wanted to buy a Lockheed L1011 TriStar jetliner, you certainly wouldn't have to wait for delivery — the scandal-wracked aerospace giant has five of the jumbo jets sitting out on a desert runway. Of course, you could also buy one from Trans World Airlines or Eastern.

"We don't like being in competition with our customers, but we have to face reality," says Chuck de Bedts, vice president of commercial marketing for Lockheed-California Co., the division that builds the L1011.

Production far ahead of sales

The reality is that all three U.S. manufacturers of commercial airliners can produce far more planes than they can sell. Lockheed, for example, sold only one TriStar in 1975, but it could have manufactured 120.

This overcapacity, partially a result of rapid expansion by the industry during the boom years of the late '60s, fed the intensely competitive climate of the early '70s. Payments to foreign agents became a common practice as the domestic market contracted and a scramble developed for sales abroad.

At least $270 million in legal and illegal payments to promote sales abroad have been made by Lockheed, Boeing and McDonnell Douglas, according to recent public statements and the published results of a congressional investigation. Lockheed has acknowledged paying $25 million abroad in bribes to "foreign officials and political parties." More than $7 million was paid in Japan alone for the sale of TriStars.

Lockheed pushed not only the sale of commercial planes, but of warplanes as well, although the company has not broken down which payments applied to which type of plane. It was reported last month that Lockheed paid $2 million to high Italian officials to arrange the sale of C130 military transports.

McDonnell Douglas has said that its payments were made only for the sale of commercial airliners. Boeing has not provided a breakdown but most of the planes it manufactures are commercial airliners.

All the commercial planes used by the world's airlines are produced by Lockheed, Boeing and McDonnell Douglas in the United States, and by a consortium of European companies known as the Airbus Industries.

BOEING, which makes about 58 per cent of the commercial airliners sold worldwide, estimates it is using about 15 per cent of its manufacturing capacity for these planes. It produced 171 commercial airliners last year. McDonnell, with 20 per cent to 30 per cent of the market today, manufactured 302 commercial planes in 1968 and 85 last year. Lockheed, which shares the rest of the market with Airbus, could turn out 10 TriStars a month, but plans to produce only about 18 in the next two years.

Sales of both military and commercial aircraft peaked around 1968. Since then, Defense Department procurements and orders from commercial airlines have steadily declined, industry sources agree.

More than a half-dozen American companies produced 4,481 military planes in 1967 and 4,440 in 1968, according to the Washington-based Aerospace Industry Association. By 1973, the figure had slipped to 1,243. The latest AIA statistic available, for 1974, is 1,000 planes. Figures on 1975 military aircraft production have not been compiled.

The AIA does not provide yearly breakdowns of the number of commercial airliners sold worldwide. But the jetliner market "is our darkest cloud at the moment," said Carlyle Jones, AIA vice president.

"THE VALUE of transports on order in 1968 was about $9.5 billion. At the end of September, 1975, the figure was $6.25 billion," representing a considerable drop in production because the cost of making each plane had risen so much.

Airline travel heyday in '60s

The heyday of airline travel occurred in the late 1960s, when the number of air miles traveled by paying passengers was growing at a 15 per cent annual rate. Then, in short order, airlines were hit by a number of damaging developments:

— Business turned down worldwide, sharply reducing executive and vacation travel spending.

— The price of aircraft fuel skyrocketed, cutting deeply into revenues in a regulated industry where cost increases cannot be automatically passed along to customers.

— New federal and state regulations on noise and air pollution forced airlines into expensive plane modifications.

These developments cut into airline profits — the five biggest domestic carriers all lost money last year — and choked off orders for new planes.

As orders from domestic carriers began to dry up in 1969 and 1970, aircraft manufacturers stepped up their efforts abroad. Boeing and McDonnell estimate that about two-thirds of their sales in recent years have been to foreign airlines. Lockheed puts the figure at 60 per cent.

"Our current sales are primarily foreign sales because the U.S. lines are hurting, and they don't have the money to invest in equipment that they used to," said E.H. "Tex" Boullioun, president of the Boeing Commercial Airplane Co. of Seattle.

To promote these foreign sales, McDonnell Douglas says about $2.5 million in "foreign fees, commissions and consultant payments" were paid between 1970 and June 30, 1975 "under circumstances which indicate payments were, or might have been, received by individuals who might legally be considered officials of foreign governments."

L1011 suffered serious reverses

Boeing estimates it has paid about $70 million in commissions to foreign representatives since 1970, including employes of foreign governments in four or five instances.

McDONNELL'S statement notes that the company's payments amounted to less than one-twentieth of 1 per cent of the value of its foreign sales from 1970 to 1975. Boeing points out that its commissions were about 1.3 per cent of the $5.5 billion worth of commercial jetliners it sold abroad during the period.

By contrast, Lockheed's acknowledged $200 million in bribes and in legal commissions, fees and consultant payments constituted a little more than 5 per cent of its $3.8 billion in foreign plane sales since 1970.

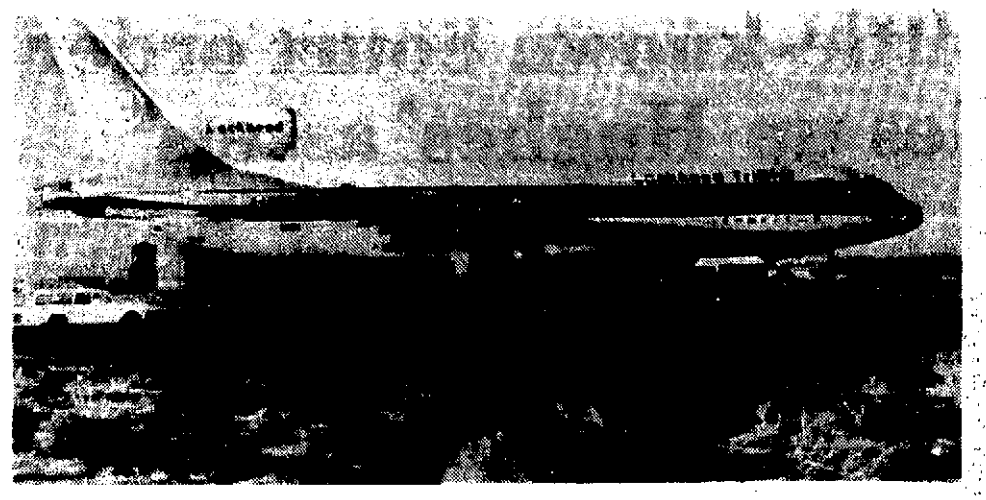

The company entered into a consent decree April 13 concerning charges by the Securities and Exchange Commission that it made more than $25 million in secret payments to officials of foreign governments. In the decree, Lockheed admitted for the first time that payments had been made directly to foreign officials. Previously, the company had maintained that the money was paid to agents who then passed it on.

IN CONSENTING to an injunction sought by the SEC, the company agreed to form a seven-member committee to investigate all its illegal activities and payments, with the findings to be made public.

Lockheed got out of the commercial airliner business in 1961 after losing a considerable amount of money on the Electra, which was outsold by Boeing's 707 and McDonnell's DC7. The company's decision to re-enter the market came in 1968, with airline travel at its height.

The move was a major gamble and Lockheed went into it with disadvantages. For one thing, the company's long absence meant that it had to build a sales and support staff from scratch. It also was offering a single product — the TriStar — while both Boeing and McDonnell had "families" of airplanes — different models to meet varying needs of airlines around the world.

"Our general policy has always been to blanket the airlines' needs as best we can with short, intermediate and long-range airplanes," explained Boullioun. Robert Hage, marketing vice president for Douglas Aircraft Co., the McDonnell division that builds jetliners, agrees that the "family" policy of Boeing and McDonnell has given them a substantial advantage over Lockheed.

LOCKHEED'S L1011—PLENTY AROUND, JUST BEGGING FOR BUYERS

Even so, Lockheed's L1011, which competes against Boeing's 747 and McDonnell's DC10, might have done better had the program not suffered serious reverses before the first plane ever came off the assembly line. Costs soared. The British firm of Rolls Royce, which was to build the engines for the L1011, declared bankruptcy. Lockheed's main plant in Burbank was damaged slightly by an earthquake.

A government-guaranteed loan of $250 million averted a Lockheed bankruptcy in 1971, a year after the firm had borrowed $400 million from 24 banks, and the company finally got its L1011 into the marketplace — late.

A. C. Kotchian, who resigned in February as Lockheed's vice chairman and chief operating officer in the wake of the payoff disclosures, told Senate investigators that the company spread money around in Japan to "get more time" for the L1011 to come to market.

Ironically, Lockheed makes money in almost every area except the L1011. These include missiles, shipbuilding and military aircraft. But the L1011 program could mean losses of up to $500 million if the company is forced to write off its development and production-line costs.

Lockheed's new chairman, Robert Haack says the consent decree involving the SEC will allow the company to "move forward with discussions on financial restructuring with our banks." Lockheed owes its various creditors $821 million.

Whatever the fate of Lockheed, aerospace executives agree that no manufacturer is going to set any sales records in the near future.

"People are just going to have to accept the fact that air transportation is a maturing industry," says Boullioun. "Whereas we used to grow 12 to 14 per cent a year, we're now predicting a 5 to 5.5 per cent growth rate until 1985."

General Tire a unique SEC bribe probe case

By RICHARD PHALON
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The three O'Neil brothers — Thomas F., Michael G. and John — like to say they run the General Tire and Rubber Co. as a troika, with no particular dedication to such conventional trappings of the executive suite as organization tables, flow charts and management concepts.

That free-form style has made General Tire, founded by the late William O'Neil 60 years ago, one of the industry's most profitable companies.

At the same time, in the opinion of some securities analysts, General Tire is still so much of a family-run business that the company was particularly vulnerable to the kind of charges the Securities and Exchange Commission made against it last Monday.

"THE O'NEILS EACH run their own show in their own separate areas of responsibility," one securities analyst said. "You have to accept the possibility that some things happened underneath them that they didn't know anything about. On the other hand, General tends to take its tone from the top."

The SEC's allegations included contentions that General, the industry's fifth-largest tire producer, had made illegal political contributions at home, bribed foreign government officials in an effort to get an edge on some of its American competitors abroad, breached foreign currency laws and filed financial reports that overlooked the existence of illegal slush funds.

General Tire consented to an injunction in which it neither denied nor admitted the validity of the SEC's allegations. As part of the settlement, General Tire agreed to assign a five-man committee of outside directors to make their investigation of the charges.

Many of the charges were similar to allegations the SEC had filed against other major corporations such as the Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the Gulf Oil Corp. and the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co.

There are some distinct differences in the General Tire case, however. Some of the SEC's allegations about bribery of foreign officials in Chile, Morocco and Rumania repeat charges that have been made before the Federal Communications Commission. They were voiced by a group that is competing for the television-station license that a General Tire subsidiary, RKO General Inc., holds on WNAC-TV in Boston.

The record in that case is still open. A judgment against RKO, based on the bribery allegations against the parent company, could cost General Tire its prosperous Boston TV outlet. An adverse ruling by the FCC could also conceivably lead to challenges of RKO's operation of its three other television stations (in New York, Los Angeles and Memphis) and nine radio stations.

Coast Guard moving to new quarters

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

The Coast Guard is going to make a move next weekend and hopefully it will go so smoothly nobody will notice.

After 12 years in the Heartwell Building at 19 Pine Avenue in downtown Long Beach, the 11th Coast Guard District plans to move into more modern and spacious quarters in the new Union Bank Building, at Magnolia Avenue and Ocean Boulevard.

Capt. Walter F. Guy, chief of staff, said the move to the bank building at 400 Oceangate, will start promptly following "Retreat" Friday afternoon. Unless the commercial movers run into a distress situation, the move is expected to be completed by "Taps" Saturday evening.

MAKING THE move will be the district's 175 civilian and military personnel, excepting those manning the Rescue Coordination Center and the Communications Center. Those critical nerve centers will move in about two weeks after new centers are set up, tested, and manned. With a flip of a switch the move will be made electronically without a break in search and rescue operations or in communications.

Telephone numbers will not change nor will radio procedures to reach "Coast Guard Radio Long Beach."

In the bank building the Coast Guard will occupy half of the fifth floor and all of the sixth, seventh, eighth, and nineth floors.

Two factors taken into consideration by the General Services Administration in arranging the proposed move were that the lease with the owners of the Heartwell Building expired in September and that the building might be razed if redevelopment plans to convert the downtown area into a six-square block shopping center reach fruition.

Honored

Joseph M. Costello, 78, one of the best-known Southland waterfront personalities, will be saluted Memorial Day during a day-long party to which sponsors have limited attendance to 1,000.

The testimonial affair will begin at noon in the San Pedro Elks Club followed by a barbecue steak dinner starting at 3 p.m.

Costello started a ship supply and chandler business in Wilmington in 1938 after a sea-going career that began when he was 18. He has held a chief engineer's ticket for 50 years.

He is being honored for his long-time service to the Los Angeles-Long Beach maritime community.

Sponsors are Bethlehem Steel, Cavanaugh Machine Co, and Todd Shipyards. Cosponsors are the organizations to which Costello belongs and include; Bilge Club, Binnacle Club, Catholic Maritime Club, Mariners of Land and Sea, Los Angeles-Long Beach Propeller Club, San Pedro Elks Club, and Port Engineers.

Accused

Latest incident in the long and continuing feud between Los Angeles Harbor Department's top management and the department's director of planning and research, Donald Walsh, is a deputy general manager's memo sent to Walsh accusing him of plagiarism.

William Clockson, the department's second in command, chastised the planning director for using a chart in the recently-published Comprehensve Master Plan which Walsh had prepared. The chart showed the size and number of ships which could and could not enter the relatively shallow port channels.

CLOCKSON said the chart originally had been published by Clarkson Registery, a company that certifies and registers ships. Walsh admitted the chart had been published previously by the company but said he had permission to reprint it. He said it was unfortunate that during the make-up and printing of the master plan a line of type crediting the company was inadvertently omitted.

"The memo is just another act of harassment," Walsh claimed.

"Had Clockson asked me about it, I would have told him I had permission to reprint the chart before charging me with stealing someone else's work," he said.

WALSH WAS in another hot-seat recently after he sent a confidential letter to the Board of Harbor Commissioners. In the letter he charged Fred B. Crawford, harbor department general manager, of conducting a "Watergate to coverup his lying." Several days later, after the commission failed to take any action, and accusing the commission of "sweeping the matter under the rug," he sent copies to the press.

He was called before the commission and chastised for leaking the matter to the news media.

The commission has failed—at least in open meetings—to consider any of Walsh's accusations.

Walsh has pending a lawsuit against the harbor commission and its individual members for $9,600 which he claimns he should have been paid but was not during three months he served as acting general manager during the first three months of 1974. The suit was to have been heard in April but was postponed until August.

Health plan would enrich doctors, Tunney claims

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., told a Long Beach-area rally Friday that a national health insurance program this year would enrich doctors and threaten runaway inflation and bankruptcy.

The $145 billion program implemented among the nation's short supply of doctors would only "make doctors billionaires instead of millionaires."

He blamed the doctor shortage on the American Medical Association "which decided 35 years ago to limit the number of doctors produced and the kinds of services nurses and paramedics could provide in order to increase the incomes of doctors. They succeeded. Those incomes have been going up smartly, faster than in any other profession.

"We've not had the guts, for 40 years, to break up the AMA cartel."

SPEAKING at Local 148, UAW Hall, 3971 Pixie Ave., Lakewood, Tunney said he supports the concept of national health care but that it must be done in a step-by-step, rational manner.

"We need to substantially increase the number of slots available in medical schools and increase the kinds of services nurses and paramedics may be licensed by the state to perform," he said.

He charged that the Nixon administration failed to "spend a dime" of some $50 million authorized for medical school construction.

Tunney acknowledged to a questioner the sensitivity of Prop. 15, the nuclear power plants initiative on the June 8 primary ballot, but said he would vote "No."

Noting that he was the only statewide officeholder to have taken a public position on Prop. 15, Tunney said there was no question that the elimination of nuclear technology would mean an inadequate supply of electricity to the end of the century.

He conceded the risks of nuclear waste storage cited by proponents of the measure but suggested that a nation which knows how to split the atom "might be able to devise techniques to store wastes."

TUNNEY SAID he was proud of his record in the Senate, "important in benefits to the average citizen but also in what I kept government from doing to you."

He said he was among a handful who took on attorney general nominee Richard Kleindienst over the ITT scandal of a few years ago and "who took on Pat Gray," acting FBI director, blocking his appointment.

"I was the first senator on the floor to call for Richard Nixon's resignation one year before he resigned," he said.

It was his amendment, he said, which prevented the administration's "trying to sneak a new secret war on us in Angola."

The senator defended his support of the B1 bomber as "a valid weapons system to deter the Soviet Union for years to come...I think we've got real problems with the Soviet Union. I don't underestimate them. They are aggressive and expansionist."

Free community forum on Prop. 15

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Proposition 15, the Nuclear Power Plants initiative on the June 8 primary ballot, will be debated at a free community forum at 7:30 p.m. Monday in St. Luke's Church, Seventh Street at Atlantic Avenue, Long Beach, sponsored by the League of Women Voters and the Long Beach Area Council of Churches.

Speaking for the proposition will be Robert V. Adams, vice president of the Computer Printing Division, Xerox Corp., representing Californians for Nuclear Safeguards.

Speaking against the proposition will be Norman L. Buehring, civil engineer with the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power.

Speakers will have 20 minutes each to state their cases, then time for rebuttal and audience participation.

Endorsed

The Long Beach Police Officers Association has endorsed Los Angeles County Dist. Atty. John Van de Kamp for a full four-year term, according to Sgt. Ralph Abraham, president.

Abraham said reasons for the endorsement include Van de Kamp's "good administrative background, his concern for police officers and his new programs of two-way communication between his office and the working policeman, not just liaison with chiefs."

The association has 700 members, representing the second largest municipal police department in the county.

Van de Kamp said he was delighted by the show of confidence in his administration, adding, "I am dedicated to improving our criminal-justice system and reducing crime, and that will never happen without the cooperation of the street policeman."

Ward at forum

County Supervisor Baxter Ward will discuss his controversial rapid-transit plan at the Friday noon luncheon meeting of the Third Friday Forum in the Edgewater Hyatt House Loft Room, 6400 E. Pacific Coast Highway, Long Beach.

A social period is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Reservations may be made through Wednesday with Helen Potepan at 425-3637 or JoHana Blado at 428-1130.

Hayden-Tunney

U.S. Senate candidate Tom Hayden, Democrat, and Richard Bronner, a spokesman for incumbent Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., will speak at 1:30 p.m. today at a town-hall meeting in the Long Beach Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave.

The meeting is free and public.

Lungren aides

Ted Furlow, chairman of the Dan Lungren for Congress Committee, announced the appointment of Mary Lu Hauser and Joe Pickett as cochairpersons for precinct operations in Lungren's bid for the Republican nomination in the 34th District of East Long Beach and West Orange County.

Evening GOP

Republican candidates for Assembly and Congress will speak at the 7:30 p.m. Thursday meeting of the Long Beach Evening Division, Republican Women Federated, at the Mercury Savings & Loan Building, 4140 Long Beach Blvd.

Speakers will include Jack Bentley, Dale Dykema and James L. Wright, candidates in the 58th Assembly District; Edd Tuttle, write-in candidate in the 57th Assembly District, and Clifford Young, candidate in the 32nd Congressional District.

The meeting is open to the public.

Lakewood-L.B.

Lakewood-Long Beach Republican Women Federated will host Republican candidates at their Friday luncheon meeting in the Laguna Room of Bullock's Lakewood.

Candidates will include those listed above, as well as Bill Bond, Art Jacobson and Dan Lungren, seeking nomination in the 34th Congressional District, and State Sen. George Deukmejian, 31st District.

On the program are a 10:30 a.m. study session on ballot propositions, social hour, noon luncheon and 1 p.m. program. Reservations may be made with Vivian Langemo at 425-0172 or Frances Landreth at 421-6207.

Carter campaign

The Jimmy Carter presidential campaign headquarters for the Long Beach area will open at 10 a.m. Monday at 3918 Atlantic Ave., Long Beach.

It will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays. Carter spokesmen said campaign queries are welcomed at the headquarters telephone, 424-2218.

33rd Senate race

Democratic candidates for the open 33rd Senate District seat will speak at the 7:30 p.m. Tuesday meeting of the Norwalk Democratic Club at 12820 Pioneer Blvd., Norwalk.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: You consolidate property and progress in countless small but infinitely satisfying moments of self-fulfillment this year. It isn't as good a period for expansive moves, but if circumstances are such that you must spread out, strive to do so in orderly sequence. Today's natives attract public attention for their earnest, obviously honest nature, whether their ideas are practical or not.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Seek experts' advice and help on technical jobs. Your sympathy greatly affects someone nearby. Romance touches almost everything that happens.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Urge for pleasure dominates today's action. Many things can be had for the asking. Professional advice blends into work patterns. New contacts bloom.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Solving mysteries is fun: dig out little-known information. Search for prospective silent partners. Gardening promises well, especially for herbs.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You must supply most of the energy. Cooperation is available if, despite recent setback, you ask for it. Romance is in the air, offers a memorable moment.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Extra effort is needed to keep everyone on the job as pleasant distractions abound. Personal plans take priority in too many cases. Established romance thrives.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Social considerations override most commercial concerns. Nobody is in a mood to work. Take a once-over-lightly approach; don't rush serious projects.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Everybody is in a fairly good humor. Work is skimped a bit; if you attempt too much, it must be repeated, corrected. Simply let well enough alone.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You're better off going along with the crowd instead of exerting definite leadership. Ask if you need a favor. Emotional impulses are lively.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Increased earning capacity, success in personal connections encourage saving for the future. Temptations toward excess and speculation are strong.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A personal touch eases delicate negotiations. Your persuasive powers are deft enough, you needn't force issues. Garden, or sponsor civic planting.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Build a team for future work. Discussions drift from business to social topics. Deal with institutions of society to renew your credentials again.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Buy clothing, accessories, decorative items you budgeted for. Work stops while everybody catches up on the latest joke, social conquests, romancing.

Summary of Secret Witness cases, rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 66 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $43,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Roland King, of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst, of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith, of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5096 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the torch slayer of Alice Olay, 52, of Downey, whose charred body was found in a blazing auto in a lot at Pioneer Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue in Norwalk early on the morning of Sept. 19, 1975.

—A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Myrtle Taylor, 88, of Gardena, as she was crossing Vermont Avenue at 149th Street in Gardena at 7:15 p.m. on Oct. 24, 1975. The driver was described by witnesses as a tall, thin black man about 30 years old, driving a 1969 Chevrolet Impala or Caprice, blue with a matching vinyl top.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the holdup slayer of Benjamin Wallace, 48-year-old San Pedro taxi driver who was found shot to death and slumped over the wheel of his cab parked at Seaside Avenue and Terminal Way on Terminal Island at 3 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 3, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of James Hamilton Macgenn, 50-year-old employe of King's Imperial Restaurant in Lynwood at 1004 Atlantic Ave., stabbed to death in the restaurant parking lot as he was leaving work at 3:30 a.m. on June 1, 1975.

—Rewards totaling $3,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $1,500 pledged by store owner Christopher Saunders — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Duane Fettig, 29-year-old clerk shot to death during a holdup at the Melody Liquor Store, 20716 S. Normandie Ave. in the Torrance area, on the morning of Feb. 5, 1975.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column.

Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself . . . any name, as long as it's not your own . . . and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 97, Long Beach, 90801.

Man shot dead by deputies

A 51-year-old East Compton man was shot to death by two Carson sheriff's deputies early Saturday after he allegedly fired three shots at them when they arrived at his home to answer a family disturbance call.

A sheriff's spokesman said Maurice Tizano of 5408 E. McMillan St. fired at the deputies as they approached the house at about 3:30 a.m.

Tizano was killed instantly by the deputies return fire, the spokesman said. Neither of the deputies was injured.

Vendor wounded, robbed

A Los Angeles ice cream vendor, the father of 14, was shot and seriously wounded by one of three youths who robbed him of $60 while he was on his neighborhood rounds, sheriff's deputies reported Saturday.

Investigators said Arnulfo Flores of 701½ S. Central Ave. was shot in the stomach and chest Friday evening as he stood beside his truck at Blanchard Street and Geraghty Avenue in East Los Angeles.

Flores' partner, who was not identified, said three youths, one carrying a rifle, approached the truck and demanded money. The gunman opened fire when Flores refused to hand over the cash, the partner said.

Deputies said a 19-year-old neighborhood youth, identified as Robert Rodriguez of 715 N. Herbert Ave. later was arrested and booked on suspicion of armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon.

The deputies said they were searching for two more youths for questioning.

Murder ruled in L.B. death

The death of a Long Beach man, whose body was found floating in the water near the beach at the foot of Junipero Avenue more than two months ago, has been classified as a murder, homicide investigators said Saturday.

The investigators said the body of Alfred Fowler, 40, of 4746 Pepperwood Ave., was discovered floating in the surf March 5. He died from a fracture around the right eye, a coroner's deputy said.

The last known person to see the victim alive, a friend who was not identified, told investigators he saw Fowler Feb. 25 at the corner of Anaheim Street and Pine Avenue.

Drunk-driving team nets 15

A team of seven motorcycle officers and their sergeant arrested 15 persons Friday night and Saturday morning for suspicion of drunken driving in the region between downtown Los Angeles and Hollywood.

A Los Angeles Police Department spokesman said the arrests were made as part of the team's assignment to crack down on drunken drivers in the city. The so-called 502 team, formed in February, concentrates on a different area of the city each night.

The Friday-Saturday arrests were made between 8 p.m. and 3 a.m. in the Rampart Division, the spokesman said.

Vallerga slated to be sentenced

Jack P. Vallerga, 53, former Orange County assessor who has pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to commit embezzlement, is scheduled to be sentenced Tuesday at Kern County Superior Court.

The court will receive a probation report on Vallerga that day, and sentencing is expected to follow.

His case had been moved to Kern County after he complained that he could not get a fair trial in Orange County.

The other counts of a multiple-count indictment returned by the Orange County grand jury May 7, 1975, were dropped after Vallerga pleaded guilty to the embezzlement charge.

The charges alleged that Vallerga and his predecessor as assessor, Rep. Andrew J. Hinshaw, R-Santa Ana, had conspired to use county office employes to work for Hinshaw in his bid for election to Congress in 1972.

Hinshaw also was convicted and sentenced to prison but is appealing the conviction.

Vallerga also was tried and convicted in Ventura County on charges that he embezzled county funds in connection with sale of an computerized appraisal system to Spartanburg County, S.C.

That conviction brought his removal from office, a $1,000 fine and a 60-day jail sentence.

The sentence was suspended when he gave notice of appeal. The appeal was filed Friday with the Second District Court of Appeal at Fresno.

Crackdown on speed set

A speed compliance task force to crack down on violators of the 55 mile-per-hour limit has been organized by the Southeast Los Angeles County area office of the California Highway Patrol, according to Capt. W.J. Schilling, station commander.

The teams of officers will patrol the San Gabriel River (605), Santa Ana, Artesia and Pomona freeways on a continual basis.

Dancer calls it 'dreadful life'

NEW YORK — Barbara Luna stepped, or danced, into a major role in "A Chorus Line" and sings the hit song, "What I Did for Love." But according to Barbara, who's been a pro since she was 6, being a dancer "is a dreadful life," and you get small money for it, but lots of tired bones.

"I asked Donna McKechnie," said Barbara, referring to the Tony Award winner who left the Broadway company for the pleasures of California, "what she did when she wasn't on stage.

"She told me she had to go to see a list of doctors and specialists treating her back and her knees. You see, the dancers are just regarded as dancers, as the gypsies, as 'the kids.' If they want the dancers, they don't say, 'Send in Barbara and Ann and Donna.' They say, 'Send in the kids.'

"And," said Barbara, "being in the company that replaced the first company, when it went to California, doesn't help. It's like all the glory is gone, it's like we're the second string."

Nevertheless, it's pleasant being in a show everybody wants to see, and besides, "maybe one of the TV pilots will come through." Although she feels competent dancing as a chorus girl, she doesn't ever want to be a premiere ballerina, devoting her whole day to dance drill, and she's glad those auditions for the job replacing Priscilla Lopez are over.

"The first night I was so sore I couldn't walk," she remembered. "Still, it wasn't as bad as I thought. I expected there would be a lot of 'point work' — dancing on your toes." To her surprise, director Michael Bennett told her in Los Angeles that she had "95 per cent of the part."

What about the other 5 per cent? She read it in a newspaper that she had it. She had difficulty catching up with Bennett.

Producer-genius Joseph Papp said, "Oh, Michael is not here. He's being fitted for a Napoleon suit."

Bennett thought Papp was getting his wings measured for the Pearly Gates.

Barbara revealed a couple of secrets of the success of the show. "As a chorus, we're robots. Everything is done to a count. We're numbers. I am No. 8. I have to count five sets of eight before I can move. That's precision! That's perfection!"

BARBARA LUNA

Did the chorus kids ever lose count?

"Of course, in the beginning. I felt like an accountant, not a dancer."

"And I was never good at numbers. But if it's not past eight, I can do it."

Barbara's first audition, for "South Pacific" at 6, led her into "The King and I" and "Teahouse of the August Moon." Even then she resented the anonymity forced upon "the kids."

"It was always 'the second one from the right,' never my name." She went into movies and TV. She went into "The Devil at 4 O'Clock" with Spencer Tracy and Frank Sinatra. She played Indian squaws and Mexican she-devils.

Is there competitiveness between Barbara Luna and Ann Reinking, who took the Donna McKechnie part?

"Yeah. But nothing serious! I'm the only one who does two songs.

"But we don't compete. We're not supposed to, anyway. On the front of each of our scripts are the words, 'I am at an audition.' We are not supposed to think we are entertaining an audience. We are at an audition trying to please only the choreographer who is in charge of the audition."

Barbara has a Los Angeles lover who flies in to see her each weekend. She was married to actor Doug McClure. "He was my second husband," she said. "I was his second, and now he's on his fourth or fifth."

Barbara Luna picked up her gear. "And now I am off to my vocal lesson," she said. "I take dancing lessons, too. I told you it can be a dreadful life."

TODAY'S BEST laugh: A fellow living in a trailer says that when they have a flat his wife fixes it: "I figure it's a woman's job to take care of the home."

WISH I'D said that: Someone described Las Vegas as "the place where some entertainers make $100,000 a week, and some lose that much."

REMEMBERED quote: "Middle age is when actions creak louder than words."

Leonard Nimoy, outsider

By LYNN VAN MATRE
Knight News Service

His life style, as he puts it with a dry little laugh, is "really quite bourgeois." The same wife for more than 20 years, a "lovely home," two "terrific kids" now in college.

There are four people in Leonard Nimoy's family, "and each of us," he said, "has our own car. Yeah, pretty bourgeois."

Well, what did you expect? Of course Nimoy made his reputation playing less all-American types, notably the angular-eared, part-extraterrestial Mr. Spock on television's "Star Trek" series. A real alien. Now Nimoy's on tour playing another character he considers just as much an alien as Spock—Sherlock Holmes. Nimoy has the title role in William Gillette's turn-of-the-century treatment of the sagacious sleuth, "Sherlock Holmes," currently at Chicago's Shubert Theater.

"I've always felt I should do Holmes someday," said Nimoy, now 45. "I think my chemistry, my looks, my image all are helpful in playing that role. Besides, I understand Holmes.

"I guess the reason I relate so strongly to characters like that has to do with my feelings about myself, the way I perceive things. I've really always considered myself an outsider, ever since I can remember. It wasn't by choice; it just happened. I don't follow trends the way a lot of people do. I'm not gregarious. I don't strike up conversations with people easily. I love my family, of course, and I have some dear friends, but I don't enjoy being around a lot of people, and I've never enjoyed social chatter.

"In some ways, it would be a lot easier for me as far as my career goes if I could go the small-talk, cocktail-party route. But that's just not how I am."

Someday Nimoy hopes to portray Cyrano on stage. "There are a couple of Shakespearean characters I should tackle, too," he said. "Henry V, for instance, because of the beauty of his speeches and the romance. The style of that character is sensational. But I'm not really obsessed with playing any particular role the way some actors are. I feel pretty good about what I'm doing now—some television, some theater and some writing."

His published writings include two books of poetry, illustrated with photographs he took and developed himself. His third book, called "I Am Not Spock," was published last year. In it Nimoy writes about himself, his craft, and the character he played for three years on "Star Trek."

"Between the writing, the photography, the acting and the occasional college lectures I do," Nimoy said with a sigh, "I've been going pretty constantly for the last couple of years. When I finish up the Holmes role, I'm scheduled for a two-week vacation. I plan to do absolutely nothing. What I need now is time to recharge my batteries and find out if there are some new values to explore in my life."

This fall, he's scheduled to host a new show called "In Search of," a prime-time series of half-hour documentaries on unexplained phenomena. Topics include voodoo, haunted houses, UFOs and the search for Atlantis.

"I'm fascinated by things like that," said Nimoy. "I don't know if I've ever had any genuine psychic experiences myself, but I've read quite a bit on the subject, and it intrigues me.

"We're in a time when people are finding out things we once thought were so weird, like acupuncture, aren't so bizarre after all. There are a lot of phenomena we need to explore, and maybe find new kinds of knowledge."

Nimoy's search for knowledge in general prompted him to enroll recently in a graduate program at Antioch College, where he's in education.

"Maybe," he said, "I'll find out what I should be when I grow up."

That was entertainment

Action filmmaker AIP seeks 'class' image—with action

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Long the Woolworth's of the movie business, American International Pictures is showing signs of wanting to be Tiffany's.

Samuel Z. Arkoff denies it. "We're still delivering the same old staples," says the AIP chief, "but we're adding to our wares and making the packages more attractive."

It was typical understatement from the film tycoon, who describes himself as "just an old Iowa farm boy." Yet there can be no doubt that AIP, the company that has given the world "I Was a Teen-age Werewolf," "How to Stuff a Wild Bikini" and 350 other films in its 22-year history, is stepping up in class.

Here are some of its future releases:

—"A Matter of Time," with Liza Minnelli, Ingrid Bergman and Charles Boyer, and Vincente Minnelli directing in Rome and Venice.

—"Shout at the Devil," filmed in Africa with Lee Marvin, Roger Moore and Barbara Parkins. The reported cost: $9.5 million.

LEE MARVIN

LIZA MINNELLI

PETER FONDA

'Making the Packages More Attractive for Old Staples'

—"The Great Scout and Cathouse Thursday," western foolery with Lee Marvin, Oliver Reed and Robert Culp.

—"Futureworld," sequel to "Westworld," with Peter Fonda and Yul Brynner, who is back as the robot.

—"Crime and Passion," with Omar Sharif, Karen Black and Joseph Bottoms.

Arkoff, who is president and board chairman of AIP and its founder with the late James Nicholson, said the company is swinging with the times. Nothing new about that, since AIP has always been the trendiest of the movie firms. But this time it is following an economic trend.

"Since below-the-line costs (charges for labor, film, etc.) have gone up so much, we have decided to add to the costs above the line (stars, directors, stories), with the result that we will have a bigger and hopefully better product to sell."

He cited how filming costs have risen:

"In 1957 we made 'I Was a Teen-age Werewolf' in black-and-white with a young, unknown actor named Michael Landon. Studios were on a six-day week then, and we shot it in two weeks for $100,000. That picture would cost between $500,000 and $600,000 today.

"The trouble with our business is that there have been no technological advances to speed up production. Movies are made pretty much the way they have been for 50 years, and the cost of making them has risen tremendously. The amount of theater attendance doesn't change much from year to year, and ticket prices won't be rising wildly. That leaves the film company in a bind."

"The public eats up special effects," he commented, citing such successes as "The Towering Inferno," "The Poseidon Adventure," "Earthquake" and "The Hindenburg."

"Our first big success in 1955 was a picture called, 'The Day the World Ended.'" he remarked. "Now Irwin Allen is going to spend $15 million making a picture called 'The Day the World Ended.' So what's new?

"What the studios are doing now are super-versions of the same formulas. That's necessary because there is tremendous entertainment on television today. Television can't present anything too big; you rarely see longshots on TV shows. Nor is there much action, outside of fistfights and car chases. Movies have to give the public something more."

Pal shoots them just once

Ridder News Service

Filmmaking hard? Not for the winner of eight Academy Awards for special effects.

Hollywood's George Pal said he has never shot a special-effects scene more than once. But when he made the statement, the 68-year-old native Hungarian knocked on the wooden cocktail table.

To avoid costly retakes, Pal sketches every scene and key movement in the production. The pictures are lined up in sequence and fill the walls of a room, creating an outline of the movie.

By the time he enters the sound stage the film is theoretically completed. On this system he quotes Alfred Hitchcock in a thick Hungarian accent: "Shooting the picture is a bore."

But that's not quite true for himself, says the man who directed Charlton Heston in his second starring role in "The Naked Jungle," Yvette Mimieux in her first starring role in "The Time Machine" and Peter Sellers in his first American picture in "Tom Thumb."

The man who came from an acting family said he has no trouble working with actors. He attributes this to granting them as much freedom as possible.

"I always encourage them to come 15 minutes before I do and rehearse the scene the way they think it should be done," said the Beverly Hills resident.

He does the same thing with assistants in special effects and writers.

"'How are we going to do it?' I ask.

"They tell me and very often it's better than my idea."

He recently finished producing and writing "Doc Savage, the Man of Bronze."

Leaders in Crisis

Polk and the Mexican War

By SID MOODY
Associated Press

Bugs. Heat. Boredom. Things, in fact were so dull in no man's land along the Rio Grande that Gen. Zachary Taylor's troops decided to stage a play — Shakespeare's "Othello."

Only there weren't any women. So a young West Point officer was picked to play Desdemona. But the male lead was damned if he'd nuzzle with Lt. Ulysses Simpson Grant.

Tenth of a series

Therefore, they sent all the way to New Orleans for an unmistakable actress.

They'd have had to send all the way to Washington, D.C., to find out why they were there in the first place. President James Knox Polk might have told them. He was escalating a non-war, even then an old American tradition.

Polk had been elected in 1844 on a campaign to reannex Texas and reoccupy the Oregon Territory. Reannex because Polk and others insisted it was part of the original Louisiana Purchase, an 1819 treaty between Spain and the United States to the contrary notwithstanding. Reoccupy Oregon because Americans once had. Actually, a few coastal settlements aside, Oregon had been solely occupied throughout by beaver and grizzlies and the men of various nationalities who coveted their fur.

IT DIDN'T much matter anyway. What Polk really wanted was California.

Polk was proceeding cautiously because of opponents, foreign and domestic, and because he thought he could settle the matter with cash and a show of force instead of blood.

Texas had been in the smokehouse of American politics for some time, curing. Stephen Austin, a St. Louis land speculator, had begun bringing in American settlers in the 1820s. More followed. Alarmed, Mexico prohibited further settlement in 1830. Then came the Alamo and the Battle of San Jacinto in 1836, where, defeated, but still devious, Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna agreed, at all but bayonet-point, to see what he could do about Texan independence. Since no one believed Santa Anna but at his peril, the Texans went ahead and declared independence, and the Lone Star Republic was promptly recognized by the United States, Britain and France.

Texas wanted to join the United States. Early on, John Quincy Adams had tried to buy the territory for $1 million. Jackson upped it to $5 million. Mexico said no. The issue was not pressed further because of its domestic political ramifications. Neither North nor South wanted a showdown over admission of another slave state. Yet many Southerners, among them John Calhoun, saw Texas as a safe haven for runaway slaves, particularly if abolitionist Great Britain gained influence there.

THE DEMOCRATIC convention in Baltimore in 1844 figured to nominate Martin Van Buren. But Van Buren had said annexation was divisive. Southern delegates vetoed him and, after smoking a forest of stogies, nominated Polk, former speaker of the House, governor of Tennessee and now America's first dark horse. He ran against the biggest Whig, Henry Clay, who had waffled on annexation and lost the crucial abolitionist vote in New York. Polk was president.

There were all kinds of arguments to push Manifest Destiny along. Sen. Robert J. Walker of Mississippi tried to assure Northerners by telling them that slaves would indeed go into Texas, but that once the cotton fields there were exhausted they'd cross the border into Mexico and mingle with the halfbreeds, solving the whole problem. Young Hickory, as fellow Tennesseans called Polk, was not concerned with slavery so much as he was the British getting to San Francisco and Monterey before the Americans did.

First he tried money, sending John Slidell to Mexico City to negotiate. Bidding was to start at $15 million for Texas, New Mexico (which included Arizona) and California.

PRESIDENT Jose Joaquin Herrera, who had succeeded Santa Anna, was not deaf to money. He knew his nation of 8 million people was no match for the United States, more than twice the size, even if Mexico's army of 30,000 men was four times America's. War was absurd. But he had his honor. He had asked to negotiate with a commissioner, not a ful-fledged minister. Slidell said he was a minister. Herrera would not talk with him. His laureate was more than matched by leaders and generals of his countrymen who preferred a war they all knew Mexico would lose to the disgrace of annexation.

But if Polk could somehow save Mexican sensitivities, he could save some lives. Instead, Polk ordered Taylor to move his 4,000 men, more than half the regular Army, into the disputed border country along the Rio Grande. Polk was escalating, hoping this would force negotiations. Taylor, "Old Rough and Ready," was not to fire unless fired on or war was declared. In early 1846, Taylor faced a Mexican army across the river, guns loaded, aimed but not yet fired. Polk's critics were to argue that the president, 120 years before Tonkin Gulf, had already involved his nation in an undeclared war.

REINFORCEMENTS came in from both sides. There were scattered killings. On April 24, 1846, Maj. Gen. Mariano Arista, a onetime resident of Cincinnati, took command of the Mexican army on the border. He informed Taylor war had begun. Taylor said this was unfortunate and hoped negotiations could continue in Mexico City.

But at the capital, the belligerent Gen. Mariano Paredes y Arillaga had succeeded Herrera. The government miscalculated. It imagined America would stop short of war because of British threats in Oregon or intervention in Texas. Or that the Northern states would secede. It was just that — imaginary.

To overcome considerable resistance to the war, Polk called a mousetrap play not unfamiliar more than a century later. He coupled the war declaration in the same measure appropriating funds for Taylor's army. Opponents had to go along with Polk or vote against aid for American boys along the Rio Grande. Polk got his war.

He also, eventually, got New Mexico, Arizona and California. It cost $58 million for the war, $15 million paid Mexico and $64 million in veterans' pensions. Or 48 cents an acre for 529,017 square miles.

Slidell had been secretly authorized to go to $40 million in the negotiations. The escalation on the border had also escalated the price.

Next: Zachary Taylor.

POLK PROCEEDING TO THE WHITE HOUSE

Ellis Island to be open to public

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ellis Island, the first stop for at least 12 million immigrants en route to a new life in America, will be open to the public May 29 for the first time in 22 years.

The Interior Department says the island in New York Harbor will be open daily for limited visits and tours.

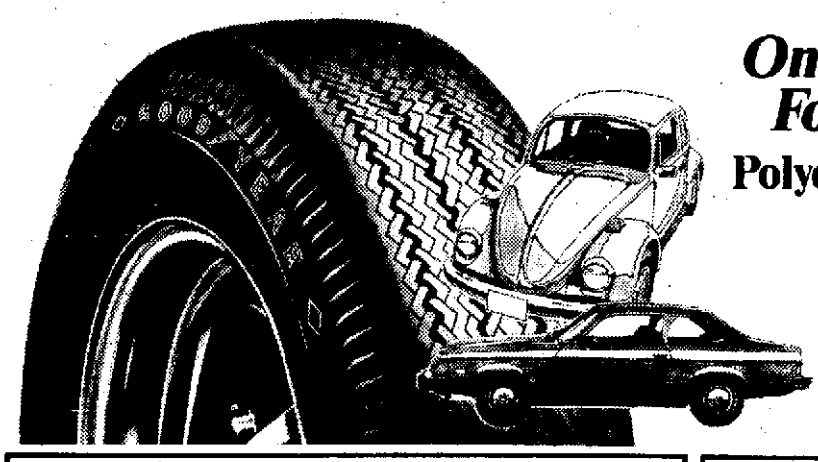

Ellis Island served as the country's main immigration reception area from 1892 until 1954. It was proclaimed a part of the Statue of Liberty National Monument by President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1965.

Gary Everhardt, director of the National Park Service, said the island and its structures had deteriorated since it was closed in 1954. But he added the Park Service was able to open the island because of a recent $1 million congressional appropriation for partial rehabilitation and cleanup of facilities.

Wrigley area proud of its new Pacific Avenue 'face-lifting'

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

Long Beach's most beautiful thoroughfare today just might be an eight-block stretch of Pacific Avenue crossing the Wrigley District between Willow Street and Pacific Coast Highway.

Widened and resurfaced, with the addition of a new center divider and rebuilt, tree-dotted sidewalks, Pacific's appearance pleases business people and residents alike.

Many of the numerous shops lining Pacific have been painted and polished. Few storefront windows stare out vacantly.

According to area entrepreneurs, business is good, and getting better.

It wasn't always so. Business folk along those eight blocks agonize even now over an Independent, Press-Telegram article in January, 1974 that questioned whether their green and pleasant neighborhood could survive an onslaught of urban blight then dimming Pacific Avenue.

"The author exaggerated considerably in his description of us," jeweler Arthur Noda said recently. "Things were never as bad as he said.

"But still, he woke people up, and, yes, I would say the renaissance of the Wrigley District results from that article."

His is a view shared by many of his fellow merchants along Pacific.

As Noda talked, motor traffic flowed smoothly along the avenue, refurbished by the city during the past year for about $700,000. Palms and other greenery grow in a median strip dividing what now is a four-lane street.

One of the district's numerous optimists is Bob R.M. Stone, a former police officer who now operates an accounting-business service agency and edits the "Wrigley Bulletin and News." That monthly publication circulates to about 10,000 residents and businesses, serving as their bulletin board and rallying point.

From Stone's vantage point, "Business is good and, no, I can't think of any real problems."

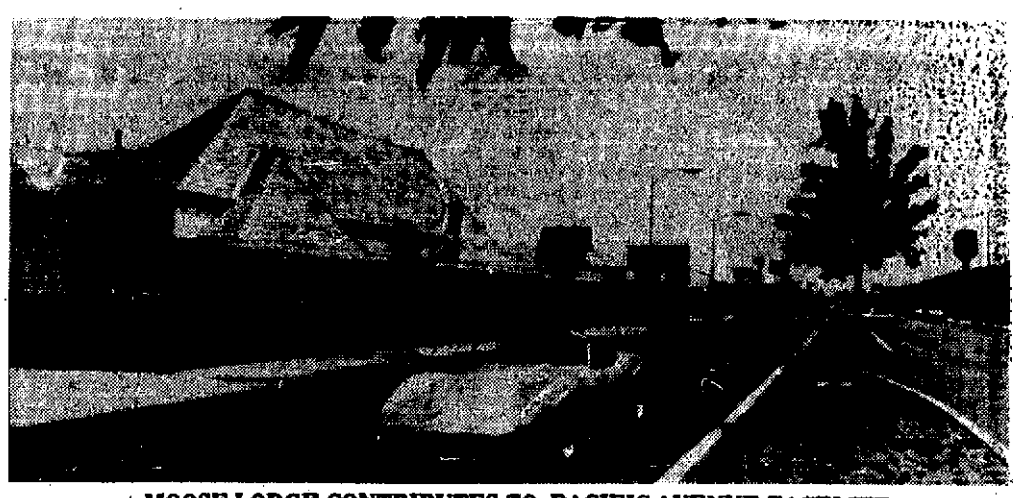

To Stone, as to others, part of this vigorous rebirth of spirit stems from a declining crime rate, brought about in part by the Wrigley Patrol.

This little group of CB-band radio-equipped volunteers keeps eyes and ears open for lawbreakers while driving through the community at all hours, summoning police when needed. Neither policemen nor vigilantes, they represent, he said, the community's determination "to make this a better place to live and work."

The patrol is but one community-building activity begun since the ebb of early 1974.

Recorded in the newsletter are details of other comparable projects such as the recent "Wrigley Spring Fling" parade across the district, successful sidewalk sales, social gatherings, coordinated beautification projects and the conversion of a closed restaurant into a Moose Lodge. And, chorus and verse, "Don't forget the I.P-T article — it could still be right ..."

Military on parade

Thousands turned out Saturday afternoon to watch the 17th annual Armed Forces Day Parade in Torrance. Among the more than 100 military and civilian entrants in what was billed as "the largest Armed Forces Day Parade in the United States" were "Uncle Sam," and the band from the Southern California Military Academy in Signal Hill, above. Would rather fight than flee

Residents form anticrime co-ops in N. Long Beach

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Even in its barest outline, the story carries a dull edge of terror to it.

It happened on a weekend afternoon at Coolidge Park in North Long Beach. A baseball game was in progress on the park's only diamond when a group of young men came onto the field in long overcoats and threatened the players if they didn't break up the game and leave.

This is the first of a three-part series.

There was something palpably menacing about the coats, not to mention the weapons they possibly concealed; and the players wisely decided that the better part of valor lay in quiet retreat.

If they didn't know it then, they learned it later. The interlopers were members of the Crips, a gang of Compton-area toughs whose long coats are their trademark.

MORE recently, members of the Crips intimidated a number of youngsters at Hamilton Junior High School, according to Sgt. Melvin Bailey, head of the Long Beach Police Department's diversion unit, which deals with youthful offenders.

Gang intimidation is not a frequent occurrence at North Long Beach recreational facilities, but it has taken place often enough, says Stan Penland, a district supervisor of the City Park Department, that many residents are fearful of sending their youngsters alone to the parks.

"There's no pattern to their showing up," says Penland of the young hoodlums, not all of whom, of course, are members of the Crips. "They drop in occasionally here and there."

A month ago, they assaulted a park director. At other times they've bullied park-goers. "It's been going on in North Long Beach for about three years."

YOUTH GANGS are hardly an extraordinary phenomenon these days. Nor are Americans generally surprised by the news — issued periodically by the FBI — that crime is on the rise throughout the country. What may be surprising, though, is their response to it — at least in selected communities across the land, where neighborhood organizations and block clubs are springing up in surprising numbers. North Long Beach is one of those communities.

Crime is by no means the only reason for the formation of the groups.

The compelling issue varies from community to community. In some cases it's racial cooperation, in others a desire to improve the physical condition of a neighborhood. Sometimes it's simply a need to "get to know each other," says Ann Schreuder, who has done a study of neighborhood groups for the Calvin College Social Research Center in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Still, crime is so prevalent that, in most cases, a sense of mutual protection either accompanies or underlines the other goals and strategies. And it's that underlying concern that was responsible for the formation of two North Long Beach groups: Concerned Citizens of North Long Beach and the College Square Neighborhood Association.

Six months ago, Concerned Citizens of North Long Beach rose like a phoenix out of the smoldering anger of a community that felt threatened at once by crime and pornography. But there was an accompanying anxiety to the anger — an anxiety born of the fear that increasing numbers of blacks were moving into the area and bringing crime along with them.

Whatever the explanation for the crime, whatever the social and economic roots of it, many North Long Beachers could only see what, to them, seemed like an inescapable correlation— as the area's black population grew, so did the incidence of burglaries, robberies and assaults.

L.B. millionaire, 40, breaking new ground

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

When Ron Cannady landed in Long Beach eight years ago, his total assets consisted of a tool chest and a small amount of cash.

Today, at age 40, he's a millionaire ("at least, that's what the government says"), owns a 707 jet airliner ("that's the wildest story of all") and is president of a multimillion-dollar firm which does business around the world.

Last week, another impossible dream came true when one of his subsidiaries, Cal-Aerotron, broke ground for a $1.5 million Westwings Center, which, according to Cannady, "will be unlike any hangar ever built before."

The two-story steel, concrete and glass structure will be constructed on a seven-acre site adjacent to the traffic-control tower at Long Beach Airport, 3521 E. Spring St.

It will be the largest facility of its kind in the western United States, Cannady says.

Even more unusual is the nature of the businesses to be housed there, according to Cannady. He's billing it as "the world's most modern and complete jet-support facility."

In addition to tenants who will help establish it as a one-stop aircraft-service center, the 52,000-square-foot structure will be headquarters for all of Cannady's corporate offices.

The parent Aerotron company, which started out doing a $100,000 business the first year, has grown to include a fleet of subsidiaries with names like Aerotron, Ltd.

Poverty war funds approved

The Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunity has received authorization for two overdue federal poverty war grants totaling nearly $800,000, director Bud Weisbart announced Saturday.

The $549,562 Head Start grant, due in March, and $250,000 for other programs due April 1, have been approved and await signatures of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and others. The money should be in the hands of the commission by the end of the month, Weisbart said.

The authorization means that the commission's current cash flow problems will ease and the fears of some delegate agencies that they might not be able to meet current payrolls are at an end, he added.

The delay came about, Weisbart said, because of an impasse in the Head Start operation which stalled signoff agreements. That impasse was resolved by a compromise in February, but the funding was delayed.

The other funds had been delayed because a necessary form had not been signed by a commission staff member.

Model T cars in annual race today

Antique cars from throughout the state were scheduled to converge on Signal Hill today for the Long Beach Model T Club's 17th annual Model T Hill Climb.

A club spokesman said more than 80 cars and trucks were to participate in the event, which tests the durability of the vintage vehicles on a 22 per cent grade up a one-tenth mile stretch of Hill Street from Temple Avenue.

He said all entries must have a Model T frame and engine.

Time trials begin at about 8:30 a.m., and actual competition, with a trophy awarded to the driver with the fastest time up the hill, is scheduled from 10 a.m. until about 2:30 p.m., the spokesman said.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

CHARITY COMES in all sizes. It can be as small as the word "love" or as big as the 12-foot-by-5-foot therapeutic pool under construction in Nell Meckna's backyard in College Park Estates.

But let Mrs. Meckna tell you the story as she told it to me a few days ago:

"I have multiple sclerosis, and my doctor suggested we put in a therapeutic pool for exercising.

"We contacted Hy Pesner of Hy Pesner Pools in Orange, and after working with several designers, decided on a 12-foot-by-5-foot pool with jets, seats, hand rails, etc.

"Now comes the unbelievable part: The entire pool is being given to me. Many workmen are donating their time, effort and materials at no cost to me. My total expense is $1, and that only to meet a legal requirement.

"NO ONE ASKED me to write this letter, but you can surely understand that in some way, I'd like these people publicly thanked and recognized. This kind of thing doesn't happen very often any more."

I went out to see Mrs. Meckna, who lives on Vermont Street with her husband, Paul, a teacher at Millikan High School, and two sons, Steven, 14, and Brian, 8. I found a living room filled with sunshine and a happy woman just bursting to tell the world "how kind people are."

"The pool is going to be more than a pool to me. It will be a daily reminder that this old world isn't so bad after all."

Mrs. Meckna, a former teacher of physical education, has always been a giver. She's been involved with her community, active in youth projects, particularly the Cub Scouts. She's the kind of person who always makes time for others. This may explain the benefaction of the therapeutic pool. Providence decided that this time Nell Meckna, noncomplainer and doer of good works, would be on the receiving end.

THE MEN WHO are donating their time, materials and labor haven't broadcast their charity. It was just a spontaneous expression of goodwill, no strings attached.

I think recognition is in order, that attention should be paid to a good work that otherwise might pass unnoticed by the community at large. So let's hear it for Hy Pesner of Orange and these good neighbors:

Jack E. Elms, Tustin, Hy Pesner Pools; Walter John Carney Jr., Long Beach, Gene F. Holle, La Palma, and John J. Moore, Buena Park, the excavators; Steve Baumgardner, Huntington Beach, and Joe Parsley, Anaheim, plumbers; Gene Hargis, Woodcrest, and Robert Feeney, Orange, who contributed the steel and their labors.

Walt Shook, Costa Mesa, put in the tile; Demar Barons, Orange, donated the plastering. The gunite work has been done by Frank Swingruber, Norco; Ross Rupp, Long Beach; Bill Mecey, Huntington Beach; Vernon Richmond, Riverside, and George Baris, Cucamonga. The electricians include Robert Bruce, Steve Paine and Clinton Richelieu, all of Garden Grove, and Dennis Hurley, Westminster.

THE HEATER IS from Ray-Pak Manufacturing Co., and the filter and pump from Sta-Rit Manufacturers. Hy Pesner donated the plumbing, decking and tile.

Mrs. Meckna reckons the value of the pool at $5,000 or more. When she looks out her picture window, she doesn't see a commercial for the swimming pool dealers but a human-bestowed blessing by tradesmen who really care about their neighbors.

Nell can't look for a cure for multiple sclerosis, but she can look for some relief, some needed exercises to restore tone to her diminished right leg, some balm from the warm waters. Come early June she can start using the pool twice a day and no longer have to make the drive to Community Hospital for therapy.

Having the pool in her backyard will be a big help, and Nell Meckna is grateful, ecstatically so. It means more to her than finding another Howard Hughes will. As a matter of fact, a billion dollars or so couldn't begin to buy her joy.

NELL'S HOUSE IS immaculate. She does most of the housework herself and superintends husband Paul and the boys, each a willing pitcher-in. One of her prides is the way Steven has solicited for multiple sclerosis fund campaigns. "He's covered the tract like a blanket."

In a way, Nell isn't looking forward to the completion of the pool. "I'll miss the workmen so much. They're more than workmen; they've become my friends through the weeks they've been here."

You really can't assess the value of the pool at $5,000 or more, for to Nell Meckna it's as priceless as the hearts that made it hers.

Editorials

Keep debate sensible

A few weeks back, Hubert Humphrey told us that candidates' attacks on Washington are "a disguised new form of racism."

This is a variant on the old charge that opponents of busing as the way to school integration are racists.

THE RATIONALE in the old case was that busing was the only way to achieve school integration; therefore, the reasoning went, anyone who was against busing must be against integration. In Humphrey's case, the reasoning was that government aids blacks and other minorities and that attacks on those who have been in power are therefore attacks on blacks and others who have been helped by government programs.

Since nobody runs as an out-and-out racist, it is true that racists have to find other ways to get their message across. But it does not follow that all, or even most, opponents of busing programs or of welfare chiselers or of big government are racists. Some may be unconscious racists, but many are consciously opposed to racism, favor integrated neighborhoods, and favor government programs to help the poor and to ease unemployment. They simply also favor neighborhood schools, feel that present welfare programs are badly thought out, and see — or think they see — that government is insanely bloated and unresponsive.

THE QUALITY of public debate is not helped by analyses such as Humphrey's. Legislative debate is not helped by such talk, either. It was pleasant, consequently, to discover that in British Columbia the provincial legislature has decided to try to eliminate certain kinds of language from official debate. The list of proscribed language bars legislators from calling each other guttersnipe or buffoon or similar things. It also forbids the lawmakers to describe each other as paranoid or senile or cowardly.

In the United States, the problem is rather different. That kind of personal attack is not much in evidence here. But it would be wholesome, we think, for our politicians to abandon all talk of "code words" or "hidden meanings" or "secret racism" or "covert sexism." It would be better, we think, if politicians stuck to debating the merit of what opponents said without undertaking lay psychoanalysis in an attempt to find unconscious meanings.

Priority attention, etc.

Gus Edwards was a New York grade school dropout who worked in a cigar factory and sang at night in lodge halls and on excursion boats. He made his way into vaudeville, and in 1906 wrote a musical comedy: School Days.

"School days, school days, dear old golden rule days," its title song began. "Readin' and 'ritin' and 'rithmetic, taught to the tune of a hick'ry stick."

Later, Edwards became an educator of sorts. His proteges in the fine arts of vaudeville included Eddie Cantor and George Jessel.

Vernon A. Hinze made it all the way through Custer High School in Milwaukee and Wisconsin State College in the same city. Later he received a master's degree from the University of Wisconsin and the doctor of education degree from USC. Seventy years after Edwards defined the role of education, Hinze presented a "Statement of Philosophy" to the Long Beach Unified School District Board, which had just named him superintendent.

"We must," Dr. Hinze declared, "give priority attention to the basic skills — reading, writing, communicating, and the mathematical processes — in all grades."

The more things stay the same, the more educators look for new and longer ways to say them.

BERRY'S WORLD

"I've written a joke for you which will require keeping a straight face. Do you think you can do it?"

When the experts can't help

SACRAMENTO — One of the stranger aspects of the debate over nuclear energy prompted by Proposition 15 is the disagreement about whether the California Legislature should have review authority over nuclear power plant decisions of the State Energy Commission.

Strange after what we've learned and are still learning about the dangers of allowing government agencies — such as the CIA and FBI — to function without legislative review.

BUT STRANGE ALSO because the illogic of the arguments against legislative review of nuclear energy matters seems so obvious.

Both the initiative and the legislative package introduced as an alternative to the initiative provide for legislative review, and opponents of that provision make two arguments.

First, they say, the Legislature lacks the expertise to deal with what is an incredibly complex technical subject, and the Energy Commission possesses, or can acquire, that expertise.

And second, since the Legislature is a political body, what should be a purely technical subject is certain to become mired in politics.

There is one response to both arguments, and that is that there are sociological as well as technological aspects of nuclear energy. The two cannot be separated, and a political evaluation and consensus is as necessary and as valid as a purely scientific evaluation and consensus.

AS AN ANALOGY, virtually every scientific study made validates the contention that children who drink fluoridated water generally have better teeth than children who do not.

If scientific considerations were the only considerations to have weight, then state and local health departments would long since have ordered that fluorides be added to drinking water.

But the citizenry has determined that there are other considerations to be weighed, and so it is elected entities which are directly responsible to the people who have the next-to-final say. The final say, of course, is reserved to the people.

Nuclear energy is no less a subject for political consideration.

For openers, all the "experts" have brought to the debate is a balance of scientific jargon on both sides of the issue.

A SECTION OF the excellent analysis of the pro and con arguments heard by the Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

Assembly Committee on Resources, Land Use and Energy during 15 days of hearings illustrates the point.

"To any lay observer, the claims and counterclaims that are made about the safety and wisdom of the nuclear power program in this country are bewildering," the section states.

"Scientists themselves are unable to agree on where virtue lies. In a display of at least some levity, the public has been treated to the battle of the Nobel laureates, a game of escalating numbers.

"First, two Nobelists, Linus Pauling and Harold Urey, indicated their reservations about the continued development of nuclear power. Then, under the prodding of Hans Bethe, another Nobel prize winner, 32 scientists signed a statement indicating that in their view nuclear power was safe and a necessary energy option for this country; 11 were Nobel laureates.

"The Union of Concerned Scientists next circulated a petition indicating the need for caution and the need for more safety testing prior to rapid expansion of the use of nuclear power and obtained the supporting signatures of 2,300 scientists, a large proportion of whom were specialists in nuclear energy or nuclear physics."

ANOTHER GROUP of 2,000 members expressed concern for "potentially serious problems" with nuclear energy and the environment, and then the American Nuclear Society gathered 32,000 signatures on a declaration that both coal and uranium are needed as power sources and "there are no technical problems incapable of being effectively solved" in using either.

All of that aside, there is another grave, social question.

The potential for harm from nuclear fuels and devices because of human irrationality and/or criminality is obvious. Because of that potential, the security involved with the mining, refining, transporting and using of nuclear fuels, and the subsequent reprocessing and disposal, is intense, pervasive and expensive.

AS THE NUMBER of nuclear energy plants increase, the opportunity for irrationality and criminality increases, and the use of security and the consequent imping ing of our freedoms, including our privacy increases. Whether or not we want that is a purely political question.

The University of Washington's Kai Lee, co-chairperson of the Federal Energy Administration's oversight committee for a federally funded investigation of the socio economic impact of Proposition 15, said in his conclusion that "the choice embodied in the referendum is, I think, one of the rare occasions in modern life in which experts can tell the general public precious little about how it should vote."

It is appropriate here to substitute "the Legislature" for "general public."

The question, Lee said later in his statement, is "Can we live well without nuclear power? It is a question which democracy seems uniquely qualified to answer."

And a little grits on the side

WASHINGTON — The Northerner who ventures into Dixie soon discovers grits. Metaphorically speaking, that's mostly what we're getting in the campaign of Jimmy Carter.

For the unenlightened, it should be explained that grits, or hominy grits, are what you get when you take the husk off kernels of corn and grind the stuff to a nice white meal. You can mix grits with any leftover that's handy; you can fry grits like potato cakes; you can use grits to thicken a soup. Ordinarily, grits are encountered most often at breakfast, where you get them with salt, pepper and butter, or, if you're lucky, swimming in red-eye gravy.

Grits are a Southern institution. They reflect what might be termed the softer side of Southern life. They have no particular character of their own; they do not offend; they go down easy. Not counting the red-eye gravy, grits are wholly forgettable. They are something on the side; take 'em or leave 'em.

What Jimmy Carter's program amounts to is about one spoonful of gravy on a platterful of grits.

James J. Kilpatrick

The gentleman does advance one mildly novel proposal. To enhance better public understanding of executive policy, he says, "Cabinet members representing the President should meet in scheduled and televised public interrogation sessions with the full bodies of Congress." The idea is probably impractical; traditionalists in Congress would oppose it; but however feeble, it is an idea, and it provides the red-eye gravy.

Otherwise: mush. Carter is in favor of government that is trustworthy, honest, and open. Carter believes that the activities of lobbyists must be more thoroughly revealed and controlled. Carter says that minimum secrecy in government should be matched with maximum personal privacy for citizens. The candidate wants judges and ambassadors chosen on merit only.

"As important as honesty and openness are," says the gentleman, "they are not enough. There must also be substance and logical direction in government." Could anyone disagree?

Carter gives us his "specific steps." For one, "we must abolish and consolidate hundreds of obsolete and unnecessary federal programs and agencies." An "agency," in federal parlance, is something more than a mere advisory committee or a paper council. A federal "program" ordinarily involves a service mandated by Congress. Carter would abolish or consolidate "hundreds" of agencies and programs. He would?

He wants a "practical and comprehensive national health program." If he would give us a little more gravy, or even some salt, pepper and butter, he would inform us what this program would cost, how it would be financed, and how it would work. He would similarly fortify his "comprehensive education program." He would give us something to chew on.

Carter is against loopholes; he is against gross tax inequities, porkbarrel projects, political corruption, and the waste of energy resources. He is in favor of good health, fair profits for farmers, fair prices for consumers, and high ethical standards. "The time for American intervention in all the problems of the world is over," he says. "But we cannot retreat into isolationism."

And so on. Carter's account of his early years contains much that is impressive, much that commands respect: Good honest pork chops, if you please. Fried chicken. Turnip greens. Solid stuff. But when he gets to the main course — when he gets to presidential substance — what we get is something on the side. What we get is grits.

The Class of 1976

In the next couple of weeks, we will be launching a new class of high school and college graduates into the third century of the republic.

What does the older generation have to say to the young at a time like this? At this year's baccaclaureate ceremonies, Yale President Kingman Brewster revived the recently neglected subject of personal responsibility and the Good Society.

Maybe, Brewster said, as we move into the third century of our independence, we should also be moving into a third stage of what we are all about, as persons, individually, and as a people.

The first stage of our history, Brewster suggested, was concerned with political freedom. The second was concerned with economic freedom, freedom from scarcity, freedom from want.

Perhaps in 1976, he suggested, there was a chance to reach out to a more positive ideal, to achieve a society of mutual helpfulness "whose greatest aspiration is to give all its members a chance to make a constructive difference in each other's lives."

"Power and wealth," he said, "can both be achieved by sheer acquisitive manipulation. But success, even to the powerful and to the wealthy, is measured by the extent to which they feel that, by what they have done, they have added something to the fulfillment of others."

These are the themes of the old baccalaureate addresses of the religious colleges of New England, the South, and the Middle West a generation or so ago.

"If I am right," Brewster told the graduates, "that the goodness of a society should be measured in part by the extent to which it encourages its citizens to be useful to each other, then the vitality of the independent, nonprofit, voluntary sector is a major index of its success.

"When I become discouraged," he added, "about the seeming inadequacies of 'business can do no wrong' or 'laissez faire' on the one hand, or the prescriptions of the monolithic mobilized state on the other, it gives me some solace to think that perhaps both rampant social Darwinism and rampant Marxian collectivism start with too mean, too narrow a concept of human motivation. . . ." Therefore, he concluded, there was a place for satisfaction in usefulness to others. President Brewster would probably not have ventured to make such a speech at Yale even a year ago.

But now the country is groping for its roots. Compared to any other country or system, it is spectacularly successful, but lately it hasn't been very happy.

No wonder, then, that the Class of '76, looking for jobs when we already have over seven million out of work, is looking for new leadership. For years they have been taught that it was their destiny to have all the material things they needed. That was the ideal placed before them, to be acquisitive and to be ever richer and richer.

Now even the politicians are promising less and the president of Yale is praising "usefulness." Maybe the third century of the Republic won't be so bad after all.

Letters to the editor

Mansell deserves confidence

On the verge of retirement, I would like to make this statement.

I am a 25-year city employe, a fact of some personal pride to me. It is far more difficult to pass the mental, written, physical and oral tests necessary to achieve classified employment than it is to win a popularity contest to public office.

As a city employe, I have been an active participant in both employe and civic projects and affairs. That is why I feel qualified to comment on the many unwarranted attacks that have been made in letters to the editor against a fellow city employe, John R. Mansell.

John is the first — and only — city employe to have started at the bottom and worked his way to the top job in city government. He began as a clerk in the public service department over 30 years ago. By sheer ability and hard work, he advanced through positions as accountant, office manager, administrative assistant to the department head of public service, and then was appointed by the City Council to the office of city auditor in 1951, replacing the retiring official. Two months later, in a regular municipal election, he won a majority of the votes against the opposition of nine other candidates. He was re-elected to the office of city auditor for four successive terms.

In 1961, Mr. Mansell was appointed city manager to replace Sam Vickers, who had resigned. John was selected following a nationwide screening of top municipal administrators, receiving the unanimous vote of the nine-man City Council. His over-all record since then has more than justified that confidence. In view of what has been accomplished by the city under his leadership in the past 15 years, I find the carping criticism by the uninformed to be nauseating.

What are the accomplishments? How about the development of the offshore oil fields, a gigantic industrial project accomplished just off our recreational beaches and achieved without the slightest disturbance to those beaches. And this was achieved under a contract that provided both city and state with returns from that field that are unmatched anywhere. Or take bridges: the old Pontoon Bridge replaced by the Gerald Desmond Bridge, the award-winning Queensway Bridge connecting harbor and downtown, new bridges at Wardlow Road, Studebaker Road and the Alamitos Bay areas. Remember the construction of Belmont Pier, the Sea Scouts and Camp Fire Girls buildings on the bay, redevelopment of Marine Stadium, Marine Park, shoreline parking lots, Belmont Olympic Pool and Plaza, the widening, beautification and increased safety provided by installation of planted dividing islands on Ocean Boulevard, Long Beach Boulevard, Pacific Avenue and the other principal streets and highways in town.

El Dorado Park, plus nine new parks, were developed during his tenure and a city-wide street-lighting program has been initiated and continued under his direction. The renovation of our street bus system has developed under John's guidance, and further improvements in service, schedules and rates have started with him. His was the idea for service through special buses to the handicapped, and reduced rates for senior citizens. His leadership led to the elimination of the shoreline ghetto, the "Jungle," and its replacement through urban redevelopment of the Oceangate Project resulting in the soaring new buildings of Wells Fargo and Union Bank. This has led to selection of the site by Norris Industries for its planned international headquarters building.

John Mansell supported acquisition of the Queen Mary, and despite the army of second-guessers, it was an excellent move fulfilling his instructions to obtain an internationally known tourist attraction for Long Beach. Not only was the vessel bought and delivered without cost to the taxpayer, not only did she grant Long Beach instant worldwide recognition, but she created some 800 new jobs, gave employment to hundreds more during conversion (while neighboring areas were racked by recession), all accomplished without cost to the taxpayer. And she is a constant contributor of sales tax revenue to both city and state. The ship has been a catalyst in the city's rejuvenation: she brought us the Queensway Hilton Hotel, and inspired the Sasaki-Walker report and the proposed Downtown Mall development by Ernest Hahn Corporation.

I do not maintain that John Mansell never makes mistakes; he is as human as the rest of us, with the same human failings we all have. But his successes far outnumber his failings. A .350 batting average would make you a star in professional baseball. John's batting average as a professional city manager is unmatched anywhere in the country.

If John Mansell is guilty of anything, it is of taking too seriously hs role of "public servant." Because he has tried to serve all the people of Long Beach, he has stepped on toes and hurt feelings of one group or another along the way. Perhaps that accounts for the sudden and recent orchestration of unwarranted hate mail.

John Mansell knows me on sight, just as he does hundreds of other city employes. But he would have to think hard once or twice to remember my name or to recall what I do. Nonetheless, on the basis of his outstanding and extended accomplishments, I firmly believe that John R. Mansell is the best city manager that Long Beach has had in its 55 years of experience with the system of government. I also believe that his record will stand unchallenged and untarnished long after his petty critics are gone and forgotten.

Where's George?

I used to look at the television column to see who Johnny Carson's guests would be. In recent years I look to see who his guest host will be.

George Robeson has become the Johnny Carson of journalism in this respect. If he's not recuperating from a fall off a camel or off because of an undisclosed illness, he's on vacation. Friday's paper tell us he's "taking some time off."

I look forward to his column each morning. Sometimes he's as interesting as Sydney Harris; sometimes as humorous as Erma Bombeck. Perhaps if you offered him more money it would give him the incentive to write a few extra columns to be available at the times he wasn't. If this isn't feasible, then you should emulate the Tonight show and always have a guest writer waiting in the wings. I'm sure there's local talent available (are Bob Wells or Dixon Gayer still around?). Or Arthur Hoppe would be a satisfactory substitution.

Flawed proposal

I have searched vainly in both the proposal itself and in arguments supporting Proposition 15 to find something constructive. No alternative power source is called for or even acknowledged to be needed in this measure, which purports to be directed toward safety and would stop expansion of fission-generated power. We may be unable in five or ten years, for want of energy, to provide the goods and services needed to sustain life, but at least we shall die safely.

Let Proposition 15 require that money earmarked for nuclear expansion be put into tapping the geothermal resources in Imperial Valley, and I'll be able to vote for it.

Keep our canal

Our canal is in danger — our canal and the land around it known as the Panama Canal Zone.

I've heard that certain politicians are being called irresponsible for stating that "we bought the Panama Canal, so we shall keep it." Can someone explain to me why we do not own it when we paid the Panamanian government for the privilege of building a canal and paid the individual land owners for the land itself?

Retain sovereignty

We must retain our residual sovereignty in the Panama Canal Zone until a United States of South America evolves to share this responsibility with us.

For a reasonable time, we should reserve the next star in our flag for Puerto Rico. Then we can decide whether to consider accepting a petition from Panama.

Some great moments for clothing salesmen

NEW YORK — This shoe store sold me a pair of yellow shoes. I didn't want yellow shoes. Nobody wants yellow shoes. This store sold them to me anyhow.

It was because I went into the store wearing an electric green tweed sports jacket which a men's shop sold me seven years ago. I hadn't wanted a green sports jacket at the time, especially in tweed or electric green, but the shop had sold it to me anyhow. I wore it in public a few times and several people died laughing, so I put it away for a long time.

AFTER A while I decided I had to have a jacket, so I went to a haberdasher and bought a blue blazer. I didn't want this particular blue blazer. It was one of those loose basket weaves. Even in the shop I could see the threads breaking. Dangling blue strings hung in festoons from cuffs and lapels. I knew immediately that this blazer was going to be a disaster, but the haberdasher sold it to me anyhow.

After several weeks the blazer had unraveled so extensively that when I went out in the evening women would stop everything, bring scissors and spend the night cutting off loose threads. No shedding mastodon ever dropped as much wool as that blazer.

The only solution was to buy a suit. At an elegant men's store, the salesman studied the haze of blue lint through which I approached and quickly sized up his man. "I have just the suit for you," he said, departing triumphantly.

HE RETURNED with a gray suit of absolutely no distinction whatever, except that the store had been waiting for years for the perfect customer to sell it to.

The other salesmen clustered at a discreet distance, sensing that they were about to witness a historic moment — to wit, the unloading of this monstrous suit which had been the curse of the salesroom for decades. I put it on, trousers and jacket. It hung like potato sacks on a scarecrow on a windless day.

"Doesn't fit very well," I observed.

"Nothing to worry about," said the salesman. "It's a material that will stretch with wear. Look." He grabbed a handful of fabric and pulled, and indeed it stretched to twice its previous size. I didn't want this suit, but his attitude was take-it-or-leave-it since there was nothing else in the store suitable for my figure.

THE SUIT started growing as soon as it left the store. Within six months, both trouser legs were big enough to conceal watermelons and the jacket had grown downwards and was rapidly approaching the kneecaps. People began to have trouble finding me inside this suit, and I entered a psychic depression.

Let me confess here that it has always been my dream to be as smartly dressed as Cary Grant, my sartorial ideal. Yet, though I was perfectly willing to dress like Cary, the men's clothing salesmen of America seemed determined to treat me like the last chance to clean out the attic.

They had sold me neckties combining lavender, brown and pink in designs that made me look like an Easter egg. Once, when I was only 11 years old, they had sold me a green double-breasted pin-striped suit with a vest, which was the laugh riot of J.H.S. No. 1 in Baltimore.

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

A psychiatric men's wardrobe specialist studied the case. The problem, he said, was simple. Shoes. I needed a dynamic looking pair of shoes which would immediately proclaim to all clothing salesmen that I was not a man to be victimized with impunity.

THE PROBLEM, of course, was what to wear when I went to buy this magic footwear that would lead up the ladder to elegance. The blue blazer was out of the question. The threads now dangled so densely from the cuffs that they often got knotted around the fingers. My suit had stretched to such dimensions that policemen had taken to arresting it for appearing in public without a visible occupant.

The only thing left was my old electric green tweed sports jacket. Its appearance on the street must have been sensed immediately by every shop on Madison Avenue, for as I strolled toward the shoe store every doorway was filled with salesmen displaying the merchandise that had afflicted their attics for years.

WHAT A different selection they will produce when I am shod in my dynamic new shoes, I mused as I strode into the shoe store. The shoe salesmen were all pretending to notice nothing. Only one of them deigned to serve me. "Something in a nice yellow, I think," he murmured.

Cary Grant, tell me. What must a man do?

Bicentennial terror planned

WASHINGTON — A terrorist group has rebuilt a common tanker truck into a modern Trojan horse to infiltrate America's Bicentennial celebration and Canada's Olympic games. Confidential law enforcement reports show many terrorists have now fixed on these two events as their next battleground.

The terrorists have transformed the tanker truck into a rolling headquarters.

Jack Anderson

On the outside, the truck looks perfectly normal. It even has spigots which can drip oil.

BUT INSTEAD of petroleum products, the tank holds a terrorist office, dormitory and arsenal. It can accommodate 15 to 20 raiders from the hellish side of politics. American agents know about this mobile terrorist command post, but they haven't caught up with it yet.

Modern terrorists come from all sides of the political spectrum, but they share the concept that their cause will profit from disruption, disorder and bloodshed. Some are highly trained commandos, skilled in the nightmarish uses of our modern technology. The government reports warn onimously that terrorists might even use "nuclear materials" as radioactive poisons or to build bombs.

The United States and Canada are working together to prevent the terrorists from spoiling the Bicentennial and Olympic spectacles. Both the FBI and Royal Canadian Mounted Police are redoubling their efforts to stop the terriorists before they strike. The customs services of both countries are watching for smuggled weapons. The State Department has appointed a "coordinator for combating terrorism." An informal White House task force and the Canadian Ministry of External Affairs are also working on the counterterrorist campaign.

THE CLASSIFIED working papers of the two governments read like grim textbooks on insurgency warfare. The official documents show how the terrorists plan to follow classic guerrilla warfare strategems, mixing with the local populace between hit-and-run attacks. The terrorists also employ smuggling techniques from the worlds of international crime and espionage to move their weapons across borders.

The official reports discuss a variety of disguise and diversionary tactics the terrorists are known to use. They convert the ordinary into a camouflaged weapon. For example, camera-laden tourists are a standard sight at such events as Bicentennial pageants and Olympic games. But the official reports warn some "tourists" may be disguised terrorists and their cameras may be deadly weapons.

Lawmen have discovered, for example, that the new Polaroid cameras with large film packs can conceal small pistols whose grips have been removed. The ordinary Kodak film box, one intelligence report says, may be used by terrorists to hide tiny lethal devices known as "Dutch minigrenades."

GOVERNMENT AGENTS have also learned that terrorists may conceal small machine guns in attache cases. Trigger extensions protrude from the case. What appears to be an ordinary briefcase can be held "under the arm (to) fire into a crowded area," according to one document.

Intelligence reports suggest the terrorists are most likely to strike in July, the month that the Bicentennial celebrations reach their climax and the Olympic games open. Enormous numbers of tourists are expected at these events.

U.S. and Canadian officials have pinpointed some of the terrorist organizations which are expected to cause trouble. The Japanese Red Army, as a prime example, is described in the confidential reports as a group of no more than 30 anarchists. Yet they have succeeded in shocking the world by massacring 28 people at the Tel Aviv airport in 1972, hijacking a Japan Air Lines plane in 1973, bombing Shell Oil tanks in Singapore in 1974 and seizing the U.S. Embassy in Kuala Lumpur in 1975.

There is also the Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional Puertorriquena, which ostensibly seeks Puerto Rican independence from the United States. According to the official documents, this terrorist group blatantly claims credit for 10 U.S. bombings in October 1975. The official reports warn this group may work with the Puerto Rican Socialist Party, controlled by Fidel Castro, to disrupt the Bicentennial.

AN ANTI-CASTRO terrorist group, the Frente de Liberacion Nacional de Cuba, may "cause problems" at the Olympics because of Cuba's participation in the games. This group, according to the documents, "is known to possess a large amount of C-4 explosives, which it may use against pro-Castro and Soviet targets."

Perhaps the strangest group of terrorists, identified as a Bicentennial and Olympic threat, is the "Rastafarian Movement." The intelligence data says the group is also known as "the Niyabingi Order, the Miyamen, the Beardsmen, the Locksmen, the Rude Boys and the Dreads."

The Rastafarians, one of the oldest of the terrorist groups, is an all-black cult originating in Jamaica in 1930. They believe "that the past Emperor of Ethiopia, Haile Selassie, was the living God . . . and that the ways of the white man are evil."

The documents say that the Rastafarians advocate the liberal use of marijuana and have been associated increasingly with violent rebellion and terrorism. In New York City alone, they have an estimated 3,000 members of varying levels of activity.

LAW ENFORCEMENT agencies on both sides of the border are beefing up their antiterrorist campaign. But the key to defeating the terrorists lies with the populace. Terrorists need confusion, chaos and a submissive populace to operate successfully in any country. They describe themselves as the "fish" who will hide this summer in the sea of tourists.

If the people of the United States and Canada deny the terrorists the strategic hospitality they need, the fanatics among us will have more trouble and less success.

Residents form anticrime co-ops

There's little doubt now that the correlation brought a lot of hate to the surface and that more than a few who signed the group's petitions for police action were venting deep-seated hostilities. Yet it also seems true that the large majority of signers were honestly frightened by the threats to their safety.

"You have to distinguish between racism and legitimate fear," said a North Long Beach social worker, "and many people in North Long Beach are legitimately fearful of crime."

If Concerned Citizens struck a powerful chord in its anticrime pleas, it also found a response among those who felt strongly about the presence of sex book shops and theaters in the area (epecially along Atlantic Avenue near South Street).

In recent weeks, in fact, the group appears to have channeled its frustration and energies almost exclusively into the fight against pornography. In doing so, however, it seems to have created a gulf between itself and the smaller, more tightly knit College Square Neighborhood Association.

The College Square group, whose members live in a rectangular tract at the northwest extremity of the city, where Long Beach spills over into Compton, was started last December, according to its co-chairman, Tim Closs. It became "fully organized" in February.

Until recently, though, few outsiders were even aware of its existence. Its leaders did little to attract public attention, preferring not only to keep a low profile, but to direct their energies toward a neighborhood solution of the problem.

Where Concerned Citizens made it a point to demand municipal and police action to rid the area of crime and pornography, the College Square people shunned the pornography issue and set themselves the task of encouraging home security measures while trying to establish a sense of community in the area.

It was not a new strategy, but it made sense to a lot of people, including leaders of Concerned Citizens. The theory behind it is that by knowing their neighbors and watching out for one another, residents of an area can discourage criminals — especially burglars — from operating in the neighborhood.

In integrated areas like College Square, where there are four blacks to every six whites, the promotion of neighborliness inevitably lends itself to improved race relations — a side effect that's hard to ignore in the face of what seems to be an uneasy peace in many northern cities. In more than a few neighborhood groups, the promotion of integration is a deliberate strategy — or what Ann Schreuder calls "a positive orientation."

"It's as though people are saying 'Look, before things get worse, let's get together and do something about it. Let's make integration work. Let's stop waiting for City Hall to act, and let's do something about crime ourselves.'

"What we're really seeing," says Miss Schreuder, "is a save-the-city movement." What we're also seeing, say other observers, is a realization on the part of whites that they can't keep running. In a sense, it's an acknowledgement of the fact that the suburbs are becoming too remote and too expensive to make continued flight a realistic alternative — especially for those whose resources have been outstripped by the price of housing.

Terry McKeag and her husband, for example, are a working class couple who have lived in North Long Beach for the past six years. They have four children. And even if they were of a mind to flee, which they're not, they'd have nowhere to go, says Mrs. McKeag.

In addition to their house, which they bought for $20,000, they put an additional $7,000 into a pool, a wooden fence, an extra bath and a couple of additional bedrooms.

"We did a lot of the work ourselves," she says. "I can't afford to move now. I don't want to lose the investment we have in this house, and we can't afford to make the $300 or $400 monthly payments on a new house."

In the view of Mrs. Jean Gregg Milgram, executive director of National Neighbors, a Philadelphia-based federation of 82 interracial neighborhood groups, the widespread efforts to make integration work on a neighborhood basis represent an incipient grass roots movement in the country. The movement may in fact be spawning "a (new-found) sense of community in the cities," she says.

There's little doubt that the College Square association, even though it is not a member of National Neighbors, is part of that larger movement. Yet, hopeful as it sounds, the movement is not without its pains and problems, as the College Square people have discovered.

Two and-a-half decades of racial turmoil may have given the black man a healthier image of himself and knocked the underpinnings out from the system of white supremacy. But it has also left white city dwellers with a confused mixture of fear and anxiety — and, in the case of many, a hostility toward blacks that is only faintly disguised by polite deference.

The meeting room of the Starr King Presbyterian Church in North Long Beach is painted a pleasant pastel green. For some reason — perhaps because the weather was nice, perhaps because it was Sunday — the 40 to 50 persons attending the monthly meeting of the College Square Neighborhood Association seemed to reflect the mood of their surroundings. For there was an air of subdued friendliness in the room.

After the minutes of the last meeting were read and a number of other items taken up — including a membership report and the announcement of a yard sale — a short film was shown to demonstrate the various safeguards against burglary in the home.

The film concluded with the statement that crime is a community problem, and that only a community can solve it. "Keep an eye on your neighbor's house," it advised. "Be your neighbor's keeper."

"That's what we're all about," said Tim Closs, adding his own epilogue to the film. "Neighbors can do more for each other than the police. . . ." But then he smiled and interrupted himself. "Okay, that's the end of my sermon for today. It's time for the guest speaker."

Herbert Levi, assistant affirmative action officer for the City of Long Beach, had been invited to discuss redlining — the practice of denying home loans in so-called high-risk areas regardless of a borrower's credit rating. The high-risk areas are usually black or integrated neighborhoods.

As Levi conceded the next day, though, redlining wasn't the best subject to discuss before a group more interested in crime prevention than lending practices. "After I saw the movie," he said, "I thought to myself: 'how do I tie in redlining to crime'?"

But he took a crack at it in a talk that ranged from housing discrimination and racial prejudice to job discrimination, poor schooling and upward mobility among blacks. Approaching the conclusion of his talk, he posed a rhetorical question: what happens when members of a minority move into an otherwise all-white neighborhood?

But before he had a chance to say any more, a man in one of the middle rows interrupted him. The man, in his mid-fifties perhaps, was obviously agitated. He had sat through Levi's talk, quietly shaking his head; and now, unable to contain himself any longer, he blurted out his own response.

"I'll tell you what happens," he said. "The crime rate goes up. We get ripped off. So what's a civil rights lecture got to do with it?" he demanded.

Levi was taken aback, but he kept his composure. A couple of persons chided the man for interrupting, saying he could have a chance to speak later. But it was too late. The man's anger had risen to the point where there was nothing left to do but let it run its course.

"We don't like getting robbed and raped," he shouted. "The only reason I'm here is to keep my wife from being raped." With that, he rose and slammed the door behind him.

Levi, meanwhile, was urging him to stay. "I'm getting to that. . . ." he said. But the rest was anticlimactic, and a little embarrassing.

Later, however, Closs reasserted his optimism. "We're going to make it," he said. "We're going to have a good community."

Closs, who is black, also disclosed what he had just learned—that a friend of the man's wife had recently been raped by a young black man just outside the church they were meeting in.

"I can understand his anger," Closs said sympathetically.

Scouting around

These young girls — photographed at the foot of Junipero Avenue — were just a small part of the picture Saturday. There were more than 1,000 Brownie Girl Scouts gathered on the beach for a day of fun dubbed by its organizors as Footprints in the Sand Day. The girls, 6 to 9, participated in games and relay races in the morning and staged a kite flying contest in the afternoon.

Mexican rodeo debut

Charreria, the national sport of Mexico, will be making its debut in Long Beach today when three teams from as far away at Tijuana compete in a series of rodeo events at the Long Beach Mounted Guard arena at Wardlow Road and Golden Avenue.

The charreada will begin at 2 p.m. Officials of the Los Angeles Charros have leased the arena for the summer and will be hosting other competitions.

The group has added bleachers to seat about 500 spectators around the arena, and refreshments will be available at the arena cafe. Admission is $3 per person.

In addition to the Los Angeles Charros team, squads from Tijuana and La Puente will compete in today's charreada.

The events in a charreada are a true test of a charro's horsemanship, demanding strength, speed and most of all agility.

While most of the events are similar to those in an American rodeo, they are much more difficult.

In the bareback bronco and Brahma bull riding events, the charros must ride the animal until he stops bucking. In the American versions, a rider must stay in the saddle for only eight seconds.

The most exciting and dangerous charreada event is "paso de la muerte," or the pass of death. The charro is literally gambling his life when he springs from his own horse onto the bare back of a wild horse as they run full speed across the arena.

Other events include "colear," or tailing, where a rider wraps the tail of a steer around his leg and then manuevers his horse sharply to the side to down the steer, and "mangananas" and "piales," which are roping tricks.

There also is a team roping competition, where one of the charros attempts to rope the steer's head and his partner tries to rope the animal's heels.

The scoring in charreada roping events is based on style and not time, as it is in American rodeos.

Future charreadas planned for the arena include a competition featuring some of the top charros from Mexico City on May 30 and the California state championships, which will be held in August.

The team that wins the state championship will qualify for the U.S. national finals in Colorado, and the U.S. champion will earn a birth in the overall Mexico championship.

SENIORS PUT ON SHOW TRACING U.S. HISTORY

A celebration of "200 Years of a Great Idea" will be held by Long Beach senior citizens Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Bixby Park, Cherry Avenue and First Street, and the public is invited.

More than 100 costumed seniors will take part in a state presentation of music and tableaux, tracing the history of the United States "from the first Thanksgiving to the walk on the moon," according to the Senior Bicentennial Committee.

Special recognition will be given to Long Beach residents who are 100 years of age or older.

'Old-time' circus coming

An attempt to revive the old-time circus hoopla, complete with big-top, midway rides and side shows, will come to Carson Wednesday when Circus Vargas opens a six-day run.

Billed as "resplendent with the rich tradition of the circus as it once was in America" the new show will be presented at a site just off the San Diego Freeway at Avalon Boulevard.

Put together by Clifford E. Vargas, the circus features more than 160 performers and animals in a 5,000-seat tent. Vargas calls it "the world's largest 'under canvas' circus".

I,P-T article spurred beautification project

A growing number of area businessmen are buying the property they occupy, said groceryman Ray Coffman, operator since 1950 of Ray & Roy's Market and owner for the past several years of the building he rented for a long time.

When Coffman set up shop a quarter-century ago, he said, "The Wrigley was an upper-middle-class neighborhood that ranked with the best in Long Beach."

And it's still good. "There are many two-paycheck families living here," and the number of patrons for his self-described "carriage trade market" continues to grow.

New businesses continue to open. Former Londoner Don Seyes closed a downtown shop and consolidated another facility into a single, central Wrigley British Imports shop. Not the least of his reasons is the ease of parking along non-metered (although closely policed) district streets.

There are those who, like Noda, say "The Wrigley" is a microcosm of America.

A growing black population — Coffman estimates 10 per cent of his customers are black — is an observable trend even though formal figures are unavailable. This is not new, however.

"When I went to school here 30 years ago, there were black students, Orientals, kids from the island, attending with me," recalled community leader John Ward. "District schools — Birney and Lafayette Elementary, George Washington Junior High — were and are microcosms of a large (ethnically diverse) city.

"We always were integrated — and I think we're more so than ever now!"

Ward's reaction to the 1974 I,P-T article — "one of anger and frustration" — helped spark the so-visible renaissance. His initial letter the following day brought 100 people to a meeting in which a new and vital Wrigley Association was formed.

From the first, the record shows, people of many races and colors moved into a desirable real estate development. Its sturdy roots were planted well before World War I amidst willow clumps then dotting a tidal-flood plain.

As people arrived, and houses — many of them California Spanish bungalows — arose, the willows disappeared while an occasionally rampaging Los Angeles River was brought under permanent, concrete control.

Today there seemingly are no extremes of wealth or poverty, although the district, until about 1950, ranked with Bixby Knolls as two of Long Beach's "better" neighborhoods.

"No one is starving here," dryly commented a veteran Wrigley watcher.

"Here" is a nearly rectangular area bounded on the east and west, respectively, by Long Beach Boulevard and the Los Angeles River flood control channel. The southerly limit — depending on who's talking — either is Anaheim Street or, more often, Coast Highway.

Wardlow Road marks the district's north edge — except to those who would extend it to include an irregularly-shaped area between the San Diego Freeway and Wardlow.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of mature trees shade the district's handsome streets. Neat, well-kept homes, many in the classic "Southern California Spanish" architecture of the 1920s, line those thoroughfares.

Except for apartment houses concentrated chiefly toward the south end, these primarily fall in the R-1 single-family category. Pacific, to many the Wrigley's "Main Street," is but one of four important business streets serving the region. The others are Willow Street, Pacific Coast Highway and Long Beach Boulevard.

The 1974 I,P-T article, describing this "small but significant stretch of Pacific Avenue" as "neglected," with "decay apparent in many spots," questioned whether "a stiff broom and a new coat of paint" alone could resolve its difficulties.

It was a most disturbing question to area merchants. After all, clean up-paint up-fix up is a traditional American panacea for all ills afflicting society.

Despite the death some months earlier of a Wrigley Association, it was immediately apparent at the time to neighborhood leaders that an action- and goal-oriented organization to work for neighborhood betterment was urgently needed.

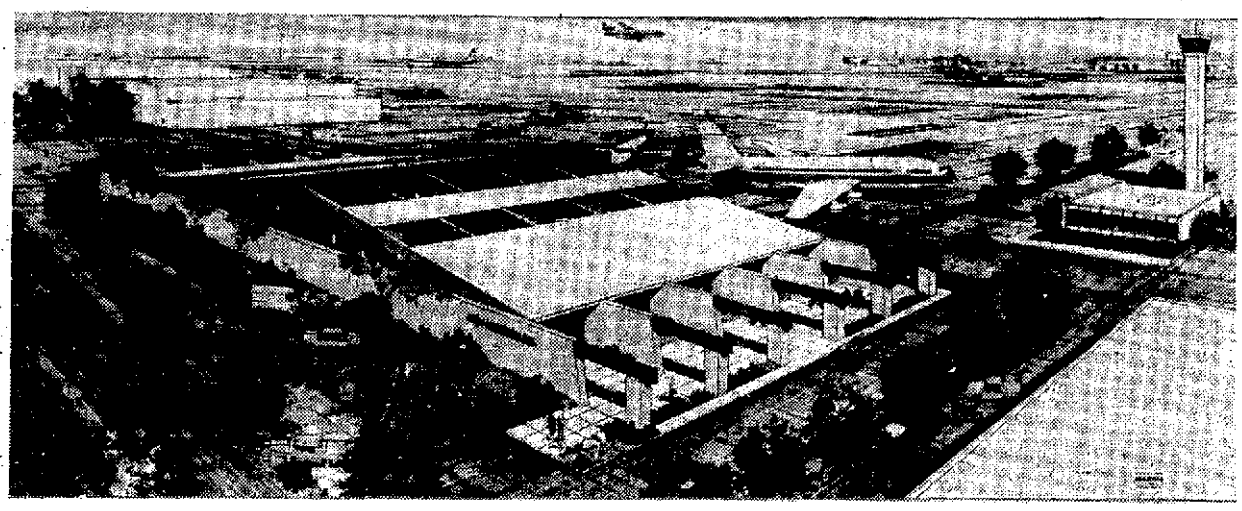

"We're grateful for the article — now," says Ward, president of a family-owned furniture, appliance and carpet company. "Then, we were angered ..."

Letters he sent out in the first angry flush to rally other Wrigleyites resulted in the formation of a new association to spearhead the counterattack. Strong and enduring foundations were laid for what would become the Wrigley Business and Professional Association.

His biggest fear today — and one shared by other area activitists — is that "we may get complacent, stop fighting for improvement.

"Why, you know? the next project we should take on is to do for Willow Street what's been done for Pacific!"

ARCHITECT'S CONCEPT OF WESTWINGS CENTER AT LONG BEACH AIRPORT

Cannady building Westwings Center

(London-based to conduct avionics operations throughout the United Kingdom, Europe, the Middle East and Africa), Airpower Accessory Overhaul Divison, Restock International and Meditron, Inc.

These companies provide about every kind of service an airplane could need to keep it in the air. For instance:

— They handle direct sales of electronic equipment and spares to all major airlines and to the military departments of allied nations.

— They overhaul, modify and install electronic and navigation systems for all types of jet aircraft.

— They design and engineer sophisticated aerial survey and flight-inspection systems for various allied governments.

And the list goes on.

Growth has been such that the new facility will be the fourth plant relocation since 1968, when Cannady started rewiring World War II DC3 parts on an eight-foot workbench in an attic at 2611 Spring St.

"We're spending $350,000 to make Westwings Center physically and aesthetically pleasing," Cannady said. "Spring Street needs all the help it can get."

He's been that kind of Long Beach booster since he first arrived here in 1968 after moving from hometown Miami because "I wanted to get as far away from there as possible."

His new project is pure Long Beach from blueprint to wallpaper.

The contractor (Carl Brooks, Inc.) is local. The financing agent (Bank of America) is local. And the wallpaper? That's another dream he had.

"I fell asleep on a flight to New York and dreamed about the wallpaper for the foyer-lounge," he said. "And would you believe I found it at a supply house right here in Long Beach?"

Which is something for a man who has made a dozen trips around the world in the past five years, plus eight trips to Europe and several to South America. "That was to get the company internationally accepted," he said.

His big coup came last December, though, when he made international headlines by flying off with an Air Vietnam Boeing 707 which he bought in Hong Kong from Pan American World Airways.

Reputedly carrying some top government officials and several million dollars in gold bullion, it was one of the last commercial flights to leave South Vietnam before the government fell in April 1975.

Cannady's part in the incident was loaded with mystery, international intrigue and a touch of humor. He still will not reveal how much he paid for the aircraft.

It all started as a straightforward business deal similar to a bid he made in New Jersey on the plush 707 formerly owned by fugitive financier Robert Vesco.

While attempting to negotiate that transaction, he heard about the Air Vietnam aircraft, which had been seized when it landed in Hong Kong from Saigon.

The British crown colony's government seized it because of liens, including some placed over unpaid service and storage fees owed by the South Vietnamese government, which had just gone out of business.

The former owner, Pan Am, which held a mortgage on the plane, asked the Hong Kong government for a court order to allow it to sell the plane and settle a $4,869,933.80 claim. The court agreed.

While the countries involved feuded about "air piracy" and international law and the new South Vietnamese government demanded return of the craft, Cannady went about his business of buying the plane and preparing to bring it back to Long Beach.

That wasn't easy. By international treaty, no country can register an airplane until the previous country issues a certificate of deregistry. But the previous government didn't exist.

So Cannady took his case to the U.S. State Department.

"We used a little trick called the Cuban Procedure," he said. "It was the same procedure applied when an aircraft was flown out of Cuba when Castro took over."

RON CANNADY

The humor came when Cannady took five Chinese out to Kai Tak Airport in Hong Kong one dark night and painted "Signal Hill Airlines" on the sides of his new purchase. It landed in Long Beach a couple days later.

"Since Signal Hill doesn't have an airplane or an airport, and we could name the airplane anything we wanted to, we just decided to call it Signal Hill Airlines," he joked at the time.

When owned by Pan Am, the craft was dubbed Clipper Defiance. Air Vietnam named it Wings of Peace.

And where is Defiance-Peace-Signal Hill now?

Sans wheels, the craft is propped up on cradles just outside Cannady's temporary quarters, an old 1920s hangar behind his new building site on Spring Street.

There had been some talk that a Mideast or Persian Gulf sheik might buy it for a playboy-type airplane. Or that it might be used for pilgrimage trips to Mecca.

Those didn't materialize.

"We're dismantling it for spare parts," Cannady said. "We can never get enough of those. In fact, our company keeps track of virtually every U.S.-manufactured jet airliner in the world. We know who buys them, who leases them and who sells them to whom."

Cannady said he hopes to have the new Westwing Center open for business by next January. He anticipates that it will generate $25 million annually for the local economy in sales and service volume.

He lauded the Long Beach Economic Development Corp., a nonprofit unit comprised of local civic leaders, for help with site development. "Their help has been invaluable," he said, adding:

"To put a single-purpose building on municipal-leased land is something like landing on the moon. It's been hard work — but it's been a hell of a lot of fun."

International festival slated at park today

A festival featuring music, dance and food from around the world is scheduled at Long Beach Recreation Park from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. today.

The event, sponsored by the Women's Council of the Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce, is free to the public.

There will, however, be a charge for food sold at booths around the park, according to a spokeswoman.

She said groups representing Austria, Cambodia, Chile, Germany, Greece, Japan, Korea, Lithuania, Mexico, the Middle East, Nigeria, the Philippines, Poland, Spain, the United States and Vietnam will entertain.

A parade of nations, featuring young people in native costume, is to begin at 1 p.m.

Millions made eligible for federal loans

Revised Veterans Housing Act provisions clarified

By DOROTHY WEDDELL
Knight News Service

Many provisions of the revised Veterans Housing Act, which went into effect a year ago, still seem to be unknown to a vast number of eligible U.S. service veterans.

The act now allows millions of veterans to obtain federally guaranteed home mortgages, who were formerly ineligible, either because they had previously used up their benefits or because they were not covered under the old law.

Significantly, a recent survey of older veterans and widows revealed that a staggering 35 per cent reported having problems obtaining or maintaining adequate housing.

The first major construction arising directly from the act appears to be Veterans Village, a subdivision being built in New Port Richey, Fla., about 30 miles northwest of Tampa.

Although Veterans Village is open to anyone, veterans are entitled to federally guaranteed mortgages which include no down payment and no closing costs.

According to the developers, this allows veterans to purchase a retirement home without putting too much of their savings nest egg in their new home. Plans for the development in Florida call for about 2,000 homes to be built, with a current price range of $14,000 to $25,000.

The builders have put up five models, and report that a full-page ad which ran in the American Legion magazine drew more than 12,000 requests for information.

The major changes in the new law include: Renewed eligibility for veterans who already have utilized their original GI mortgage; an increased maximum home loan guarantee from $12,500 to $17,500 (raised to $25,000 for certain seriously service-connected disabled veterans); and an extension of the eligibility for insured loans to veterans whose service in the Armed Forces occurred after Jan. 31, 1955.

The eligibility requirements of the Veterans Housing Act, as taken from VA pamphlet 26-4, revised March 1975, are as follows:

1. Veteran must have served at any time between Sept. 16, 1940, and July 25, 1947, and must have been discharged under conditions other than dishonorable after at least 90 days active service (or for service-incurred disability in less than 90 days).

2. Or veterans whose entitlements are derived from active service between June 27, 1950, and Jan. 31, 1955, inclusive. The minimum term of active service for the Korean conflict is the same as that for World War II vets.

3. Surviving spouses of persons who served during either of the periods and who died as a result of service.

4. Any member of the Women's Auxiliary Corps who served for at least 90 days and was honorably discharged for disability incurred in the line of duty.

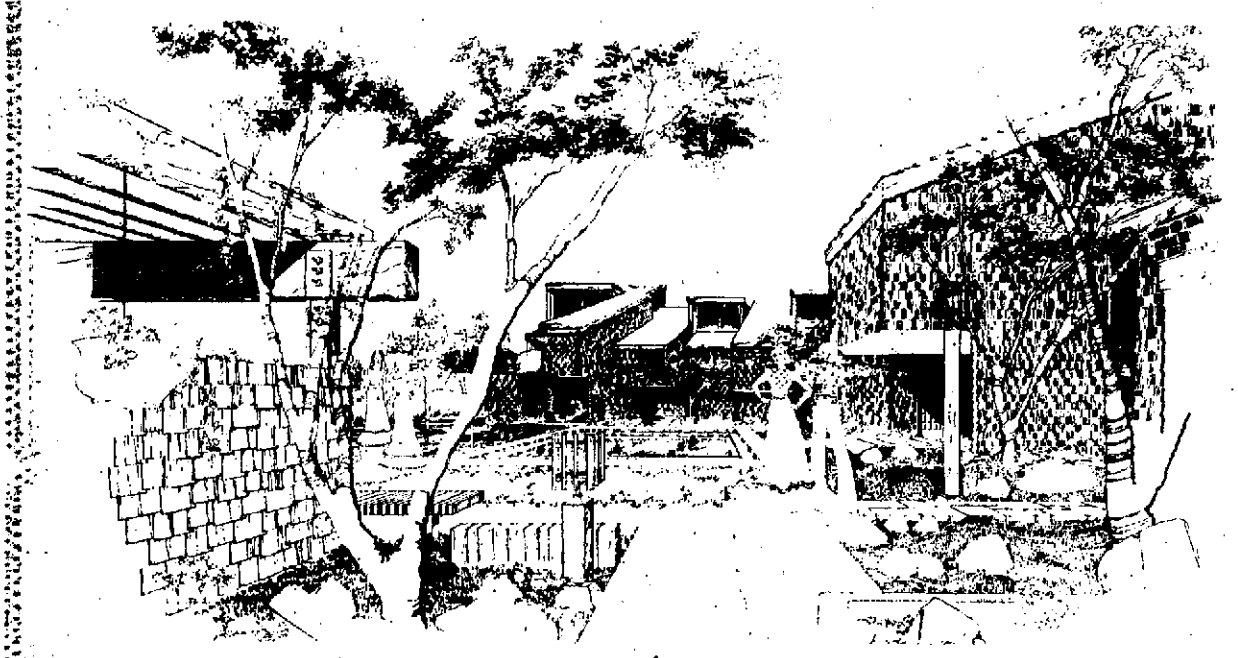

5. Certain U.S. citizens who served in the armed forces of a government allied with the United States in World War II.

6. Veterans who served on active duty for 181 days or more, any part of which occurred after Jan. 31, 1955, and were discharged or released for other than dishonorable conditions, or for a service-connected disability.

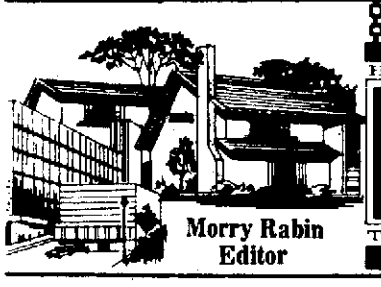

7. Service personnel who have served at least 181 days in active duty status, even though not discharged, while their service continues without a break.

8. Surviving spouses of the above eligible persons who died as a result of service.

9. The spouse of any member of the armed forces serving on active duty who is listed as missing in action or is a prisoner of war and has been so listed for at least 91 days.

PUBLIC INVITED

Open house at Dana Terrace

A "Champagne Open House" this weekend will mark the completion of recreation facilities and the furnished models at Dana Terrace, an exclusive new townhome development at Dana Point.

The public is invited to attend the festivities from 1 to 5 p.m. on today. Dana Terrace is located at Del Obispo and Stonehill in Dana Point, less than a mile from Dana Point Yacht Harbor.

The new recreational amenities amid the community's three open acres of landscaped grounds include a large swimming pool and jacuzzi.

Prices range from $55,500 to $57,500 for the spacious and dramatically-styled Dana Terrace townhomes. For a limited time, an excellent interest rate as low as 7 3 4% (8.05% annual percentage rate) is available, a spokesman for Kurth & Associates, Inc., said.

There are just 31 townhomes in the new development and the terraced viewsites have been carefully planned to take full advantage of the panoramic ocean and valley views.

The townhomes are available in three innovative multi-level floorplans and offer two generaous bedrooms and 2 1 2 baths. Immediately occupancy is available now, according to the sales agent.

Modern "sea-architecture" by Robert M. Thomas & Associates, AIA, of Newport Beach, gives the homes a contemporary woody effect carried out in shingled exteriors.

Custom-quality appointments of the unique townhomes include formal tiled entry foyers and large living rooms and dining rooms on the contemporary-styled lower levels. There are high vaulted ceilings, an abundance of view windows, wood- burning fireplaces and wet bars.

The decorator furnished model homes are open weekdays from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and weekends from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., but closed Wednesday, according to Kurth & Associates, sales agent.

The development may be easily reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Camino Las Ramblas (Pacific Coast Highway) exit. Drive approximately 1 2 mile towards the Dana Point Marina area and Del Obispo St., then right 1 4 mile to Stonehill and Dana Terrace.

Top value homes are offered at the Pines

In an independent residential sales survey conducted by the First American Title Insurance Company, The Pines is one of the best values in the Orange County area.

According to Bob Warmington, President of the Robert P. Warmington Company, The Pines is Anaheim's first single story condominium conversation community designed exclusively for mature adults 50 years of age or better.

With the average cost of a new home in Orange County running in excess of $60,000, The Pines offers an outstanding combination of low price per square foot and an exceptional amenities package for the mature individual seeking the security of home ownership at a modest price.

Intimately clustered in three unit buildings, all units are single story designs providing garden level entries, completely eliminating stairways and overhead neighbors.

The Pines garden homes are surrounded with an abundance of lush mature landscaping. All exterior gardening, and landscape maintenance is taken care of by the Homeowner's Association, freeing residents to enjoy all the recreational facilities both within and surrounding the community.

A choice of two different plans are offered, a two bedroom model with 1075 square feet and a two bedroom plus den model which is a spacious 1,209 square foot design. Both plans have two baths.

All homes feature enclosed private patios, fireplaces, draperies, air conditioning, fully tiled showers in master bedroom suites and quality carpeting. In the convenient easy clean kitchen are ceramic countertops, general electric dishwasher, disposal, range and oven, all included in the purchase price.

Set in a mature park-like atmosphere, new homeowners will share in a full compliment of recreational facilities. There is a swimming pool and jacuzzi, a clubhouse for those weekend gatherings, a putting green for the "scratch" duffers, plus shuffleboard courts and bar-b-que areas.

With a total of only sixty-four units in the adult community, there is ample covered parking with a special area set aside for recreational vehicles.

Within ten minutes by car is the Regional Anaheim/Broadway Shopping Center. Also within easy freeway access is the Civic Center, Orange County Airport and beach resorts.

The Pines is located at 134 S. Magnolia Blvd., just ½ block south of Lincoln. The two and three bedrooms are priced from $31,990 to $33,990. Decorated models are open daily from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m.

Property care is expanded

JACK KELLY

Announcement has been made of a new community administration division within Pacific Property Care, Inc., a landscape and exterior maintenance company located in Irvine and headed by Jack Kelly and Tony Nunez.

TV star, Kelly, said Nunez and he meshed 21 years of cumulative financial property management and licensed landscape contracting experience into the comprehensive service they now offer.

Kelly said the five year old firm has operated as consultants and complete exterior maintenance contractors to major projects managed by Lincoln Properties; some important developments of Christiana Corporation and large condominium projects in Huntington Harbour, Costa Mesa and other South Coast cities.

Limited number of homes at Country Club Gardens

Time is growing short for buyers to make their selection of the limited number of townhomes available at Country Club Gardens in Long Beach.

The elegant built-in features and outstanding dollar value have been the major factors in the outstanding sales rate to date, according to Sterling Development Corp., the builder.

The new adult-oriented townhome development is situated in the prestigious Virginia Country Club neighborhood, an ideal central location freeway-close to employment and metropolitan areas of Los Angeles and Orange County.

The split level townhomes are set amid sparkling streams, waterfalls and lush green gardens and are priced at $52,950 and $53,950 with excellent conventional financing available.

The remaining homes feature a three bedroom, two bath floorplan. Wood-burning fireplaces, separate dining areas, wood parquet entry foyers and cathedral ceilings are among the homes' excellent features. Ceramic tiling and upgraded wall- to-wall carpeting are more price-included features.

Each home has a trellised entry, private garden patio and over-sized two- car garage with laundry area and automatic door opener.

A large free-form swimming pool, jacuzzi and night-lighted paddle tennis court are provided in private recreation areas.

Model homes and the sales office are open daily from 10 a.m. at 3655 Country Club Drive and Cedar Avenue for selection in the final group of homes.

Country Club Gardens may be easily reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Long Beach Boulevard exit, then north on Long Beach Boulevard to 36th Street, and west on 36th (which becomes Country Club Drive) for one-quarter mile to Cedar Avenue and the new adult townhome community.

Baldwin's West Hills Homes . . . among University City's last

Some of the last single-family homes to be built in the University City section of San Diego are just getting underway at West Hill Homes, announced James Baldwin, a principal of The Baldwin Co., the Irvine developer.

Situated along winding streets and cul-de-sacs, 40 single-family detached homes will be built on a ten-acre site at the northwest corner of Streseman Street and Governor Drive.

"The Baldwin Co. has refined for San Diego County a series of one-and two-story floorplans which proved very popular in Orange and Los Angeles counties," explained Baldwin. "The plans will be some of the largest offered in this area."

Featuring three to five bedrooms, the homes range in size from 1,962 to 2,487 sq. ft. All will have family rooms, formal dining rooms, and attached two- or three-car garages.

Versatility keynotes many of the plans, which feature wall-removing options to enlarge family rooms, create master suite sitting rooms, or upstairs hobby or game rooms.

"We expect a sell-out before the homes are built," noted Baldwin. "Already a number of people have contacted our corporate office for information, and some have even driven approximately 100 miles to Central Orange County to view the models."

Just two blocks from West Hill is Stanley Park, a 24-acre city-owned facility with Olympic-size swimming pool; a bathhouse; picnic, tot, and play areas; lighted tennis and handball courts; multi-purpose baseball fields; and a 14,000 sq. ft. recreation building with two indoor basketball courts, meeting rooms, and craft rooms.

Close-by is a shopping center, Marcy Elementary School and the just-completed Stanley Junior High School. In two years, students will be able to attend the University City High School, now under construction. Downtown San Diego is less than 15 miles away, while the University and the La Jolla beaches are only a five-minute drive.

Prices are expected to range from the mid-sixties into the eighties. Three models are scheduled to open in July. Pre-sales are scheduled to begin in June, while the first move-ins will be in January, 1977.

The Baldwin Co. also is the developer of Sea Village, the award-winning townhome community adjacent to Torrey Pines State Park in Del Mar.

Park-like view from new homes

Trees, a lake and a golf course form the view from the fairway phase of the award-winning Rancho San Joaquin townhomes in the City of Irvine. Homes in this last phase of the adult-oriented community are priced from $77,000.

New homes in Mission Viejo are now open

One of the most desirable neighborhoods ever to be offered in the Madrid de Espana series at Mission Viejo opens this weekend, according to Grant Sullivan, general sales manager for the 10,000-acre planned community.

Madrid's Neighborhood 32 will feature 51 homes in one single-level and four two-story plans. Fifteen distinctive elevations are offered.

Located just west of Marguerite Parkway near the Mission Viejo Country Club, many of these homes will offer excellent sunset views. The view potential is enhanced by the fact that some of the homes will be built on single-loaded streets, added Sullivan.

Priced from $66,495 to $92,095, Madrid de Espana homes include such custom features as dramatic staircases, master suites that extend the length of the home, one or two fireplaces, laundry chutes, and multi-level design. Homes are expected to be ready for occupancy in September.

Homes range in size from the 1,775-square-foot Casa Roya with three bedrooms and two baths to the 2,920-square-foot Casa Sarga with four bedrooms, three baths, and a library.

Standard Madrid de Espana features include built-in Whirlpool double ovens, separate built-in range, dishwasher, disposal, fireplaces with gas log lighters, heavy duty exterior wall and ceiling insulation, carpeting in most rooms; and concrete driveways.

Optional features include air conditioning, tile roofs in some plans, balconies, wet bars, mirrored wardrobe doors, and glass cook-top ranges.

For including devices in the Madrid de Espana series that "contribute significantly to the conservation of energy and to more economical operation for the consumer," Mission Viejo Company was recently awarded a "Certificate of Commendation for Energy Conservation" by Southern California Gas Company.

Centrally located in Mission Viejo, the homes in this Madrid de Espana neighborhood are within minutes of all three volunteer-membership recreation centers. Two golf courses (one public, one private), the Mission Viejo Equestrian Center, and a newly completed skating rink are nearby recreational amenities.

Madrid de Espana models are open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. at the sales complex, adjacent to the Marguerite Recreation Center, home of the 1975 AAU national swimming champions.

To reach the models, take the San Diego Freeway south to the La Paz Road exit and drive east. Turn left on Marguerite Parkway and follow the signs to Madrid de Espana.

RV park at Big Bear is nearing completion

Construction is nearing completion on Holloway's Recreational Vehicle Park at Big Bear Lake in the San Bernardino Mountains. The park, which is scheduled to open this summer, is located on Metcalf Bay on 5.5 acres of lake front property. Holloway's, established in 1913, is the oldest existing marina on the lake. Normal marina operations are continuing during the construction period.

The 66 RV sites are large and all have a view of the lake. Native plants have been used in landscaping to add to the privacy of each site. All sites will have complete electrical, sewer and water hookups; cable television will also be available. A camp store will offer convenience shopping and food items.

Holloway's has one of the largest marinas on Big Bear Lake; offering fishing and speed boat rentals, a launching ramp, mooring facilities for private boats with buoys and slips available, outboard and inboard engine repair service, Standard Oil marine products and Johnson outboard motors and parts. The marina facilities are open to the public as well as guests of the RV Park.

Construction and design have been under supervision of Holloway's.

Village planning explored

"The Most Unique New Housing Development to hit the United States in a Decade" is the topic of the speaker, Kenneth W. Agid, Director of Residential Marketing for The Irvine Company who will be exploring the planning and development of The Village of Woodbridge.

According to spokesmen, "it's the biggest, most important single project ever undertaken in the City of Irvine in terms of physical size, front end investment, complexity of land uses and diversity of products". The occasion is the regular monthly meeting of the Sales and Marketing Council of the Building Industry Association of California.

Meeting at the Grand Hotel in Anaheim on Wednesday, members of the council, under the presidency of Pete Mayer, publisher of HomeBuyers Guide, will follow Agid's detailed account of the four years of planning leading up to the opening which is scheduled for June.

The dinner meeting Wednesday, will be preceded by a social hour beginning at 6:00 p.m. and the public is invited.

Decorator bonus offered at SeaScape townhomes

Barely a dozen townhomes remain to be sold during the final closeout sale now in progress at the leisure oriented community of SeaScape located at Huntington Harbour.

As an added incentive during SeaScapes final closeout each purchaser will receive a $750 "decorators allowance" which can be applied toward drapes, upgraded carpets, mirrored wardrobes or in any manner the homeowner desires.

The remaining townhomes are the last of 71 residences designed primarily for young marrieds, singles, and active adults who desire a recreation-oriented lifestyle.

Residents at SeaScape can enjoy the lavishly equipped clubhouse, a sparkling swimming pool, jacuzzi, sauna or the lighted tennis court. These amenities coupled with the development's close proximity to the Harbour beach and shopping, have all been major factors in the project's success.

Prices of the two-bedroom townhomes with 2 ¼ baths begin at $46,950 with 80% and 90% financing available.

"Never again will the quality and value be offered to the public at this price in this location and now with the "decorators bonus" being offered for a limited period only, it is the best time for potential buyers to select one of the award-winning townhomes," said Gregg Kent, spokesman for SeaScape.

The SeaScape sales office is open daily at 16744 Algonquin with sales representatives on the premises.

To reach SeaScape, take the Garden Grove Freeway to the Valley View exit. Drive south on Valley View (which becomes Bolsa Chica Avenue) to Warner Avenue, then west on Warner to Algonquin Street. Turn right again and go three blocks to the site.

From Pacific Coast Highway, drive East on Warner Avenue to Algonquin and turn left to the townhome community near Huntington Harbour.

Preview sales at Corte Vista

Now is the time to make your selection at Corte Vista, a new community of single story cluster homes in Placentia, during preview sales.

Nestled in the foothills of Northern Orange County, the Costa Construction community offers a fresh new opportunity for carefree townhome living in friendly, small-town surroundings.

Four distinctive floorplans are priced from $49,500 to $56,400. The two and four bedroom residences feature two baths and offer from 1312 to 1467 square feet of living area.

A variety of handsome Spanish-styled exteriors are gracefully accented with tile roofs, wood beams, masonry and wrought-iron detailing.

Inside the residences, a lengthy list of features include vaulted ceiling, wood-burning fireplaces, wall-to-wall carpeting, spacious dining areas and large private patios.

Master suites are complete with private bath/dressing room and walk-in closet or double wardrobe.

Contemporary kitchens feature built-in range, oven, dishwasher, disposal, pantry and luminous ceiling.

Most plans have wet bars and each Corte Vista home includes an enclosed two car garage. In addition, there are separate laundry rooms or garage laundry areas in various plans.

Corte Vista is oriented to the maintenance-free leisure lifestyle and will feature two private tennis courts, a swimming pool and jacuzzi for residents within abundantly landscaped grounds.

The Corte Vista sales facility is open daily for preview selection from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The development may be reached by taking the Riverside Freeway to Tustin Avenue. Drive north on Tustin Avenue which becomes Rose Drive to the intersection of Rose Drive and Buena Vista Avenue and the model homes.

JUNE 23-25: 'Petaluma Decision' topic of upcoming conference

A cross-section of prominent Western builders will direct three days of educational programs during the upcoming Pacific Coast Builders Conference that will reveal, among other things, whether the recent "Petaluma Decision" is the death knell for builders and if the "basic house" is indeed basic.

In announcing the programs for the PCBC, to be held June 23-25 at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco, Conference Program Chairman Bernie Hagan said the impact of the Petaluma case on the future of the building industry and on the ability of consumers to buy homes will be a keynote question at PCBC.

The recent decision by the Supreme Court not to review a lower court ruling in favor of Petaluma's right to control the number of housing units built in the community is regarded by builders to have potentially widespread ramifications, Hagan said.

The impact of the skyrocketing costs of developing land as relates to initiating a housing project will be a central theme of a session on "The Advantages of Buying Developed or Unfinished Lots." Scheduled to head this panel discussion is Emmett Clifford, vice president of McKeon Homes of San Mateo.

PCBC is the nation's largest regional builder's gathering and annually draws in excess of 6000 people to its educational sessions and product exhibition.

Rich or poor, you need estate plan

By GERALDINE STROZIER
Knight News Service

Dying is not as easy as you think, at least not the kind of dying that leaves everything in order and your family well provided for.

But thinking about the financial well-being of your family after you are gone involves thinking about your own going, a topic most people are less than eager to approach.

And the few who face the inevitable usually skip lightly over getting their affairs in order, figuring a life insurance policy and a house in the suburbs is about the best their families can expect.

But it isn't. A little time and planning now can save your heirs a great deal of trouble and possibly thousands of dollars in unnecessary death taxes. Trust funds, adequate life insurance and general estate planning are not only for the rich. Anyone who has a family and a modest amount of property can benefit.

Yet many middle-income people don't know about estate planning nor recognize the need to find out about it. Their vague, usually mistaken assumptions about the laws of inheritance place in jeopardy a lifetime of hard earned savings:

1. "If I die without a will, all my property will go to my wife anyway."

2. "My husband and I have all our property in joint ownership. So when one of us dies, the other will get everything and not have to pay any death tax."

3. "There's no point in setting up a trust for my children — middle-class people like me don't have enough money to make it worthwhile."

Wrong on all counts.

If you die without a will, leaving a wife and children, division of your estate probably will depend on state laws. In some states, for instance, a wife would get one-third of the estate while the other two-thirds would go to your children.

If you have all your property in joint ownership, you may be able to avoid state inheritance taxes, which are extremely low, anyway, in many states, but it won't help with federal tax.

The IRS will assume that the spouse who died is the actual owner and tax it accordingly. The only exception is property the survivor can prove he or she paid for with the survivor's own money. And the IRS does not include the labor of a lifetime housewife. Cash contributions are all that count.

The IRS allows a surviving spouse half of the entire estate tax free, plus an additional deduction of $60,000 that every estate may claim regardless of the heir.

Spouses who cannot prove they contributed to the estate will have to pay death taxes on the remainder. But because of the exemptions, this tax will be felt only by the relatively well-to-do.

A SURPRISING number of middle-income people will leave an estate large enough to pay estate taxes on, and therefore large enough to justify a trust to reduce those taxes.

"The $120,000 estate is a middle-class reality today," says Sylvia Porter, the financial columnist. And a great many fairly ordinary people who never had very much money during their lifetime are leaving estates of $200,000 and up.

But because people often fail to realize their true financial situation, they do not put their money where it can work best for their families.

Most people accumulate their estates in a haphazard way. They pick up an insurance policy here, a little property there, a few shares in General Motors or participation in an employer's profit sharing program.

They rarely sit down and decide exactly what they are aiming for, either in terms of their own retirement, or what they want to leave their spouse, or whether they have adequately provided for their school-age children, says Donald Levitt, a financial planner for Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. Yet without such planning people can waste many of their resources.

A man could leave a successful business to his children, for example, but if he failed to leave them enough cash to pay death taxes, they would have to sell the business to raise the money.

The first thing people need to do, says Levitt, is to total up exactly what their estate would be if they died right now. Then they need to decide, given their particular circumstances, what they need to leave their families to ensure their well-being.

It is not difficult to figure how much you are worth. Total up your life insurance, the market value of your house minus the mortgage, the value (resale, not replacement) of the furnishings, your automobiles and other personal items with cash value, real estate holdings and stocks and bonds. Then figure out what the income on this property would be. Many people, for example, will not want to sell their home to invest the money for income.

The next step is to decide what kinds of conditions you want to cover. If you have young children, their education must be considered. If your spouse works and earns enough to support the family without you, then your family will probably need less income from your estate than you might think.

If the income from your current holdings would be less than your family will need, you have some planning to do.

MOST ESTATE PLANNERS say you should leave your family in roughly the same economic position they are in with you here. If you deduct Social Security payments and the cost of your living expenses, your family should be able to manage on roughly 60 to 75 per cent of your current income.

If you are wealthy, 50 or even 35 per cent would probably be enough.

Part of this income may come from investments, but for most middle-class families, it will come mostly from a combination of life insurance and Social Security payments.

Social Security pays benefits to surviving spouses over 60 or those with dependent children under 18, to totally disabled spouses over 50, to children under 18 who are unmarried or under 22 if they are fulltime students, to toally disabled adult children whose disability predates their 22nd birthday and in some cases to dependent parents 62 or older.

The payments vary according to how long the

A site for sore eyes

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Lewis J. Arthur had beans for lunch three days in a row.

Arthur (that's not his real name) is not all that thrilled about beans. His problem was that he couldn't read the label even with his glasses. He was pulling beans off the pantry shelf even though he was hoping he might come up with corn or peas.

Then Arthur heard about the new Low Vision Center at St. Mary Medical Center in Long Beach. It has solved a lot of problems for him and provided him with a balanced diet as well.

There are thousands of persons in the harbor area who, like Lewis Arthur, have special problems of low vision, according to Dr. Orville W. Cole, Long Beach ophthalmologist who is the guiding force behind the establishment of the center.

Who qualifies for the center? Anyone who can't perform his normal activities with eyeglasses.

Do you have to live in Long Beach? Not especially. The second person to visit the center was a woman who resides in Missouri.

And what does the center do? It provides magnification and lighting devices, holding equipment for reading materials, and special large-type periodicals and books.

One of the most spectacular devices available in the center is a visual aid to assist persons with moderate to severe visual limitations. It's a closed-circuit television arrangement that can magnify up to 60 times and enable the individual to read and write.

The lettering on the TV screen can be reproduced as black on white or white on black. The latter is easier on the eyes of a light-sensitive person.

Three such devices are to be made available at the St. Mary center.

SMALLER AIDS will be given free to the person attending the center. These will include items such as hand magnifiers, stand magnifiers (both fixed focus and adjustable focus), headborne magnifiers, visorettes (fits glasses to eliminate glare), reading stands, large-print telephone dials, large playing cards, bold-ruled writing paper and a check-writing guide (stencil that fits over check to make writing easier).

Information about large-print publications will be made available. About 300 books, records and tape cassettes are obtainable from the Library of Congress.

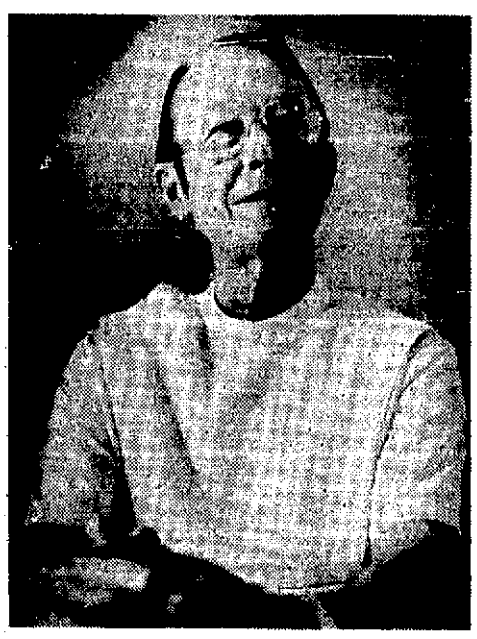

Dr. Cole says that among the eye patients who may benefit from the Low Vision Center are those who have a disorder known as senile macular degeneration or disorders such as retinal hemorrhages, opacities in the vitreous, retinitis pigmentosa, diabetic retinopathy or congenitally poor vision.

Although services at the Low Vision Center are free, patients must first undergo a medical eye examination by a physician and then be referred to the center.

One or two technicians will be present at the center. Currently the facility, located in two third-floor rooms, is open three half days a week, but the goal is to be operational five days a week.

At the center there will be an hour-long eye examination in an endeavor to select the best possible visual aids for the patient. A follow-up visit about a week later will be given to those who require it.

The Low Vision Center was made possible by a substantial gift to the St. Mary Foundation from the estate of the late Nancy and Bill Brooks. Mr. Brooks was a prominent Long Beach industrial realtor. Mrs. Brooks had expressed to Dr. Cole a desire to leave funds for eye care. A recognition plaque honoring the Brooks is to be erected in the center.

Q: Is Elton John a pushy, swaggering celebrity like other superstars I'd rather not mention? Or is he a gracious person?

A: Elton is a shy guy whose head is not inflated with his own press clippings. He's as normal as any 29-year-old boy millionaire who earned, not inherited, his fortune.

Q: Where can we write to Elton John for pictures? And how do we get personal messages to him? And is there a fan club near us?

A: Address such notes in care of the Howard Rose Agency, 9720 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Ca. (Then cross your fingers hoping they'll land in Elton's hands.) Try the same source for information about a fan club in your area. For photos, write M.C.S. Records, 2711 Gatehouse Drive, Village of Purnell, Baltimore, Md., 21207.

Q: Where in France is Elton John living?

A: He's not living in France but in Middlesex, England.

Q: Did James Caan ever give an excuse for turning down an invite to pose for one of those nude centerfolds, a la Burt Reynolds? — B. Delgado, Pittsburgh.

A: "My refusal," the canny Caan commented, "is not because my hands are too small!"

Q: Any reaction on the part of any American League pitchers who have to face Hank Aaron again this season — after the home-run king said he was going to retire in '76? — Lawrence Dreyfuss, Baltimore.

A: Yes. "I threw him his last home-run pitch and thought I'd be remembered for that," Bill Lee, the Red Sox lefty, lamented. "Now I'll have to throw him another."

Q: When he's on TV talk shows, why does Godfrey Cambridge wear a shoulder bag? — Bernie Miller, Syracuse, N.Y.

A: "Because I'm in the habit of carrying so many things I find I bulge in the behind unless I wear something like a sack or shoulder holster," the comedian explains. "The 'things' include bottles of vitamin pills, an address book, a writing pad, a stack of credit cards, reading and sun glasses and a handy tape recorder in case I think of something funny I don't want to forget."

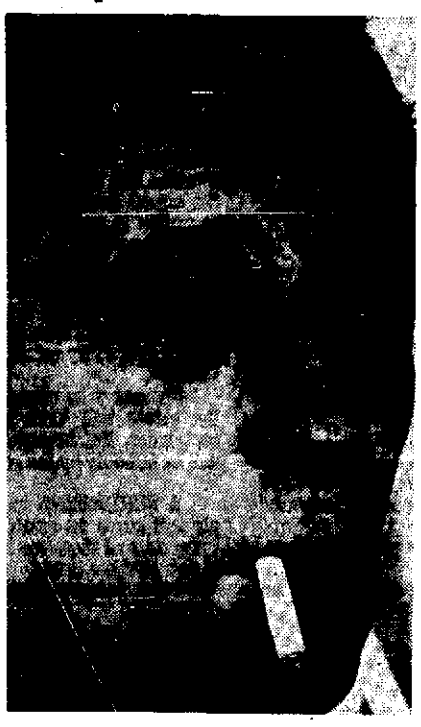

Q: The highlight of my vacation in Las Vegas would be if I could catch Ginger Rogers' highly acclaimed new act there. When will she be appearing? Also where was she born and when? — D. O'Connell, Youngstown, Ohio.

A: Ginger (the second-most-famous American born in Independence, Mo.) will celebrate her 65th birthday on the stage of the Frontier Hotel July 16. She'll be there through Aug. 4. Prior to that she'll play the Desert Inn from June 1 through 28.

A tip: If you make her July 16 show at the Frontier you may see many of her contemporaries, maybe even Fred Astaire, in the audience toasting her birthday. (Ginger's respect, affection and admiration for her former dancing partner is so deeply ingrained she still refers to him as "Mr. Astaire.")

Q: Settle a bet. We've seen Robert Mitchum in uniform in so many movies ("G.I. Joe," "30 Seconds Over Tokyo," "Gung Ho," etc.) that we'd like to know if he ever was a G.I. for real — Jen Johndrow, St. Louis.

A: Yes. Right after "G.I. Joe" made Mitchum a star in 1944, he turned in his movie uniform to his studio's wardrobe department, was drafted and spent eight months in various Army posts as a G.I. But he didn't like it. "The Army," he said, "is geared to the constitutionally, psychopathically inferior. You're in a box — one, two, three, four. You never get beyond four!"

ACTOR Robert Mitchum — Army life not for him.

ACTOR James Caan — small hands not his problem.

BASEBALL great Hank Aaron — retirement record premature.

Twice the entertainment pleasure

When the bright young eager beavers who inherited MGM discovered old musicals lying fallow in the studio vault, the result was "That's Entertainment!", an all-star compilation of musical film clips that reaped a bonanza. It was like discovering oil in the parking lot outside Louis B. Mayer's office.

Well, it was inevitable. If so many old movies excited so many people, there was more where that came from, wasn't there? So they went back into the vaults and came up with a sequel called "That's Entertainment 2."

It was also inevitable that, like all overnight successes, "That's Entertainment!" and its glittering sequel would spawn a swarm of rather hateful little kissing cousins who would emerge from the woodwork uninvited to fight for scraps, like all the mysterious claimants now scratching around for pieces of Howard Hughes' will.

The first to show its ugly head is an anthropomorphic ripoff called "It's Showtime!", which is a kind of four-legged "That's Entertainment!" passing itself off as an entertainment for children. My advice is to keep it on a high shelf, away from reach, with a skull and crossbones on its label. But more about that anon.

"That's Entertainment 2," which opened last week in New York and then unfolds as the opening-night gala at the Cannes Film Festival, is everything it claims to be. While it is easy to find fault with most sequels, I cannot imagine anyone being too disappointed with this one.

It's a glittering extravaganza of music, dancing, comedy and Technicolor excitement. Neither can I imagine two more reliable hosts than Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly, who sing and dance together in brand new numbers for the first time since "Ziegfeld Follies."

There are special lyrics for the title song that enable these Terpsichorean marvels to lead us in a time-step through the various phases of the movie, and enough rhythm and pizazz in the old boys to remind one and all that they could easily make a penny-bright new musical tomorrow if all the heads were in all the right places.

IF I HAVE ANY reservations about "That's Entertainment 2" they concern the structure of the film, not the content. There is too much introductory material when we want to skip the dialogue and get to the musical numbers. At times, the whole enterprise looks more like a TV special than a nostalgic tour through the great moments in movie history, and unless I'm wrong, I could even spot the commercial breaks.

The sections of the film have been extended to include not only musicals but also comedies, romantic teams and favorite one-liners from MGM classics. I would have preferred some of the more obscure musical numbers, even from bad movies, to the

rex reed

familiar, tried-and-true numbers from "Easter Parade" and "Annie Get Your Gun."

Everyone will have a particular favorite that is missing (mine is the "Stanley Steamer" number from "Summer Holiday"). But that is mere carping in a dazzling movie with more than enough to go around for all. Besides, they had to leave something for "That's Entertainment 3!"

You'll see what I mean. There's the indefatiguable Eleanor Powell, clomping her way through "Fascinatin' Rhythm"; Jimmy Durante, growling his way through the immortal "Inka Dinka Doo" with Harry James; Jeannette MacDonald chirping to Nelson Eddy "Oh, Charles, you can't fight the whole French fleet!" before swooning her way into "Lover Come Back To Me" ("New Moon"); and Judy, Mickey, the whole Tommy Dorsey orchestra and hundreds of rope-twirling Busby Berkeley cowboys doing "I Got Rhythm" (from "Girl Crazy").

Bobby Van stops the show with a number from "Small Town Girl," in which he jumps through an entire town and ends up in the traffic followed by cheering mobs and dogs doing the same dance steps. Bob Fosse, Ann Miller and the late, great Carol Haney leap through walls in "Kiss Me Kate" as though their feet had wings. The amazing Oscar Levant plays Gershwin's "Concerto in F," acting out the roles of each member of the orchestra and the conductor, too!

Ethel Waters shows what legends are made of in a number from "Cabin in the Sky." Gene Kelly dances with cartoon genies in the "Sinbad" number from "Invitation to the Dance," then sails through the streets of New York on roller skates in "It's Always Fair Weather." Ah, they sure don't make them like they used to. Today he'd get mugged.

GRETA GARBO will surprise and delight her fans doing a wild dance called "La Chica Chaca" ("Two-Faced Woman"); Rodgers and Hart, who we all know looked like Tom Drake and Mickey Rooney, show us how they wrote "Manhattan" ("Words and Music"); Judy Garland breaks Margaret O'Brien's heart on Christmas Eve singing "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas" ("Meet Me in St. Louis"); and it wouldn't be a show without Esther Williams, wet and wonderful, leading an entire flotilla of water-skiers through Cypress Gardens before an airplane lifts her into the sky and plops her into the Atlantic as thousands cheer.

Lassie comes home, Tracy punches Hepburn, Gable tells Scarlett he doesn't give a damn, the Marx Brothers stuff a flotilla into a closet-size stateroom, and all of Fred Astaire's socks and accessories match. (When I was a kid, I used to march around the South, in and out of haberdashery stores, trying vainly to find yellow socks and yellow sweaters like Fred's, not realizing that MGM was designing them that way.)

Intellectual weight-watchers who thrive on lean, sparse movie material are advised to forget the calories and gorge. This spectacular, finger-snapping sequel to "That's Entertainment!" is a Baskin-Robbins special, with 40 flavors of mouth-watering surprise. It will make you feel full, rich and happy to be alive.

"IT'S SHOWTIME!" is a sleazy affair, produced by Fred Weintraub and Paul Heller, whose researchers combed through miles of film going back to early

AT WIT'S END

One day at a time

erma bombeck

My son is a Bicentennial graduate.

He looks like any other kid. He's 18. Eats unbalanced meals. Would kill for car keys. Has fruit flies around his locker. Threatens to self-destruct if we bring a camera to his graduation.

I didn't wake up 18 years ago and announce, "Hey, we've got to get going on a Bicentennial graduate." It just happened.

I'm sorry in a way. I wish I could spare him the same exploitation as the Bicentennial key ring, the Bicentennial hamburger, the Bicentennial fireplug decorating competition, and the Bicentennial headache.

HE AND MILLIONS of graduates are going to get it come commencement — the forefathers-on-the-threshold-of-a-brand-new-destiny number comparing today's graduates with their forefathers.

Not that it isn't a good pitch. I've heard it before. It makes you square your shoulders, sit up a little straighter (the girls often cry), and for a moment you want to walk out on Lake Erie and be by yourself.

Then, the "threshold of a brand new destiny" speech wears off like a shot of Novocaine and you are left on the brink with a brave, exciting future and $8.40 in your pocket.

What does my son know? What has he been taught? He knows you can't march in a graduation line and chew gum at the same time. He knows you can't make it in this world unless you know how to diagram a sentence. He knows you can't pass phys. ed. unless you take showers. He knows gym clothes can be a major air pollutant. Some school lunches must be accompanied by a prescription. His typing teacher is into TM.

He suspects every other graduate knows exactly where he is going — but him.

He's apprehensive about his future. He's scared and he's confused. He feels like a kid who has just been given an award for being able to cope and someone stole his chair while he was receiving it.

I WISH I COULD assure him there is no comparison whatsoever between him and his forefathers. It was one thing to write the book on a new land. It's another to live in it 200 years later. No one, not even his forefathers, could possibly imagine the burden of raising a country from birth to maturity.

I wish I could tell him that the day after graduation he will wake feeling no different than he did today. He won't be wise, dedicated, or chomping to get off his brink.

He will only be meeting his challenges one day at a time ... which is the way his forefathers did it ... 200 years ago.

The workshop

Almost any plant takes on a new and attractive appearance when placed in a gay and attractive planter. Not only that, planters provide you with many of the delights of full scale gardening and are much easier to maintain.

This mobile garden can move into the sun or shade to give your flowers the exact amount of light needed.

The planter pictured here is made of exterior plywood with three stepped-up trays for planting and maintenance. Our easy-to-follow plan includes a complete materials list, trace-on designs and a cutting diagram that shows how to lay out the design on plywood. Any amateur can tackle this project on a weekend and have the planter in bloom in no time at all.

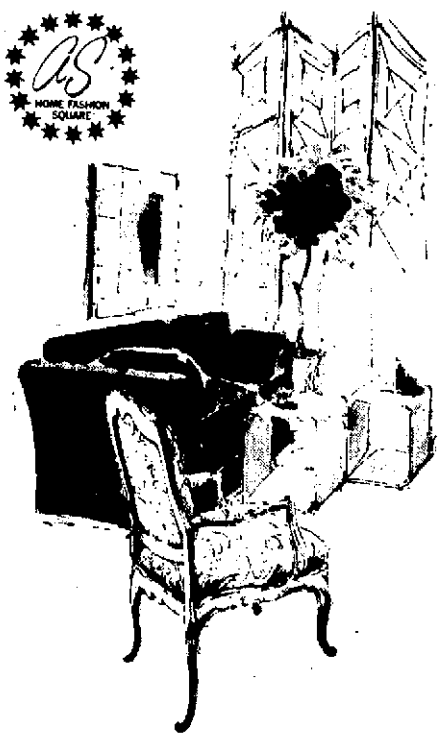

To obtain the full-size planter pattern Number 318, send $1.50 (includes first class postage and handling). For our special Lawn and Garden Packet (9 patterns including a chaise lounge, window boxes, awnings and many more lawn projects), send $4 by cash, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Dept. P. O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, Ca. 91409.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Guests 'n' gargoyles ogled the same sunset

BILL AND CAROLYN Steuber invited some 40 friends to get high in the sky. No, that doesn't mean that the guests over drank the cocktails.

It means that the Steubers opened the penthouse on the 16th floor of the Villa Riviera for a "come and watch the sunset" cocktail hour.

There is some question whether the penthouse is carolyn mcdowell

on the 16th or 15th floor since, like many tall buildings, the Villa has no superstitious 13th floor.

Anyway, the elevator was busy transporting party-goers to the top of the building. Party site is now an apartment but in bygone days, the living room area was called a chapel complete with organ loft.

A hand painted ceiling three stories high is the main feature of the residence which has been termed a mini-San Simeon through the years. The apartment also contains what may be the highest fireplace in town.

The three-way view was all the entertainment the guests needed but there was more.

When the sun set, watchers were given questionaires asking them to guess the square footage of the apartment (1,750) and a prize was supposed to be given to the person who came up with the best name for the gargoyles.

You probably can't see them while you are whizzing down Ocean Boulevard but there are five pairs of the bizarre figures encircling the tower.

Don't think anyone won a prize because the names they came up with were more bizarre than the carved creatures.

Patti Carey, there with husband Dale, thought the names should be Oscar and Felix (after the characters in "Odd Couple"), Pete and Lydia Kent opted for Batman and Robin, Dave and Kay Berg weren't even in the running with Old Baldy and Fido.

The host couldn't recall the wag who came up with Laurel and Hardy but did mention that Bud and Bonnie Baccus voted for Jeannette McDonald and Nelson Eddy.

The powder room was in constant use, not because of the facilities but because everyone wanted to see the hand glazed tiles set with fish figures swming endlessly around the room as they have been doing since 1932 when the building was completed.

Among other visitors were Ron and Pat Wilkinson, Hal and Gay Steuber, Norm and Bea Scott, Judy Nixon, John and Joan Knight, Bob and Lucille Metcalf, Dick and Pat Watkins, Doug Lefler, Don and Suzanne Wilson, Tom and Sandi Shadden and Sid and Margie Peizer.

SPEAKING OF HOMES...

Contingent of Long Beach ladies headed South of the Border for annual Tijuana Home Tour. This year's tour featured four homes in Tijuana Shores.

The sponsoring Caridad Internacional is a group of 25 women from Tijuana and 25 from San Diego who join hands in promoting international good will along with supporting various philanthropies with tour proceeds.

The Long Beach ladies also supported most of the shops in Tijuana with purchases of everything from a child sized table and chair for Iola Masterson's granddaughter, Megan, to clothes from Sara's and brass-bound glass boxes from Tolan's purchased by Julia Cheney. Julia buys the boxes for friends. Since she is an expert at needlepoint, she does a piece the to fit the bottom of the see-through containers in appropriate colors and sometimes initals.

Co-shoppers with Julia were Dorothy Lineberger, Virginia Welch, Evelyn Miller and Francine Collins.

Other tourers included Elaine Grobaty, Grace Cameron, Middie Masterson, Marie Hauck, Agnes Markle, Joan Knight, Jean Sanders and former Long Beacher Pat Swanson, now of Los Angeles.

In addition to the home visits, guests were treated to an exhibition of precision horseman(woman?) horsepersonship by eight young Mexican ladies.

Might not sound so novel to you unless you knew that they were garbed in black boots authentic sombreros and long white gowns.

DINAH SHORE used to sing "See The USA in your Chevrolet."

The Atzens, Terry and Janice with youngsters Jennifer, 13, and Jonathan, 11, chose Amtrack.

Cross country trip was months in the planning.

The Atzens bought an Amtrack Rail pass and the odyssey was on.

They began the 23-day trip at Union Station in Los Angeles and went on to Ft. Madison, Iowa, where they had to rent a car since the train didn't go to Des Moines where they wanted to visit relatives.

Itinerary included stops at Chicago, Boston, New York City, Washington, D.C., and even Concord and Lexington to visit the statue of the Minuteman.

Janice reports that they spent only six nights on the trains, rest of the nights were at hotels or homes of relatives. The food on the trains was not expensive and while it was not gourmet, it was good. The majority of the trains were modern, air conditioned and comfortable. Janice said they rode only one that should have been retired — many were even plush.

Next time take the train?

THEY TOOK a boat.

Bill and Georgia Chelius and daughter Suzie chose the cruise ship Nordic Prince for a Caribbean vacation. Good friends Bill and Dorothy Watson joined them for stops at St. Thomas, San Juan, Caracas, Aruba, Curacao, Jamaica and Haiti.

Women are asking...

'I love to wear denims, but others seem to look better in jeans than I do. Is there some way they can be fit to flatter more?'

"Blue jeans are one of America's finest contributions to the fashion scene." This is the opinion of a group of European designers who state a love for Levis is international. In some foreign countries, visitors are even stopped on the street and asked to sell their denims. According to a leading tailor, "The fit is the important thing. The length of the jean should be tapered. On a woman, the leg length should be ½-inch shorter in the front than the back (because of heels). One inch shorter in front on a man. If the Levis are stitched at the sides, use matching thread and stitch them around the hem. If they are plain, use a blind stitch. The fuller figure looks best in a flared leg. If you're slender and the pants look baggy, take them in at the inner seam between the legs."

Some find that the waistband is tight, and there are no seams to let out. Use material left over from shortening the pant legs, or from the underside of the cuff.

Never add material at the center back seam, for it will show. Instead make a triangle of the fabric, and open a side seam, sewing it so the point of the triangle heads down. Also, use some fabric at the center of the back of the waistband. This will give added room without spoiling the line.

The shirt or sweater selected gives the outfit a special lift. Actress Liberty Williams, starred in the Walt Disney film, "Gus," chose a sky blue and white striped T-shirt, with the words, "terrific T shirt" spelled out around the topper.

P.S. Maybe your denims reveal too much you! If so, check the lose-a-pound-a-day diet, the famous Hollywood 4-day diet. Send 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba and Bonnie Churchill, "4-day diet for figure trimmers," Indepedent Press Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Ca. 90046.

Help Europe's teachers 'meet the Americans'

Setting off a string of firecrackers, that's one way to celebrate the Bicentennial. Pop,pop,pop and they're gone in seconds. Illegal, too, in many areas.

There is another longer lasting way. It involves extending a hand of welcome across the sea to Europe. When that hand is figuratively clasped it can mean the beginning of enduring friendships stemming from the opportunity to show European teachers that life in the United States is different from portrayals in the foreign press and TV and movie screens.

The American Host program, aptly subtitled "Meet the Americans," brings English-speaking teachers from Europe to the United States for a one or two week stay in homes of American families.

More than 400 teachers will arrive in Southern California during July and August.

Aye, and that's the rub, for more host homes are needed in this area. Seeking a solution is Mrs. William S. Hansen, 61 Sea Isle Drive, who has been named Long Beach committee chairman of the program.

Host families and their guests are matched according to compatible interests determined by teacher interview and family questionnaire. The host family provides a room and meals for the visitor, introduces him or her to friends and neighbors and provides an opportunity to become acquainted with the community. Each teacher lives up to two weeks with two families in different parts of the area he has selected.

Potential host families should contact either Mrs. Hansen or write to The American Host Foundation, 9942 Catherine Ave., Garden Grove.

THE PROGRAM has been named the official home hospitality program of the California Bicentennial Commission. It is administered by the nonprofit American Host Foundation which has during the past 15 years brought more than 8,000 European teachers to American homes to learn about the American way of life.

The foundation's board of directors includes Congressman Barry Goldwater Jr. and William S. Hansen, president of Buffums Department Stores.

Work of the foundation has the endorsement and support of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration and President Gerald Ford.

When teachers Tom and Frances Murphy of Garden Grove were studying European school systems 15 years ago, they found many misconceptions about the United States.

Gradually the American Host — Meet the Americans program evolved until now the Murphys spend full time on the project. In the first summer, 60 British, French and German teachers and more than 100 families pioneered the project with unqualified enthusiasm.

In answer to a request by the foreign teachers for intensive mini-courses in American literature, drama and poetry, seminars have taken place since 1965 in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass. In 1970 four more states offered one-week seminars, and quotas were rapidly filled.

Planning will ease way for heirs

deceased person worked and how much she or he earned. Widows get these benefits without having to prove they were dependent on their husbands. Widowers in many cases have to prove dependency, but this matter is being challenged in the courts.

BUT — AND THIS is a very big "but" for some people — payments to surviving spouses start to decrease as soon as he or she makes more than $2,760 a year in salary. For every $2 earned over that, the recipient loses $1 in benefits.

On the other hand, earnings from investments can reach the millions and not affect Social Security payments.

Women who are widowed should be aware that the Social Security system leaves them without income between their children's coming of age and the year the wives reach 60. The fact that jobs are not always easy to find for widows in their 50s who have not worked outside the home should be part of any estate plan.

Another element in most estate plans is a pension. But women, who typically live longer than men and are less likely than men to have pensions in their own right, often find themselves without this added income when their husbands die. The men had failed to sign up for survivors' benefits.

In order to protect widows, Congress ordered all pension programs to make this option available. A participant may sign up for survivors' benefits and thus provide his wife with continued pension payments after his death, although pension income before his death will be slightly reduced.

But many people fail to take advantage of the plan. In one company, for example, only about seven per cent of the retiring employes chose this plan, even though law requires that they specifically sign away the right.

Even when a surviving spouse qualifies for a pension and for Social Security payments, survival without an outside job may be difficult.

So most men providing for a dependent wife and young children supplement their estates with life insurance — to cover inflation, unexpected expenses and the inevitable costs of college education and other expenses normally considered part of middle class life.

And most people with or without dependent spouses or young children buy life insurance to provide themselves and their spouses with a ready-made savings account for retirement and the special expenses of old age.

HOW MUCH LIFE insurance should the average person buy? According to many experts, there is no average person when it comes to life insurance. Everything depends on your circumstances — on whether both spouses work, on the ages of children, on whether the estate has a need for cash.

If you use 60 per cent of current income as a starting point and adjust it to fit your specific circumstances, you have a general formula to work with.

Assume for a moment you are a man in your 30s with a wife who stays home with two small children. If you earn $25,000 a year, you will need to leave them an income of about $16,000 in their present circumstances.

Social Security will pay your wife and young children about $8,500 a year providing she doesn't go to work. Since you have not reached retirement age, your pension will not be a factor right now.

Assuming you do not have large sums of money invested in real estate and stock, life insurance is the likeliest way to bring your family's income up to $16,000, to provide capital to withstand inflation and special expenses such as college, and to cushion your wife over the years before she reaches 60 and after the children reach 18 in case she can't find work then.

To provide an adequate yet not lavish support for this family, a man would need to carry about $200,000 of life insurance, says Don Levitt — and that coverage would be very expensive.

Whole life insurance of this amount would cost $4,000 a year — rather more than most people earning $25,000 a year can afford.

So what are the alternatives?

A mixture of whole and term insurance, says Levitt. For as little as $600 a year intitially, a man could get the same $200,000 in term insurance.

Whole life insurance is a permanent policy. It pays benefits when you die or, if you prefer, you may cash it for what you have paid in.

Term insurance provides a death benefit only. It cannot be cashed in, and it is effective only for a specified time, such as three years. It may be renewed at the end of that period but the premiums increase as you grow older. It is usually bought to cover the time when the surviving family's needs are greatest.

But Levitt also recommends some whole life insurance just because it represents a good way to force savings — "Even the most careful person tends to play tricks with his savings, investing it here and there, and often losing it," said Levitt — and because term insurance becomes prohibitively costly at later ages.

Now that you have a rough idea of what your estate will be, you need to figure out what to do with it.

...guidelines to follow

The business of estate planning is a complex one. Here are a few general guidelines to help your heirs.

1. No estate inherited by a surviving spouse is charged estate taxes unless it is in excess of $120,000.

2. Anyone inheriting an estate from a spouse is entitled to a tax deduction of one half its value.

3. Every estate, regardless of the heir's relationship to the deceased is entitled to a deduction of $60,000 in addition to whatever other deductions are claimed.

4. If one's estate consists of a business, real estate or some other substantial property besides cash, provision should be made for a cash supply to pay the death taxes without having to sell the property.

5. Don't bank too far afield. When you die, it is much easier for your lawyer and heirs to locate accounts if you use banks near at hand. This applies to people who fail to keep records of all their financial transactions.

6. Leave a letter somewhere handy and visible listing your assets, bank accounts, insurance policies and other important financial documents so your family can find their inheritance without too much trouble.

7. To get advice on estate planning, check with your bank. Experts there will help you plan your estate and they can recommend reliable insurance people and lawyers to prepare trusts and wills.

8. Heirs can find out whether or not they have missed any insurance policies by checking with the Institute of Life Insurance, 277 Park Ave., New York 10017. The institute will check its members for you to see if you have any payments coming from overlooked policies. Their membership includes companies handling 90 per cent of the nation's life insurance business.

Benefit at Busch scheduled Saturday

A "Bicentennial Bash at Busch Gardens" is planned Saturday by Town and Gown Junior Auxiliary of USC.

Athletic stars from USC's past and present will compete on tricycles, with Frisbies, blindfolded, in inner tubes and with balloons as part of the odd-ball Olympics.

Gates open at 7 p.m., with events scheduled for 8. Tickets are $10 for adults and $6 for children 4 to 11 years, and cover all Busch Gardens rides and attractions. Proceeds go to provide academic and athletic scholarships to USC.

AMONG former SC athletes participating are footballers O.J. Simpson, Anthony Davis, Los Angeles City Councilman John Ferraro, Mike Garrett, Manfred Moore, Bill Fisk, Rod Sherman, Olympic pole vaulter Bob Seagren Olympic swimmer Roy Saari, Gary Carlsen and Sherry Calvert.

The USC song girls and Trojan Marching Band will add spirit to the occasion.

Among area women helping with arrangements are Mmes. G. Christopher Davis, James Prock and Edward Givens, all of Palos Verdes.

Tickets are available by mail to "Bicentennial Bash at Busch," c/o Alumni Special Events Office, Alumni House, University Park, Los Angeles 90007.

PV women set spring garden tour

Seven gardens on the Palos Verdes Peninsula will be featured at a Spring Garden Tour sponsored by Palos Verdes Women's Club Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The new administration building at South Coast Botanic Gardens, 26300 Crenshaw Blvd., will be open for refreshments from noon to 3:30 p.m. Tram tours of this facility also will be available.

Tickets are $3.50 each and information may be obtained from Mrs. Donald Austin or Mrs. Horace Maxey.

Portraits are records of the progess of time

THIS carefully wrought Sioux cradle is in exhibit of native American Indian work at Downey Museum of Art.

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Portraits that record the life of a woman over a period of 60 years will go on exhibit Tuesday at Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

The woman is Madame Helena Rubinstein and the portraits are from the Helena Rubinstein Foundation; they will hang through June 20.

Offering insight into the personality of the cosmetics industry pioneer — as interpreted by 20th century artists such as Rene Bouche, Count Emmanuele Castelbarco, Salvador Dali, Raoul Dufy, Marie Laurencin, Louis Marcoussis, Roberto Montenegro, Candido Portinari, Graham Sutherland and Pavel Tchelitchew — the paintings reflect a variety of styles.

Highlights include Laurencin's very feminine portrait of 1943; a gouache by Raoul Dufy painted in 1935 showing Rubinstein in a blue sailor suit with a bright red bow; Salvador Dali's surrealistic portrait of 1942-43 depicting her chained to a cliff by ropes of her famous jewels; and probably her most famous portrait of all by Graham Sutherland. This one, showing her wearing a red brocade Balenciaga gown, was painted in 1959 when she was 88 years old.

Aside from the portraits, Rubinstein's taste in art ranged from Impressionist, School of Paris, and contemporary painting and sculpture to decorative arts. Her African and Oceanic art is one of the greatest private collections known.

For the Los Angeles showing of the traveling exhibition of portraits, a selection of these latter wood sculptures is being lent to the museum from the Franklin Family Collection. There are Baule tribal drums, Bambara "chi-wara" dance crests, a Bakota reliquary figure and a Fang four-faced mask. A Bangwa figure of a woman, perhaps a queen, from Cameroon has long been esteemed as one of the finest known African wood sculptures.

Among Oceanic objects once owned by Rubinstein are a New Hebrides hand mask, a Maori house post with three carved figures, and a Marquesas Islands club with tiki beads in each side. This once had a place of honor atop Rubinstein's piano in her Paris residence.

CALIFORNIA EIGHT, an exhibition by the department of education at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., opens today. It represents work of the eight instructors at the museum: Harvey Barrows, sculpture and painting; Diana Manseau, watercolor and drawing; Michael Murillo, drawing; Robert Oblon, fine arts bronze casting; Vic Smith, sculpture; P.C. Tippman, ceramic sculpture; Maidy Wolf, printmaking; and Kay Yee, metalsmithing and jewelry.

The 35 works comprising the show will be on view through June 13. Instructors at Long Beach State University or nearby colleges, the artists maintain studios in the Long Beach area and have shown in various galleries.

"California Eight" will be open during regular museum hours Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m.

NATIVE AMERICAN beadwork is on exhibit at Downey Museum of Art where it may be seen through next Sunday. Hours at the museum, 10419 S. Rives Ave., Downey, are 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

Exquisite selections from the extensive Claremont University Collection show fine examples of various techniques of beadwork and include even rarer examples of quillwork. This collection has never before been exhibited publicly but has been housed in the university archives for the past half century. All work dates prior to 1900; the fine condition of each piece attests to the expertise of the early collectors and the careful storage the university has given them.

Almost all objects are clothing or body ornaments. Writes Bowdoin Gil in the catalogue, "Most of the pieces were meant to be viewed in movement. The artists consciously tried to achieve beauty in motion in almost every work."

One of the most popular pieces is a spectacular Sioux saddle blanket, imaginatively displayed with saddle bags over an invisible horse. Other objects are cradle boards, dolls and bandoleer bags.

BEGINNING June 1, the J. Paul Getty Museum, 17985 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu, will return to a Monday through Friday summer schedule. It will be effective through mid-September; the museum's hours will continue to be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Deputy director Stephen Garrett explained that the museum closes on Saturdays during the summer to avoid traffic congestion in adjacent neighborhoods and on Pacific Coast Highway.

While there is no charge to visit the museum, advance parking reservations still are recommended for guaranteed admission. Reservations may be requested by writing to the reservations office or by telephoning. Visitors who arrive by taxi, bicycle or public bus do not need a reservation. However, bus passengers must request a museum pass from the driver; RTD line 175 stops directly in front of the museum.

OUTSTANDING STUDENT works by Long Beach City College artists will be in the LBCC Gallery May 24 through June 4. The admission-free exhibit may be seen Mondays through Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Fridays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The gallery also is open Mondays through Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

The work, juried by the art faculty, will be representative of the best art produced at LBCC this year. There will be paintings, drawings, sculptures, ceramics, crafts, jewelry, prints, designs and commercial art.

ENGLISH artist Graham Sutherland painted 'Helena Rubinstein in a Red Brocade Balenciaga Gown' in 1959 when she was 88.

Copland to conduct Ojai bills

The internationally renowned American composer and conductor Aaron Copland will be artistic director of the 30th Annual Ojai Festival Friday, Saturday and next Sunday.

The often controversial, always stimulating and increasingly popular music festival is held in the outdoor bowl in Ojai, a small town inland from Ventura.

The Los Angeles Ballet, featuring artistic director John Clifford, will be center stage at the opening event Friday at 9 p.m. Members of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, under direction of Sidney Harth, will play "Concerto Barocco" by Bach, "Concerto Grosso" by Vivaldi, "Dumbarton Oaks" by Stravinsky, "Poeme Electronique" by Varese and "Terpsichore Dances" by Praetorius.

COPLAND will be on the podium for both the 8:30 p.m. Saturday and the 5:30 p.m. Sunday orchestral performances. Saturday, pianist Lorin Hollander will be soloist in Copland's "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra." Other pieces by the 76-year-old-master on the Saturday program will be "Statements" and "Inscape." The Philharmonic will close the program with Mendelssohn's "Fourth Symphony" (Italian).

Copland also will conduct Copland — as well as Mahler — next Sunday. The final program of the three-day festival will open with Mahler's "Symphony No. 4," to be followed by Copland's "Symphonic Ode." Soloist for the Mahler work will be soprano Polly Jo Baker.

In addition to the three evening concerts, the festival will include a choral concert Saturday afternoon and a Sunday morning jazz concert.

Tickets are available at all Mutual Ticket Agencies.

Bowl bows to Bicentennial

Hollywood Bowl's management is proclaiming its Summer Festival 76 as a Bicentennial Season to celebrate. It unfurls, like a flag, its attractions.

These include Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic; distinguished guest conductors such as Ormandy and Rozhdestvensky; stellar soloists, including Cliburn, Rampal, Stern and Watts. There's more in the extended 11-week season with the Bowl hosting two major visiting orchestras: the Israel Philharmonic with Mehta conducting and the Cleveland Orchestra with Lorin Maazel directing and, in the best American tradition, a grand Fourth of July Fireworks concert conducted by Mehta.

Mehta will be on the podium to open the Bowl's regular season July 6, conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic in works by the two composers whose music will be featured throughout the summer: Beethoven (Ninth Symphony) and Copland (Suite from "The Tender Land").

Joining forces in this gala concert will be the famed Scottish National Chorus in its American debut as part of Britain's Bicentennial gifts to the United States, and four vocal soloists.

IN ANNOUNCING programs, general director Ernest Fleischmann said that between July 2 and Sept. 18, the Los Angeles Philharmonic will be heard in 40 concerts, 37 on the regular subscription series and three pre-season events. In addition, the Cleveland Orchestra will present three concerts and the Israel Philharmonic one.

To receive a free 1976 brochure listing complete information, write to Hollywood Bowl Brochure, 135 N. Grand Ave., Room 406, Los Angeles, 90012. Season tickets are available by mail only through May 25. Single performance tickets may be ordered now by mail; after June 14 they may be purchased at the box office.

Barenboim, not Serkin, in recital

Pianist Daniel Barenboim will play an all-Beethoven program next Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Center Pavilion, Los Angeles, when he replaces Rudolf Serkin who has been forced by illness to cancel his scheduled appearance on the Los Angeles Philharmonic's Celebrity Recital series.

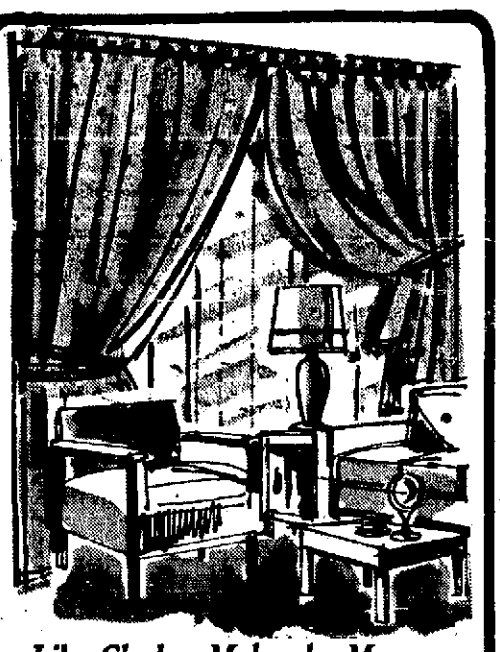

Barenboim is interrupting a busy schedule to substitute for his colleague. He last appeared with the Los Angeles Philharmonic as conductor and as pianist under Zubin Mehta's baton in February, 1973.

L.B. doctor researching alpha thal

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

A deadly birth disorder, fairly widespread among certain Far Eastern peoples, is beginning to be detected more frequently in the United States.

The disorder is known as congenital alpha thalassemia ("sub 2") and is called alpha thal for short.

A Long Beach physician has found that the disorder often is accompanied by severe birth defects affecting several organs. The significance of the finding is that heroic efforts at saving the baby's life are unwarranted.

Dr. Eunice J. Larson, a pediatric pathologist at the Earl and Loraine Miller Children's Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach, says the inherited disorder

health

is well known among Filipinos, Malaysians, Chinese in Singapore and Hong Kong and in Thailand.

Some live as long as two hours, others die within minutes, still others are stillborn.

Dr. Larson said she has seen victims die only minutes after an exchange blood transfusion.

ALPHA THAL children are grotesquely swollen when born and have small lungs, enlarged hearts, defective thymus, defective kidneys, enlarged pancreas, liver and spleen and, in some instances, abnormalities in the gastrointestinal tract. Two babies in Dr. Larson's series displayed evidence of brain damage.

DR. EUNICE J. LARSON
Pediatric pathologist

"These birth defects may or may not be incompatible with life," Dr. Larson says.

Diagnosis of these infants can be made while they're still in the womb by ultrasound or by amniocentesis, insertion of a needle through the mother's abdominal wall into the sac of fluid surrounding the fetus. The ultrasound procedure is easier to perform.

Sometimes the condition can be corrected by therapeutic abortion.

Invariably there is a maternal history of previous stillbirths or death of the newborn soon after birth.

Dr. Larson believes these families should not be given false hope. Five of her mothers had undergone at least one pregnancy with no infant that could live. One woman had produced three affected babies.

When such a medical history is present, Dr. Larson advises testing of both parents for the alpha thal trait.

Dr. Larson gave her report to the Pediatric Pathology Club in Boston.

IN-SIGHTS

Alienation is greatest fear

Asked to identify the single most consistent fear of people with whom I meet and work, I find it to be the sense of being alone, alienated from others, the only one who suffers. Often, when a patient comes to me with a problem, he or she cannot conceive that anyone else could have anything that bad wrong with them.

This may be true even when they know that others might have a similar problem. They may know it, but they still feel alone and separated from the rest of humanity.

In reality, there is literally nothing new under the sun; most all of the ills or anxieties which people have, have been experienced by others past and present. And it is comforting to find out that one is not alone. It may be even more comforting to share feelings and experiences with someone else who has gone through the same trouble, be it emotional or physical.

As a result of this benefit of sharing, a host of organizations has developed over the years. Alcoholics Anonymous, Parents Without Partners, Weight Watchers, Association for Retarded Children — these are but four such organizations which bring together people who have some common stress in their life, and who see an opportunity to learn from and support one another.

IT'S CLEAR that some of these organizations have done more to improve the quality of care for common sufferers than some professional people charged with treating or caring for the problem.

For instance, major legislative improvement in programs for caring for the mentally retarded has come as a result of efforts of the association of parents of retarded children.

And it's well known that Alcoholics Anonymous and some of the similarly structured organizations for drug addicts have been more effective in recovery efforts with fellow sufferers than some professionally-run treatment programs.

IT IS REGRETTABLE that under such stress, people tend to think of themselves in a self-centered way, assuming that "no one else can be like me." It is at such times of hurt and disappointment that the sense of alone-ness can be crushing.

Thus it can be extremely reassuring to encounter someone who has lived through the same travail and survived; indeed, often one finds that the person has not only survived, but become a better person because of the adversity.

One of the special values of the sharing is that both the helper and the helped benefit; it is generally a mutually rewarding encounter. The newly-suffering is brought back into the human community and learns that one can master the adversity. The veteran reinforces his mastery by reliving it, and also gains the satisfaction of relieving the suffering of someone else.

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him care of this newspaper. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

MEDICINE AND YOU

Danger to newborns

Tranquilizers of the benzodiazepine family — Librium, Valium and Serax — may, if taken during pregnancy, lead to withdrawal symptoms in the newborn baby, researchers report.

Excretion of these drugs is slow in adults and markedly delayed in premature infants. So signs of drug withdrawal may be significantly delayed in the baby.

ben zinser

Physicians caring for infants of mothers who have received these compounds during pregnancy should be alert for a delayed withdrawal syndrome. This is especially likely to take place after the infant has been discharged from the newborn nursery.

The report is that of Brooklyn doctors in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Combating diarrhea

A combination of the drugs trimethoprim and sulfamethoxazole has proved to be the "best currently available drug" for the treatment of shigellosis, a disorder that causes diarrhea.

The finding is highly significant since the drug ampicillin trihydrate, which usually is used to treat this disorder, is sometimes failing to knock out the causative germ.

Resistance to strains of Shigella, the causative organism, to ampicillin is becoming an increasing problem in the United States.

The combination of these two medications customarily is used to treat urinary tract infections.

A liquid suspension form of the two drugs was used in a trial against shigellosis among 28 infants and children in Parkland Memorial Hospital, Dallas, Tex.

When the bacteria were susceptible, there was no difference in response to ampicillin or to the combination preparation, researchers report. But patients who were resistant to ampicillin and then treated with the combination responded well.

Researchers were affiliated with the Southwestern Medical School of the University of Texas at Dallas.

Brucellosis on increase

The largest number of cases of human brucellosis in six years occurred in 1974, reversing the gradual decline of the disease noted in the last 27 years.

The Center for Disease Control, Atlanta, Ga., says there were 246 cases in 1974 — an increase of 78 cases from the previous year.

Brucellosis is an infectious disease characterized by an acute feverish stage and later by a chronic stage marked by relapses of fever, weakness, sweats and vague aches and pains. It is also known as undulant fever.

Although slaughterhouses have long been considered a prime focus of infection, the government's latest figures show that less than half of the affected workers were in the meat processing industry.

Even so, contact with infected swine is still the greatest source of infection. But 65 cases were attributed to infection from cattle, 21 to eating unpasteurized dairy products, and four cases were attributed to contact with pet dogs. One case in Arkansas occurred in a hunter who had killed and cleaned a deer.

Details appear in Infectious Diseases, a medical newspaper.

Pollution is culprit

The increased death rate among women because of lung cancer is not due to cigarette smoking but rather to air pollution, says a doctor.

Dr. Geoffrey Myddelton of Vaud, Switzerland, says the "obvious" answer to the increase in lung cancer is air pollution by cancer-causing particles.

"The most likely cause of this is the internal combustion engine, especially the diesel," he says.

"Enthusiasm for the cigarette theory should not be allowed to hold back the thorough investigation of every possible factor."

The doctor adds:

"Whatever the truth may be on the causes of male lung cancer, it is clear that four out of five cases among women have nothing to do with cigarettes, and the steady rise in the disease must have some other cause."

He notes that in one study of 2,002 female cases of lung cancer, about 83 per cent were not associated with smoking.

Risk to babies

The use of even the most carefully monitored oxygen treatment to prevent brain damage to premature babies still carries a risk of causing blindness.

This is the finding of a team of specialists who make their report in a special supplement of Pediatrics, the monthly journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The complication that can follow oxygen use is known as retrolental fibroplasia. This is scarring of the eye's retina resulting from changes in the blood vessels of the retina, causing permanent blindness in some cases.

Even though studies 20 years ago linked oxygen with the disorder, "the problem of oxygen therapy for premature infants is far from being solved," the specialists report. "There appears to be no concentration of oxygen in excess of that in air that is not associated with the risk of developing retrolental fibroplasia."

As to whether oxygen therapy should be used, the physician must use his best judgment, the doctors say. Definite conclusions await further research.

Shaker artifacts are selling well

Q. "Please discuss American Redware pottery." — Mrs. G. L., Shamokin, Pa.

A. Devotees of American country pottery favor redware objects with their warm earth tones. The early handcrafted pieces, treated to various glazes which intensified their color and made the objects nonpourous, are prized.

The race is on for redware, particularly the slip decorated or sgraffito wares. The latter examples possess scratched or incised line motifs. The decorated redware pieces proved popular as presentation pieces. Tip: Buyer beware as numerous reproductions abound. Redware value guide: creamer, brown glaze, $80; pie plate, slip decor, yellow lines, 8-inches diameter, $95.

Q. "Any assistance you can give me in appraising my collection of Madame Alexander dolls would be appreciated." — Laverne, Thomasville, Ga.

A. These delightful dolls can be converted into dollars faster than you can say Madame Alexander. Value guide: Alice in Wonderland, composition, 14-inches tall, $37; Greek boy, 8 inches tall, $32; Margaret O'Brien, 14½-inches tall, $85; Nina, the ballerina, 1940s, $30; Princess Elizabeth, coronation, 14-inches tall, $50; Scarlett O'Hara, composition, 14-inches tall, $85; Sonja Henie, composition, 19-inches tall, $75; Snow White, 13-inches tall, $65.

Q. "Have Shaker artifacts continued to command collector attention?" — Mrs. E. F., Chattanooga, Tenn.

A. Mother Ann Lee arrived in the United States during the 1770s with a small group of dedicated followers and a century later the Shaker movement boasted approximately 8,000 members. The articles made by them in their 18 self-supporting communities are coveted, thus Shaker collectibles are solid investments. Shaker value guide: horsehair sieve, 10-inches diameter, $45; original Shaker music, 1892, $38; sewing basket, small, $85; seed bag, $20; Shaker rocker, $345; spinning wheel, $325; yarn swift, $50.

Q. "Advertising items relating to the beer industry certainly bring in substantial returns based on my shopping experience." — Bill, North Platte, Neb.

A. The Breweriana items on tap at local flea markets bring mouth-watering prices. Although close to 2,000 breweries were active in the late 1800s, this number has decreased to less than 200 currently. Consequently, antiquers have acquired a thirst for the various advertising items distributed by American breweries. Everything from a beer glass to a watch fob is considered a fortunate find in this category. Breweriana value guide: Budweiser, "Say When" tray, circa 1914, $110; mug, stoneware, "Rochester Brewing Co.", $65; paperweight, "Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer", $17.50.

Appraise your antiques with Dan D'Imperio's book and value guide "The ABC's of Victorian Antiques", Dodd, Mead & Co., $9.95. An autographed copy may be ordered from the Star-Telegram Syndicate, Inc., Box 681, Weatherford, TX. 76086. Please include check or money order.

Pat Harmatz is in charge of arrangements and will take reservations at 2911 Heather Road, Long Beach. A lox and bagels brunch will be served. Tickets ahead of time are $2 for adults and $1 for children, and at the door, $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children.

Favorites sing and dance

silents and working their way up to Francis, the Talking Mule.

The program notes passed out by United Artists piously announce that "while designed as family entertainment because it's clean as a hound's tooth, it should also appeal to the college crowd." They then proceed to show Charlie Chaplin tucking a dog into his pants to sneak him into a bar. The dog's tail protrudes through a hole in his pants. Ha, ha. And vulgar, too.

Nobody can deny the movie's rather blatant attempts to cash in on the success formula of the two "That's Entertainment!" movies, because "It's Showtime!" even opens with a stage full of dogs carrying umbrellas and performing "Singin' in the Rain."

Eleanor Powell does a tap dance with a horse. Gene Kelly sings a song with a puppy named Fido. Other sections are devoted to cats, cows, monkeys, dolphins, Rin Tin Tin, lions, mules and other unfortunates — many of them involved in horrifying death scenes filmed in the days before the Humane Society was formed to protect them from such cruelties. Horses plunged to watery graves; cats are clawed to death. It's enough to frighten the children it's intended to entertain into hysterical outbursts of terror and emotional empathy.

The film isn't even well-assembled. You don't follow "Lassie Come Home" with old clips from Rin Tin Tin two-reelers unless you know nothing about dramatic impact. It's fun to watch Elizabeth Taylor win the Grand National in the immortal "National Velvet," but it would be more beneficial to all ages just to show the original film again without the butchery.

Most of the animals in this film are depicted smoking, getting drunk, killing each other and lusting after each other like performers in a porno movie. One dog even takes the law into his own hands, avenging himself for society by spraying a cop with a garden hose in his mouth.

While it reminds us how closely our ideas of comedy were (and still are) related to cruelty and violence, I still am not much amused by the thought of giving the sins and flaws of submental humans to poor, unsuspecting animals.

Since nobody of sound mind should expect an animal to be human, it's degrading to the animals and insulting to people to show them dolled up in clothes doing all the evil things to people that humans do to each other, just for the sake of a laugh.

THE WORST SECTION of the film is devoted to cats. Since I guess cats are too independent and strong-willed to train, most of the feline performers are shown eating other animals, preying on rodents, and clawing each other and various people to a bloody pulp. Nothing very entertaining about Rhubarb terrorizing an entire room by hissing and snarling at everyone from a chandelier while the humans try to knock him off with broomsticks. And I was not titillated by the endless scenes of lions being beaten, thwarted and thrown down flights of stairs.

The funniest thing in it is purely accidental. Ronald Reagan, bottling a baby chimp named Bonzo, says with a brave attempt to impersonate a living actor going through a real emotion: "I wonder if I could teach this monkey the difference between right and wrong." It's the people, not the animals, who make fools of themselves here, and the animals, not the people, who seem to know the difference.

on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: Is bridge played behind the Iron Curtain?

Traveling Same,
New Orleans

Answer: In Russia it is considered a waste of time and the government frowns on it. It is played in several other communist countries. Poland, for example, entered a competent team in the 1972 World Team Olympiad.

Recently, past ACBL president Lew Mathe and his wife played in Hungary where most play the "Polish Club," a highly artificial system, with variations. Eugenie Mathe reports in her L.O.L. column "Only one individual was in any way unpleasant. He did not want to waste time to explain his bidding or convention card, but when I opened one heart, he started to read our whole convention card.

'Let's not waste time,' I said sweetly. He apparently couldn't believe I was showing an opening bid with a heart suit."

Dear Mr. Corn: My husband held 10 solid hearts and three diamonds to the king. They bid and made a small slam, but we had disagreement about the correct opening bid. What would you recommend?

Slow or Fast
Richardson, Texas

Answer: If I were assured the opponents would not interfere, I would open a game demand to try to find out about a diamond fit and a possible grand slam. In practice, I would give up on science and open six hearts.

Hopefully this will shut everyone out and maybe I'll make it with the right cards in dummy or the wrong opening lead or possibly by making an inspired play. I am always optimistic about such things (not as often justified).

Dear Mr. Corn: I dealt and passed this hand:

♠ — 5-16-A
♥ 10 8 7 5 4 2
♣ A 10

What should I have bid after partner opened one heart?

Nice Support,
Ft. Worth

Answer: I would have opened that hand and instead of me wondering what to bid over one heart, my partner would have had that problem. Based on Aces' Count, you have 17 points.

Given the pass, your next bid depends upon system agreement. If a jump shift is played as forcing (standard treatment), I would jump to three diamonds hoping to find out if a grand slam were possible. If the bidding might be dropped anywhere along the line, I would jump directly to six hearts and consider it a good bet.

Dear Mr. Corn: How should we have bid this hand to the right slam?

West	East
♠ A K 10 7 2	♠ Q 9
♥ A Q 9 2	♥ K 8
♦ A K J 5	♦ 9 7 4 2
♣ —	♣ A Q J 9 8

New Horizons,
Chicago

Answer: On balance, the best slam is six diamonds. This needs only a 3-2 trump break for success. I would bid:

West	East
2♠	3♠
4♦	6♦
Pass

Dear Mr. Corn: What is a free double?

Charge Card,
San Francisco

Answer: A double of a contract which represents game if undoubled (e.g. Opponents compete up to three spades with 60 on score). The only thing free about the double is that they're not doubled into game since they're already there. If they make the contract, it can be expensive.

JIM MURRAY
All the champagne you wish at brunch

NO WONDER Jim Murray of Long Beach is considered such an imaginative young restaurateur. Here's a partial list of the delectable entrees and colorful cocktails at his El Paso Cantina restaurant, 2404 Sepulveda Blvd., Torrance, a block east of Crenshaw Boulevard:

Crab enchiladas rancheras with sour cream...carne asada steak with a superlative Mexican sauce...pescado (whitefish) Vera Cruz with a shrimp sauce...18 different combination Mexican dinners...Sunday champagne brunch...beautiful Margarita cocktails by the glass or pitcher...chill Colorado...Manuel's special burrito with meat, beans, spices, cheese and guacamole...Poor Pedro's ground sirloin stuffed with ortegas and cheese...the Rosa Delgada (Skinny Rosy), ground sirloin steak for dieters...and such fascinating cocktails as the Pina Colada, Sonora Sling, Sombrero, Tequila Sunrise, Coco Loco and Tequila Maria as well as sangria (wine with fruit juices.)

El Paso Cantina is a comparatively new Mexican restaurant, but it tries to look old with a nostalgia decor reminiscent of cantinas of the early 1900s. It attracts many patrons from Long Beach because they know it serves superb Mexican specialities at reasonable prices and has excellent service by pretty waitresses. The new menus, in the form of newspapers, offer a big variety of 18 combinations, $2.60 to $3.85. There are also elaborate gourmet entrees called "especialidades."

The Sunday champagne brunch, 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., is unusual because the guests are invited to have all the champagne they wish at no extra charge. The entrees, $2.50 to $3.95, range from fancy Mexican-style scrambled eggs to fine omelettes, fiesta cakes and huevos rancheros (ranch eggs fried in butter topped with sauce.)

One of the new dinner entrees is the whitefish Vera Cruz-style, $5.50, with a fine sauce made with shrimp, fresh mushrooms and capers. It comes with soup or salad, Spanish rice and tortillas. Other "especialidades" include the carne asada steak, $5.95, the finest corn-fed eastern beef, and the crab enchiladas rancheras, $4.40. Each comes with a different kind of mild sauce and other items.

Construction has started for a second El Pasa Cantina in Long Beach's new Marina Pacifica development on the west side of Pacific Coast Highway a few blocks north of East Second Street. It will have boat access from Los Cerritos Channel. Jim, who has lived in Long Beach 20 years, has planned the new restaurant on a big scale, with 16,000 square feet of floor space. It will have many dining and banquet rooms and six cantinas (cocktail lounges.)

THERE ONCE lived a man named Andy Gassaway Sr. He was Long Beach's most famous maker of hotcakes. His recipe for buttermilk hotcakes was so wonderful that people drove here from nearby cities just for those hotcakes, topped with melting butter and lots of fresh syrup.

Andy is gone and so is his restaurant, called Andy's Hotcake House. But those wonderful buttermilk hotcakes live on. They're one of the attractions at Andy's Restaurant, Pacific Avenue at Anaheim Street. It's a cafeteria which was opened by Andy over 15 years ago. It's now owned and operated by his son, Andy Jr.

You won't be able to enjoy any of those hotcakes today at Andy's Restaurant, because it's closed Saturdays and Sundays. But those hotcakes are served every morning, Monday through Friday. They're still made exactly the same way as they were back in the 1940s and 1950s, using Andy Sr.'s old-fashioned recipe. Those hotcakes not only look good and taste good — but they also have that heavenly buttermilk aroma. Three hotcakes are 75 cents. Or you may have two of them on the special breakfast, $1.30, which includes an egg, two strips of fine bacon and delicious, fresh coffee.

Open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Andy's Restaurant is a house of unusual cafeteria quality, because everything is prepared from the recipes of the original Andy. Andy Jr.'s wife Camilla, young and industrious, does the baking, turning out the biggest cloverleaf rolls in town. Included with the luncheons and dinners, those rolls are as fresh and wonderful in their way as Andy's hotcakes. Camilla also bakes muffins, cakes, breads and rich, thick cream or fruit pies of the best quality.

Taught by his father to serve only the best, Andy Jr. buys only the most costly items for his meals, such as corn-fed beef, Alaska halibut and the tenderest turkeys. The dinners range from delectable, fresh meatloaf, $2.80, to baked, sugar-cured ham, $2.95; tender, juicy roast beef, $3.20; corned beef, $3.10; loin roast pork, $3.25; roast turkey, $3.25, and Swiss steak with gravy, $2.90. The accompaniments include soup and salad, potatoes or another vegetable, hot roll, coffee, tea or buttermilk. If you wish you can have soup or salad and two hot vegetables.

Andy's features two kinds of luncheons — large or medium. The large luncheon is for those who like their big meal in the middle of the day, such as roast beef, $2.75; roast turkey, $2.80, or corned beef, $2.65. They come with salad, vegetable, roll or muffin. The medium-sized luncheons change daily, such as chicken enchilada, $1.85, on Wednesdays, or chicken livers, $1.85, on Thursdays. They come with salad, vegetable, roll or muffin.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Coq au vin pure poetry

Today's chef of the week, Alan W. Johnson, is associate director the International Center, Long Beach State University, and has served as foreign student adviser since 1968.

Born in Coronado, Johnson grew up in San Diego. He earned his A.B. Degree in political science from USC; M.Ed. Degree in education administration, University of Cincinnati; degree in guidance and counseling, Teachers College, Columbia University.

mildred flanary

He returned to USC in 1954 for his Ed.D. degree in higher education.

Between degrees, Johnson's life has been full of varied experiences. In 1937, following graduation from USC, he served for two years as field secretary, Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, Washington, D.C., traveling throughout the United States. In 1942, he was appointed personnel supervisor and wage administration supervisor for Republic Aviation Corp. Farmingdale, Long Island, N. Y. Three years later, he joined the Solar Aircraft Co. in San Diego, where he served as personnel manager.

JOHNSON'S FIRST teaching experience was at New York University, where he was instructor in wage and salary administration. During the summer he returned to USC as instructor in personnel administration.

San Diego State College next claimed him as part-time instructor in psychology; then UCLA, as graduate assistant in the office of the dean of students.

The years 1950 to 1961 found him at San Francisco State College, in the position of associate dean of students. Johnson next journeyed to the University of Houston, where he served as dean of students, before returning to USC in 1965. He served as director of the Foreign Student Office for three years, before coming to LBSU and a similiar position.

JOHNSON IS ACTIVE in the National Association of Foreign Student Affairs, and is a member of Phi Delta Kappa education honorary. A member of the Kiwanis Club of Long Beach, he formerly was active in the San Francisco and Houston Kiwanis Clubs.

Married to the former Geraldine McGraw, there are three daughters and two sons in the family. They enjoy sailing, and belong to the Alamitos Bay Yacht Club. He is owner of a citrus ranch in Tulare County.

ALAN W. JOHNSON, ED.D

Johnson also has a talent for writing — both poetry and prose. In fact, several of his books have been published. He says, "I do my best writing in the middle of the night — that's when the ideas pop into my head."

Geraldine says, "He has so many irons in the fire that he is sometimes absent minded. But he is one of the most considerate persons I've ever known." She likes his cooking, too . . especially his Coq au Vin. Here's how he does it.

CHEF'S COQ AU VIN

1 good size chicken fryer cut-up
2 tablespoons butter
Salad herbs: a bit of oregano or celery seed, or any other tasty seasoning
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup white wine, dry or sweet, according to taste
2 tablespoons flour

Use a metal container (I use the bottom of a broiler pan). On top of the stove, melt the butter in it. Roll the cut-up pieces of the fryer in butter; then season on both sides with herbs. Bake for 45 minutes at 325-350 degrees, turning once. Take chicken from oven and set aside on plate which can be placed in oven to keep warm. Put the broiler pan on stove top over low heat. Add a bit of wine to drippings and stir. Add flour, stirring with a whisk to avoid lumping, and add remainder of wine, as in making white sauce. When done, return the baked chicken pieces to the sauce, coat and serve.

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Computing commute

DEAR MR. SMITH: After four years of semi-unemployment, I acquired a position in the Los Angeles area, 110 miles from my Santa Barbara address. Construction engineering can be unstable and at 61 years of age it would be too risky to have my wife quit her position and relocate in this area. We would be burning our bridges.

To maintain an additional residence costs $5,400 a year for rent, utilities outside meals, plus 9,000 miles to go home on weekends. In order to be gainfully employed I can accept this expense, but if I have to pay $1,500 federal tax on this added expense, I feel I am being penalized. It certainly kills incentive for wanting to work. What can I do? — N. McG.

All of your car mileage and other job-hunting expenses are fully deductible. I believe you will also be allowed your present mileage if your position can be shown to be temporary employment, rather than permanent or for an indefinite term.

Although you and your wife will suffer from the duplication of expenses, if you move to Los Angeles while she remains in Santa Barbara, the IRS and the courts are not sympathetic. They have each ruled that you must separately meet the requirements for deducting living expenses while away from home on business.

It would seem inadvisable to burden yourself with large amounts of additional expense, unless you are willing to accept the possibility of disallowances if IRS should choose your return for audit. However, if you decide to move to Los Angeles, you may have a deduction for moving expenses.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My wife and I are both past 65 years of age and our income consists mainly of social security. Our gross taxable income has been well under the $4,900 stated in the enclosed newspaper clipping.

How do I go about getting our names removed from the federal and state mailing list? Tax forms continue to arrive each year as they have for many years and even though we owe no tax, I do not feel that these forms should be ignored. — D.F.W.

Here are some options: 1) keep filing as before. Some taxpayers do this because they feel better if they preserve the continuity; 2) let the blanks come, but file only when required; or 3) send back the blanks with the notation: "not required to file."

Tax laws change constantly and a radical tax reform program is always a possibility. There may be some comfort in staying on the list if only to see what Washington has been up to lately.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Two years ago, after hip replacement surgery, my orthopedist recommended that I exercise by swimming daily. I found it impractical from a time standpoint to swim at a club, so this year, after getting a letter from the orthopedist so suggesting, I had a backyard pool installed. My question relates, of course, to writing off a portion of the pool's cost of about $13,000. What would be a reasonable formula and where in the return should it be? — S.H.B.

Any deduction of this type is listed with your other medical expenses on Form 1040. First determine how much your residence increased in value solely by reason of installing the pool. If, for example, the increase in value was $7,000, you subtract the $7,000 from the $13,000 spent. The balance of $6,000 is your medical deduction. You can also deduct for pool utilities, supplies, water and maintenance. Here again, you must reduce the total spent by the amount which is the percentage of use by other people. Obtain free IRS booklet 502.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I own 700 shares of common stock which I bought in 1937 at $48 per share. There was a split of two for one later on. I had to report all dividends and pay tax. If I sold these shares at the current market ($65) how would I report this sale for federal income tax purposes? — E.A.H.

The 700 shares at $48 cost you $3,360. Assuming that the split was non-taxable, you now own 1,400 shares at a cost of $24 per share. If sold for $65, you have a long-term gain of $41 per share to be reported on Schedule D. You may add to the $24 cost per share, any related broker's commissions and other expenses relating to the purchase, exchange and sale.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I earned $500 on some South Central Bell Telephone Company debentures I purchased last year. My Form 1099-Div for 1975 shows this income as 1) gross dividend and other distributions on stock $500 and 2) dividends qualifying for exclusion. I was surprised as I expected this income to be shown as interest. Although I used to handle my late employer's investments this was my first venture for myself. I mentioned it to our company auditor and he said it was a mistake and that I should report the income as interest. What do you advise? — G.P.

Most likely it is interest — but why not write to the company and ask if they didn't make a mistake? If it is interest, don't forget to deduct any purchased interest from the collection in reporting the taxable income. Also, if purchased at a premium, you may elect to amortize the premium.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P. O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed stamped envelope. Your identity will not be disclosed.

Plants do better in an air-conditioned room. Don't you?

Dear Mother Earth:

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR MOTHER EARTH:

For Mother's Day, my mother received a Shamrock plant in a four-inch pot purchased from a florist shop. They said to give the plant a spray of mist each day, but isn't there more that should be done? When should we repot it? Does it grow indoors, outdoors, shade or in the sun? The plant is growing tall. Do we pinch it back? It's amazing, but I can't find anything about the care of the Shamrock plant in any of our books. Thank you. — M.L.

DEAR M.L.:

And all the rest of you who received Shamrock plants back on St. Patrick's Day. From our own experience, when we owned our retail plant store, we always got a large shipment of Shamrocks in four-inch pots about three or four days before March 17.

No matter how hard we tried to convince people that these beautiful plants had been grown in greenhouses, especially for the occasion, and shouldn't be looked upon as anything more than cut flowers in terms of longevity, indoors, their absolutely irresistible clover-shaped magenta and green leaves make the Shamrock something "you simply have to have."

The best you can hope for is to keep your Shamrock in a cool, light spot. DO mist it frequently, keep it damp, and don't bother pinching back the growth that goes upright because that's the way it's always going to go. Best place for the Shamrock is outside, planted in the ground in the shade. And that's no blarney. Happy growing!

(If you have any questions to ask Dear Mother Earth, send them in care of the Independent Press Telegram. As many as possible will be used in this column.)

THE FORMULA

Breathe new life into leather

Making leather is an ancient art that the Egyptians practiced thousands of years ago, using oak bark in the tanning process. In Europe guilds of leather makers were formed, which are believed to be the forerunners of labor unions.

Leather is a porous material that breathes. This fact sets it apart from synthetics that generally do not. But if the pores of leather are permitted to become clogged with foreign materials such as dirt, the ability to breathe and be flexible is impaired. This formula will do a good job of keeping your leather objects clean and flexible.

All you will need is: three fourths cup ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL (from your drugstore), one-half cup WHITE DISTILLED VINEGAR and one and one-half cups WATER. Mix these three ingredients together and stir. Store in glass or plastic container. To use, dampen cloth or sponge with mixture and rub into leather until clean. Note: Isopropyl Alcohol is flammable. Do not use near open flame.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

(There has never been a how-to book so practical and helpful as THE FORMULA BOOK. Hundreds of easy recipes put savings and fun into the making of your own personal and home care items. Over 200 pages of recipes, diagrams and instructions on ingredients and equipment, in a large paperback format. $5.95. Send to The Formula Book, Independent Press Telegram, P.O. Box 2218, Shawnee Mission, Kan. 66201.)

DEAR ABBY

Fine end to skiing weekend

DEAR ABBY: My friend (I'll call her "Marge") and I drove up to a skiing resort for a vacation and agreed to share expenses. We used her car.

While Marge was driving we were stopped and given a ticket for speeding. She paid the fine.

After the trip, Marge was noticeably cool toward me. I later learned from a mutual friend that Marge's nose was slightly out of joint because we had agreed to share expenses and I didn't offer to pay half the fine.

Do you think a speeding ticket is a legitimate expense? — KAY

DEAR KAY: No, it's an ILLEGITIMATE expense. But Marge violated the law herself and shouldn't have expected you to pay half the fine.

DEAR ABBY: How does a girl say no to a guy she's been saying yes to for two years? — CLAUDIA

DEAR CLAUDIA: The same way she says no to anybody else. Only louder!

DEAR ABBY: I am the woman who wrote to say that I was expecting my fourth child and my husband had been pestering me for a girl because we already had three boys. (He sent me a Valentine with the message "THINK PINK" and even kiddingly threatened to "divorce" me if I didn't have a girl this time.)

Well, I had another boy! I was in labor for 10 hours and for some reason this was the hardest delivery I've ever had, but thank God, the baby is perfect.

abigail van buren

As soon as I opened my eyes, my husband said, "You're just NEVER going to have a girl, are you?

He doesn't know it yet, but I'm never going to have another boy, either! — FINISHED

DEAR FINISHED: I am not suggesting that you initiate an argument with your husband, but you really ought to advise him that the MALE determines the sex of the child, so if he's disappointed, he should blame himself — and not you!

DEAR ABBY: I just read an article in the newspaper about the rudeness of smokers, and I had to share it with you because you are always sticking up for the rights of nonsmokers:

A Flint, Mich., school teacher who was at a restaurant recently had to endure smoke that was drifting from an adjoining booth throughout his meal.

Upon finishing, he walked over to the smoker, dropped some gnawed chicken bones on her plate and said, 'Ma'am, you've been giving me YOUR garbage for quite a while, so I thought maybe you might like some of mine."

Abby, I'm glad that nonsmokers have finally refused to put up with the pollution of smokers. — SIXTEEN AND STILL CLEAN

DEAR SIXTEEN: Good for you. Stay that way!

Stop the rat race, I want to get off at Sark

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

SARK, Channel Islands — "Stop the world, I want to get off."

Everybody knows the feeling, but not everybody knows where to indulge it.

How about a feudal fiefdom where no cars or ulcers are allowed. Where the climate is relatively balmy. Where you can walk from one end to the other in a morning. Where charm drips from every hedgerow and cozy cottage. Where the food is rich as cream and has a French accent. And where the gorse, bluebells, primroses and bracken take turns painting the hillsides yellow in April, blue in May, pink in June and russet in the fall.

Fantasy tripping? Not at all. This little piece of Paradise is called Sark, and it sits in the English Channel with its larger and smaller sister islands, its remoteness and diminutive size having precluded its leap into the 20th century.

Horsedrawn carriage is the means of transportation if one chooses not to go by foot or bicycle. The island's stalwart equines, which resemble Clydesdales, clop, clop down tiny lanes which have never been violated by the automobile.

Among the nice things about Sark is that it comes in two — Big Sark and Little Sark which are connected by a dramatic carriage road rising 300 feet above the sea. Far below a deserted cove and blue water beckon and a winding cliff path provides a way if you decide to accept the invitation.

travel

SINCE THE entire island is a mere 3½ by 1½ miles, it's not difficult to imagine the petiteness of Little Sark which, nonetheless, has its own village and hostelry.

Sark is an immoveable feast for nature lovers. In adddition to island flora, there are rock pools in wild settings, magnficent cliffs for bold climbers and a series of unusual caves, most of them accessible.

The island ruler — and of course it has one — is a former London engineer who inherited Sark from his grandmother, the legendary Dame of Sark, who died a year and a half ago.

Now Le Seigneur (the overlord), as he is called, and his down-to-earth spouse have moved into Le Seigneurie, a small but magnificent manor house surrounded by impressive gardens. Le Seigneurie is open to the public several days a week.

Why the French titles? A logical reason. All the Channel Islands were French before the Norman Conquest united them with England, and the French have tried a number of times since to reclaim them.

Le Seigneur rules through a legislative body, the Court of Chief Pleas, which is composed of 40 landowners, 12 people's deputies and an executive body of island officials. There is one member of the Chief Pleas for every 10 inhabitants so, although feudal, Sark does have democratic overtones.

THE GOVERNENT was formed in 1563 when Queen Elizabeth I appointed Helier de Carteret of Jersey as its first Seigneur. De Carterets still populate the island, several of them operating hotels and boarding homes today.

Sark has a court conducted by the seneschal or judge, a prevot or sheriff and a greffier or clerk.

Th court can send felons to the island's prison — a quaint stone building — for up to three days!

Sark has a sprinkling of small hotels and bed and board places plus farmhouses that take in guests. But since the entire island can accommodate only 250 visitors at a time, reservations are a must. July and August are the busy months; the spring and fall are the ideal times to visit.

In addition to banning cars, Sark also has the No Welcome Mat out for airplanes, and access is only by boat. A motor launch runs back and forth from St. Peter Port, the capital of nearby Guernsey, several times each morning and afternoon, the trip taking an hour. Guernsey is easy to reach by air or boat-rail from Great Britain and people coming from France can reach Sark by sea from St. Malo and other channel ports or by air via Guernsey.

A TRACTOR-DRAWN wagon, seating a couple dozen people, will meet your boat and take you on the first lap from the harbor.

There are several bicycle rental places, a number of small shops specializing in woolens and jewelry, but no one has been so crass as to have built a shopping center.

Prices are lower than in inflation-plagued Great Britain, on a par with the other Channel Islands, and the food, leaning heavily on shellfish and fish, is an added enticement.

There are pubs set discreetly along the lanes. And the private homes look like storybook creations.

Even the dogs, all male since only Le Seigneur can own a bitch, have an insouciant spirit all their own, running free, as they do, of all restraint. Some of them have formed emotional attachments to certain horses, following them all day as they make their rounds, and loping along under the carriages as concerned passengers cluck-cluck for their safety.

Another special quality about Sark is its quiet. If the world is too much with you, this silence is nice.

With only an occasional farm tractor to mar the tranquil sounds of the horses (the dogs seem to have forgotten how to bark), you do indeed think the world has stopped.

Only in Sark you don't want to get off.

SECLUDED cove on Channel Island of Sark is typical of quiet lifestyle sans cars and planes and other distractions.

AMTRAK trip to Las Vegas

Eleven of the leading hotels in Las Vegas are participating in the package deal offered by AMTRAK's new "Las Vegas Limited" weekend trips from Los Angeles Union Depot, starting Friday.

The hotels include the El Morocco, Flamingo, Fremont, Hacienda, Landmark, Mint, California, Nevada, Stardust, Thunderbird and Union Plaza.

The weekend package, which includes round-trip rail fare and a room on a double occupancy basis for two nights and three days, has been developed at a special price of $89.95 per person, plus tax, and includes free champagne parties and free box lunches both ways on the train.

Another highlight of the package is a special fun book that includes coupons for $50 in cash plus free food and beverage, souvenirs and other surprises from the participating hotels and casinos.

An extra added attraction, the first weekend only, is a free ticket to the world-famous annual Elks Helldorado Rodeo.

Additional information and reservations may be obtained from the Los Angeles office of Iron Horse Inc., tour operators for AMTRAK's "Las Vegas Limited."

GAL-IVANTING

Exploring treasures of Taiwan

travel

A worldly friend of mine once described Taipei as "the yeastiest city in the Orient — a place where you can buy anything from a mistress to a murder."

— Before that, I had had little interest in going there. Taiwan represented no cultural heritage in my mind. It was names like Peking, Shanghai and Canton that carried the mystery of the Orient for me.

But "yeasty"? That was the word that did it. Suddenly I could hardly wait to go.

At last I was in Hong Kong boarding a Cathay Pacific plane that would conveniently connect in Taipei with my Northwest-Orient flight from Hong Kong to California via Tokyo. We had barely landed in Taiwan before I realized that this intriguing country today embodies more of the ways of ancient China than any other place on earth.

Women worked rice paddies right alongside the landing strip, their huge straw hats repeating the upward tilt of pagoda rooftops in the background. As we drew closer to the city, flags of the inevitable laundry waving from bamboo poles overhung shop signs scribed in vivid calligraphy.

MY MOST overwhelming impression, though, was of the majestic Grand Hotel rising above the city from its hilltop perch.

Looking like a red and gold pagoda palace, this splendid hotel is architecturally unique in the world. Its lobby is a veritable museum. Spectacular Chinese rugs, ornately carved woodpaneling and elaborate handmade furniture reflect the most exalted dynasties of ancient China.

A shopping arcade on the lower level is similarly representative of the best in Taiwan with window displays of Chinese opera masks, jewelry, jade objects, ceramics and mandarin jackets. I was unable to stay here because the hotel was filled, but a new wing is almost completed, which will provide more rooms in the future.

After spending two days in Taiwan, the "yeasty" part still eluded me, but I was more than compensated by its cultural aspect.

The National Palace Museum is the place to begin. Articles carried in most of the shops are replicas of museum treasures, so it is good to see the originals and learn of their ancient uses before shopping.

THE MUSEUM is a copy of one in Peking, the Forbidden City. Its treasures date from the oldest time.

During the Sino-Japanese conflict in 1937, China's treasures were stored on Taiwan for safekeeping. When that war was followed by the Communist takeover the treasures remained with the new Republic of China and the museum was built to house them.

You will see the originals of the chic, three-legged ice buckets so popular with American shoppers that are copied from shang dynasty ritual vessels.

Later, when you visit the shops of Taipei, you will appreciate more the marble incense burners copied from ancient porcelain ones, the Han dynasty pi pendants in jade worn today as jewelry, Ming dynasty carved lacquer plates and bowls reproduced today by artisans still using age-old methods and the hand-painted china executed in today's factories by descendents of the artists who created it for Emperors.

Displays of carved ivory in the museum are incredible in detail. One multi-storied pagoda supports tiny bells at each corner of its upturned tiers. It required three generations of carvers to complete the piece.

THE JADE rooms are most impressive to Americans. Among the valuable pieces is the famous Chinese cabbage carved from a hunk of white and green jadeite with tinges of red.

The artist spent 18 years transforming the natural contours of the hard stone into the vegetable, all the time perplexed about what form to give two protruding knobs from one side. Finally he ceased work to meditate on the problem for three years.

When inspiration finally came, it was in the form of two grasshoppers that appear to have alighted upon the lovely sculpture.

Lest you think that Taipei is all art and culture, don't fail to attend a Mongolian barbecue. It won't be what you thought — no beef on a spit — but you will experience a distinctive Taiwanian dinner that is absolutely superb.

From TWA:
Charter flights that don't forget you're a paying customer.

Some charter flights act like they're doing you a favor just letting you on board. After all, you're paying less so expect less.

At TWA, we don't buy that. A TWA passenger is a TWA passenger, scheduled or charter. And to our crews, there's no difference.

We'll do everything we can to make your charter flight as enjoyable as possible. And here's why you can count on it.

50 years' experience under our wings.

We've been in the airline business for over 50 years now.

So when you take a TWA charter flight, you'll be flying on an airline that helped make flying what it is today.

You'll get the same dependable crews that fly our scheduled flights.

The same good cooks cook the food. (Delicious!)

You'll enjoy beverages and perhaps take in a movie, for the usual standard charge.

And if you find it hard to believe you're on a charter flight, just pinch your wallet.

TWA facilities at your beck and call.

Your plane will arrive and depart at the same convenient terminals as all TWA flights.

And don't forget. TWA is the only U.S. scheduled airline with a major network of offices and airport facilities both here and abroad.

And they don't disappear if there's any hitch in your plans.

Great prices to great places.

All these prices save you money. But they contain certain restrictions such as length of stay, advance payments, where you stay (if hotel is included) and when you go. All prices are subject to change. Call your Travel Agent for all the details.

New York	As low as $169* Round-trip
Paris	As low as $399* Round-trip
London	As low as $399* Round-trip

How it works.

You can sign up for a TWA charter by yourself. With another person or with a group of friends. It's up to you.

On Trans World Charters, TWA provides the plane and crew to a Charter Organizer, who then takes care of all the details.

Even though TWA cannot make your reservations, because of government regulations, we'll be happy to give you charter information. So just call us. Or you can call your Travel Agent.

Reservations will be made through your Travel Agent or a Charter Organizer. (And they're the ones who can tell you about pricing and cut-off dates for booking.)

After that, just count your savings. And pack.

Trans World Charters. They're what charter flights should have been all along.

We give charters a good name.

TWA

*TGC airfares are based on full flight. If all seats not sold, price will increase 1% to 20% (New York $202.80; Paris $478.80; London $478.80). If price increases more than 20%, flight could be cancelled at least 45 days ahead and full refund made from Escrow account. Departure taxes to/from London and Paris not included.

BRITISH CANAL LOCKS PROVIDE BOATING DIVERSION

Tea at four is British, bargaining everywhere

London

Most expensive gift in London: A quartz Piaget watch at Asprey, 165 Bond St.

A Piaget is in the upper brackets anyway. This one is in white gold with 22,000 diamonds!

Costs Pounds 19,298! Pound is $1.83 U.S. today, so why not just multiply by two? If you've got that kind of money, you don't have to worry about the odd change.

The Tea Experience begins every afternoon at 4.

We are having tea at the Ritz with a tourist board friend: Peter ffrench-Hodges (Any printer who caps those "f's" or in any way changes that name, I'll have him flogged through the Fleet.)

TEA IS SERVED by gloved waiters handing silver pots on silver trays onto starched white linens. YOU don't pour. The WAITER doesn't pour. By tradition the lady pours: "Milk? One lump or two?"

The brown bread is so thin you can read a newspaper through it. The cucumbers are sliced by Wilkinson sword razors. There is no better watercress in the world than English river cress.

Keep your voice down. Don't talk politics. "One may complain about the scarcity of domestic help or the bad growing season for prize gooseberries."

So we pass the Tea Experience while the English rain blows down the streets of London.

"We want to learn all we can about the inland waterways of Europe and how to take a boat on them?"

Top man on this is Roger Pilkington and his book

stan delaplane

is "Waterways in Europe." I used his "Small Boat on the Thames" while running a rented 29-foot cruiser on that river.

Pilkington gives not so much boatsmanship as what's going on around you. (Not much to learn about a river boat anyway. You can't get lost unless you start making U-turns.

The book is $8.95 plus $1 postage from Traveler's Library, 20 N. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60606.

"Our guide couldn't tell us about the letters 'S P Q R' we saw on buildings in Rome. Even on manhole covers . . . "

"Senatus Populusque Romanum." It's also on the flag of the City of Rome. Dates back to the time when Rome ruled the world.

The democratic sentiment: "The Senate and the People are Rome." (Also old-time joke: "Sono porci questi Romani." "What pigs these Romans are." Maybe you should wait until you cross the Swiss border to use that one.)

"There's a town famous for hand-made knives in Mexico . . . "

Oaxaca. Etched on one side — usually with a hunting scene. Some sentimental saying on the other.

Mexican generals used to have their dress swords made in Oaxaca. Pancho Villa's sword was made there. Oaxaca knives are sold in market places all over the Republic.

"Books on travel constantly talk about 'bargaining.' The thing is they never say HOW to bargain . . . "

All travel writers tell you to bargain — I do it myself. And I have only a foggy notion how to go about it. My idea is whatever the man asks, offer half.

A lot of times I offer half and he TAKES it. Gratefully. So I know I've been had.

Department stores won't bargain. They're not set up for it. What does the sales girl care if you don't buy?

Small tourist shops overseas (yes, and in the U.S. too) have flexible prices. They've marked things up enough to come down and make you feel good.

EVERYTHING'S bargaining in the Far East. Except Japan, it's not their custom.

The Chinese and East Indian merchant doesn't DREAM of getting what he's asking. He may argue. Weep. Insist you are breaking his rice bowl. But he'd drop dead of astonishment if you paid the asking price.

All Italian shopkeepers react to the word "sconto" — discount. They argue that they NEVER discount. NEVER!

Stay with it. Keep looking coldly out the window and repeat: "Sconto!" You'll win.

Whaling museum

Hunting the great whale now lingers only as a memory in American history.

The lusty cry of "Thar she blows!" will be heard no more. The death-knell of the U.S. whaling industry was sounded by Congress early in 1971 when it outlawed the killing of the big mammals.

It marked the end of an industry centuries old. It also marked the beginning of an era of preserving the whale from extinction.

Western Airlines provides daily connecting service via Honolulu to the location where much of the memory of the once prosperous industry lingers, Whaler's Village on the Island of Maui, Hawaii.

Preserved here is the atmosphere of the days when whalers came ashore after chasing the huge beasts that swam past the islands. From 1820 to 1860, Kaanapali and nearby Lahaina were winter headquarters for the New England whaling fleets.

Last word: Elocutionist

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Favorites flunk Preakness test

BALTIMORE (AP)—Speedburners Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure put on their expected act Saturday, but when the curtain fell on the 101st Preakness the star was steady running Elocutionist.

"I was hoping we could beat them," jockey John Lively said.

He found himself in fifth place after the first three-quarters of a mile, which Bold Forbes, the Kentucky Derby winner, ran in a sizzling 1:09 with Honest Pleasure two lengths behind him.

Elocutionist turned the hope into reality with a drive down the center of the Pimlico stretch that carried him to a 3½-length victory over Play The Red and made ex-Chicago cop Eugene Cashman, Elocutionist's owner, a winner in his first try at this classic.

For Bold Forbes, jockey Angel Cordero's "Puerto Rican Rolls Royce," it was a gallant third-place effort that ended in injury.

"I don't know where it happened, but he has a real bad cut on his left hind foot," said trainer Laz Barrera. "I'm most concerned with that. Yes, I think that could have stopped him."

But Cordero said Bold Forbes had no excuses and added, "He stood up like a champion under pressure."

It was also a bitter disappointment for LeRoy Jolley, trainer of Bert Firestone's Derby runnerup Honest Pleasure, who finished fifth in the six-horse field.

"Absolutely no excuse," said Jolley. "That pace was too much for both of us, and the result for my horse was he just got tired and dirty."

Paul Adwell, trainer of Elocutionist, agreed that the sizzling pace which led to a final time of 1:55 for the 1 3/16 miles, was a big factor in his colt's victory.

"A carpenter with good tools can do a lot of good things," he said. "The pace was different today and it went in my horse's favor. I think they went three quarters in nine (1:09), and that's just what my horse likes. I guess we'll be going to New York now."

The third race of the Triple Crown is the Belmont Stakes June 5 at Belmont Park.

Elocutionist's victory made a coin flip that turned in the favor of Cashman look much better to the former policeman, who now is one of the world's leading commodity dealers in soy beans.

Cashman disclosed after the race that at a Fasig-Tipton summer yearling sale in Kentucky two years ago, he wanted to buy Elocutionist while Adwell wanted another yearling—which turned out to be Bold Forbes.

Cashman won the flip, but two weeks ago at Churchill Downs it looked like he might have been a long-range loser.

Elocutionist earned $129,700 from the purse of $182,200 and paid $22.20, $8.20 and $3.60 to his backers in a stunned crowd of 62,256.

Max Gluck's Play The Red, whom trainer Johnny Campo was reluctant to send to the Preakness after an eighth-place Derby finish, returned $20.20 and $6.

"We've always known this horse has ability," said Campo. "Today he finally showed it. He likes to be on the outside better than where he was. But the rider couldn't get him out."

Play The Red, ridden by Jean Cruguet, appeared to have stuck his head in front of the wavering Bold Forbes with an eighth of a mile to go and just before Elocutionist charged by on the outside.

Bold Forbes, owned by Esteban Rodriguez Tizol and coupled in the betting with Louis Wolfson's Life's Hope as a Barrera-trained entry, paid $2.80.

Life's Hope, never in contention, finished last. The other starter, Cojak, was fourth, a neck in front of Honest Pleasure.

Each of the six carried 126 pounds.

When the gate opened, Cordero gunned Bold Forbes out of it as though the race was indeed a sprint. Honest Pleasure, ridden by Braulio Baeza, went right after him and the crowd rose in anticipation of another duel like the one they fought in the Derby.

Bold Forbes whipped through the first quarter-mile in 22 3/5, the half in 45 and the three quarters in 1:09. Honest Pleasure was right behind him all the way, by two lengths at the three-quarter mark.

Then things began to happen. Elocutionist began to move on the turn and so did Play The Red. Play The Red gunned towards the wire along the rail while Elocutionist took the turn four horses wide and shot down the middle of the track as Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure fought to stave off defeat.

They couldn't, and the day belonged to the underdogs and to backers of underdogs. The exacta of Elocutionist and Play The Red returned $347.40.

USC runs to Pac-8 crown

Gilkes wins 100, 200, anchors relay win

BERKELEY (AP)—Three dazzling sprint performances by USC's James Gilkes led the Trojans to victory Saturday with the highest point total ever in the Pacific-8 Conference track and field championships.

Gilkes ran the anchor leg of a 39.9 400-meter relay, blowing by UCLA's Orlando Johnson with an incredible burst of speed. UCLA took second place in 40.0 and Washington was third in 40.4.

Later, Gilkes came from behind again to slip by teammate Joel Andrews and win the 100 meters with a time of 10.5. Andrews also clocked 10.5, as did third-place finisher Al Davis of Washington.

Finally, Gilkes, a senior, flashed by a strong field to win the 200 meters in 21.1.

USC also won the 400-meter dash with a 46.0 performance from Ken Randle. He was followed by Bennie Myles of UCLA at 46.2 and Bob Connors of Southern Cal, also in 46.2.

The University of Washington scored a surprising second in the championship, winning all four throwing events to upset UCLA, which was a close third.

The Trojans won their third consecutive championship and fourth in five years with 180 points, surpassing UCLA's record of 156 in 1973. Washington had 99 for second and UCLA 95 for third. Washington State got 88, followed by Oregon 77, California 53, Oregon State 38 and Stanford 21.

USC's domination of the second day also included Tom Andrews' 49.9 victory in the 400 hurdles, Tom Cochee's triple jump mark of 53-9 and a winning 3:08.6 for the mile relay. Andrews and Cochee were the defending champions in their events.

Washington's Borys Chambul won the discus with a toss of 196-4 to complete a sweep of the throwing events for the Huskies, who won the hammer, shotput and javelin Friday.

Robert Gaines gave Washington another first with a 13.9 time in the 110-meter hurdles.

The host Golden Bears had a winner in James Robinson, who retained his championship in the 800-meter run with 1:49.1.

JOHNNY RUTHERFORD
Congratulations from wife

Rutherford (188.957) has Indy pole—maybe

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Johnny Rutherford was disappointed, A.J. Foyt disgraced and Al Unser heartbroken after the first day of pole position qualifying Saturday for the 60th annual Indianapolis 500.

But with a few more drivers yet to make their initial attempts, Rutherford had staked a solid claim to the No. 1 starting position in the $1 million May 30 race with a speed of 188.957 mph.

If his speed holds—and it certainly could—it would be the second time the handsome, likable Texan has won the pole for the world's richest race.

Qualifying resumes today at noon. The drivers who still are guaranteed a shot at the pole include Johnny Parsons, Mike Mosley and Gary Bettenhausen.

Al Unser also has a backup car identical to the one he has already qualified in line and it is undecided whether he will try again with a different machine.

"Things got slicker and slicker each lap and I just tried to keep it steady and not lose control," Rutherford said of the run he felt was disappointing. "The important thing is where you finish, not where you start."

FOYT, THE pole winner the previous two years, wound up a poor fifth on the provisional grid. His speeds dropped from 187.344 mph on his first circuit to 182.927 on his fourth and final trip.

"It's a disgrace to me and my car," Foyt said emotionally. "The damn thing wasn't handling."

Foyt vowed things would be better on race day or "I'll park it."

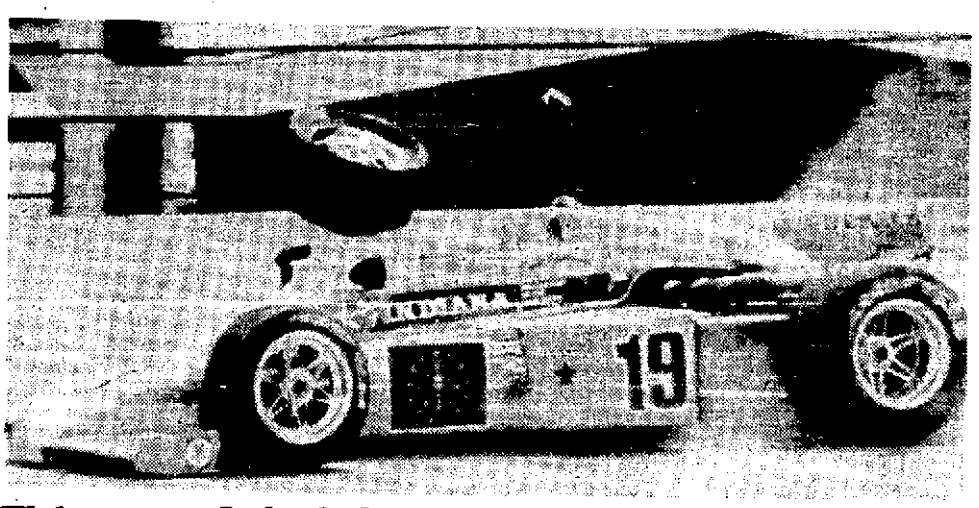

Al Unser, who was considered to have an excellent chance for the pole in the Parnelli-Cosworth, managed only 186.258 on his run.

"I'm heartbroken," he said. "I can only hope all the work we've put in on this project will be worth something on race day."

Only nine drivers took the checkered flag in the rain-shortened session.

Gordon Johncock, the soft-spoken 1973 Indy champion, occupied the front row center spot with former junior high school principal Tom Sneva securing the outside position.

Blyleven hopeful of trade

Fans 12 as Twins rock Angels twice

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Bert Blyleven would like to be attired in an Angel or Dodger uniform next season.

If Blyleven has his druthers — and it is entirely likely he will — he plans on leaving the employ of Calvin Griffith and the Minnesota Twins at the end of the season and gravitating to more lucrative climes.

A six-year veteran at the relatively-tender age of 25, Blyleven is one of 10 unsigned Twins who want to escape the parsimonious clutches of Griffith.

He said he will go where the dollars are but hopes they will come from West Coast financiers — namely Gene Autry or Walter O'Malley.

Blyleven gave the Angels pause to seriously consider a strong bid in the opener of a twi-night doubleheader at the Big A Saturday. He struck out 12 and spaced eight hits to win his third game of the season, benefitting from a 14-hit attack that brought the Twins a 5-2 victory.

Minnesota continued to maul Angel pitching in the nightcap, clubbing 17 more hits to bury the Angels, 15-5, completing a sweep.

Dan Ford, who had three hits in the opener, came back to drive in sx runs in the second game with his fifth homer, a double, single and sacrifice fly.

Pete Redfern, the former USC star who was making his major league debut, had a no-hitter working for five innings but was apparently affected by a long delay as the Twins scored seven runs in the sixth inning.

When he returned to the mound, he walked Ron Jackson, gave up Jerry Remy's spell-shattering single and saw Dave Chalk beat out a bunt to load the bases.

Then he saw Bobby Bonds unload a grand slam homer, about the only thing a Little League Night crowd of 31,534 had reason to cheer during the night.

Pirates drop lumber on Dodgers; Dodgers drop back to 2nd place

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

PITTSBURGH—The Lumber Company. That's the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Forget the stolen base and the sacrifice bunt. Let's play long ball. That's the credo of the Pirates. The only sign they ever flash from the third base coaching box is home run.

Somehow, in four previous tries against the Dodgers, the Lumber Company had been reduced to sawdust. Saturday, though, it was timber!

Pittsburgh got only seven hits in beating the Dodgers, 4-2, ending their latest win streak, a four-game run, and dropping them percentage points behind the Cincinnati Reds, who defeated the Mets, 2-0.

But two of the Pirates' hits were home runs and another was a double.

The loss was only the third in the last 19 games for the Dodgers, who have been on a home run tear themselves, belting 19 on the current trip.

But they failed to hit one Saturday. In fact, they didn't hit much of anything off George (Doc) Medich, the reknowned medical student, and they got even less off Bob Moose, a one-time ace of the staff who has taken to his new role of reliever with elan.

Dodger of the day

STEVE GARVEY doubled and singled in 4-2 loss to Pirates.

He entered Saturday's game in the ninth inning with the tying runs on base, only one out and Joe Ferguson and Steve Yeager scheduled to bat.

But Fergie popped up and Yeager hit a soft liner to end it and the Lumber Company nailed down its eighth win in its last 10 starts and first all season over the Dodgers.

"He's been doing that all year," said Danny Murtaugh, the No. 1 lumberjack, noting that Moose is yet to give up a run in eight appearances.

As for Medich, who lost to the Dodgers, 7-1, three weeks ago in Dodger Stadium, he said he learned something from that game.

"Any team that wins as many games as the Dodgers have been winning, you have to be careful," said Medich, the former New York Yankee who is a senior medical student at the University of Pittsburgh during the off-season.

"I learned a lot the last time I faced the Dodgers and I learned a few more things watching them Friday night."

Like throwing high fast balls to Bill Russell and Yeager for home runs, as the Bucs' John Candelaria did Friday night.

Russell had the Dodgers' only hit for six innings. It wasn't much, an infield single, but it extended his personal hitting streak to 13 games, longest on the club this season.

Russell was immediately wiped out in a double play as Medich faced only the minimum number of batters until Bill Buckner got a single in the seventh.

Wolfsberger gains U.S. Olympic team

Kathy Howard pulled all the tricks from her floor exercise bag Saturday night to take first place in the United States Olympic women's gymnastics trials and lead a team of six youngsters—including 17-year-old Leslie Wolfsberger of Westminster—pirouetting into Montreal.

The 18-year-old Miss Howard, of Oklahoma City, performed poorly in the first two events of the night, the side horse vault and the uneven parallel bars.

But her splendid, graceful 9.75 on the final event, the floor exercise, gave her a final total of 150.05 points for the four 40-point sessions and a narrow victory over Kolleen Casy of St. Paul, Minn.

The 16-year-old Miss Casey, a 90-pound honor student in high school, had earned 9.80 in the floor exercise to score 149.95 for what appeared to be an insurmountable lead in view of Miss Howard's broken right toe.

However, Miss Howard ignored the pain to win this meet in a wire-to-wire performance.

Kim Chace of Riviera Beach, Fla. showed the form that earned her a berth on the 1972 Olympic team in placing third with 149.90. The 20-year-old Miss Chace is the only 1972 member of the American Olympic team to make it back in 1976.

Fourth place in this meet went to powerful 16-year-old Debbie Wilcox of Englewood, Colo. with 149.70, followed by Carrie Englert, 18, of Eugene, Ore., 149.35.

Sixth and last place on the U.S. team was captured on the final event by Miss Wolfsberger, a newcomer and last-minute substitute on the U.S. qualification team three weeks ago.

The young lady from Orange County, the only Californian qualifying, scored 149.30.

The alternate on the team at 149.25 will be Jodi Yocum, 16, of Allentown, Pa.

Miss Howard, favoring the broken toe all three days of this competition structured like the Olympics, was the leader after the first compulsory round and continued to lead throughout even though she faltered early in Saturday's events.

Roxanne Pierce of Reading, Pa., who had fallen during Friday's floor exercise, suffered a sprained ankle in the vault Saturday night and withdrew from the competition.

Seventeen-year-old Denise Cheshire of Burbank, who won the national all-around championship just three weeks ago, dropped to 17th.

Final scores in the 1976 United States women's Olympic gymnastics trials at the Los Angeles Sports Arena:

1. Kathy Howard, Oklahoma City, Okla., 150.05 points; 2. Koleen Casey, St. Paul, Minn., 149.95; 3. Kim Chace, Riveria Beach, Fla., 149.90; 4. Debbie Willcox, Englewood, Colo., 149.70; 5. Carrie Englert, Eugene, Ore., 149.35; 6. Leslie Wolfsberger, Westminster, Calif., 149.30; 7. Jodi Yocum, Allentown, Pa., 149.25; 8. Tammy Manville, Scottsdale, Ariz., 149.00; 9. Diane Dunbar, Walnut Creek, Calif. 148.20; 10. Tie between Jeanne Beadle, Baton Rouge, La. and Janice Baker, Syracuse, N.Y., 147.60; 12. Kathy Johnson, Doraville, Ga., 147.50; 13, Ann Carr, Philadelphia, Pa., 147.45; 14. Susan Archer, Long Beach, Calif., 147.35; 15. Robin Heutner, Dickinson, N.D., 147.20; 16. Debbie Fike, Los Alamitos, Calif., 147.05; 17. Denise Cheshire, Burbank, Calif., 147.00; 18. Denise Walker, Lowell, Mass., 146.65; 19, Sharon Livieri, New Haven, Conn., 146.40; 20. 2 LBCC records in SoCal JC trials

Long Beach City College placed eight individuals and its mile relay team Saturday in qualifying for the Southern California junior college track finals at Mt. San Antonio College.

The contingent is the largest the Vikings have placed in the finals since 1967.

Dave Fuller (discus) and Larry Norwood (400 intermediate hurdles) set school records. Fuller's toss measured 169-11¼. Norwood clocked 53.5 in a second-place finish.

Gerald Peete won his 400-meter heat in 48.2—the best time of the day.

Barry Welsch finished fourth in the 1,500 with a 3:59.2, Ed Vallez qualified in the steeplechase with a 10th-place finish (10:16.4), Craig Wilson jumped 16-0 to qualify in the pole vault, Shaughn Ward (191-¼) was 11th in the javelin and Gerald Halcomb (49-7) was fifth in the triple jump.

The mile relay team of Larry Flewellan, Lynn Hawkins, Mike Griffith and Peete finished second at 3:16.2

The finals will also be at Mt. San Antonio next Saturday.

ANGELS SWEPT—

"I'm definitely going to play out my option...I've got to get out of Minnesota," Blyleven remarked between games. "All winter I asked to be traded but Mr. Griffith said he couldn't get anything for me, or enough to satisfy him. It was the same old stuff.

"I'd be kidding if I didn't say money wasn't the main issue," he went on. "Money and respect and I don't think he (Griffith) has respect for a lot of his players.

"I've had good years, won a lot of games, pitched a lot of innings and had good ERAs. I've been consistent but when I negotiate he knocks me and tells me I'm not a good pitcher. I'm tired of it. I think some other club would appreciate me more."

Blyleven specifically mentioned the Angels and the Dodgers as among the teams he would prefer to pitch for but he said he would likely accept the high bid.

"Security is my basic goal," Blyleven said. "You're only in this game so long and you have to make it while you can. I'd like to have some sort of pension plan set up."

Blyleven insisted his outlook had nothing to do with his teammates or the Twins' management.

"This is strictly a personal thing between myself and Mr. Griffith," he said. "It's something that has been building up for the past five years."

Blyleven grew up in Garden Grove and now resides in Irvine. Asked he'd like to pitch in Anaheim (where his record is 8-4) every four days he replied, simply, "Yeah."

He pitched like it in the first game with his 12-strikeout effort and the Twins supported him with some robust hitting against Gary Ross and Andy Hassler.

Rookie catcher Butch Wynegar, who was performing in the Class A League last summer, sealed Ross' fifth successive loss with a two-run third inning homer.

Ross did not have it on this night, surrendering four runs (three earned) and eight hits in two-plus innings. But Hassler, making his first appearance since May 2, threw encouragingly. He yielded one run and six hits in his seven innings of toil.

ANGEL ANGLES: The home stand and series concludes today with Jim Hughes (0-2) opposing Don Kirkwood (0-2) in the matinee...The Angels leave immediateiy after the game for Chicago, opening a two-game series there Monday night...At last count, there were still 10 Twins who had not signed contracts...Former Twin manager Frank Quilici is now Herb Carneal's partner in the Minnesota radio booth..."I don't seem to have as many gray hairs these days," Quilici smiled...Dave Chalk had fanned five times in a row before lashing a double to left in the fifth inning of the first game...He is still suffering from a sore left shoulder, a reminder of a recent collision with Oakland's Campy Campaneris...Andy Etchebarren had reached base nine successive times before flying out in the seventh inning of the opener...Etch had five consecutive hits in addition to walking twice, being hit by a pitch and reaching on an error.

The Lakewood Parks and Recreation Department emerged with six champions Saturday at the Southeast Municipal Athletic Association wrestling championships at Rio Hondo Park in Pico Rivera.

Lakewood's winners were: Chad Hatton (88 pounds), Craig Pettigrew (77), Herb Burns (66), Mark Lander (99), John Burns (110) and Danny Burns (132).

DODGERS

Steve Garvey also singled in the seventh but Ron Cey, the hottest of the hot Dodgers, popped up for the third out of the inning.

It wasn't until Ed Goodson hit a scoring fly ball in the eighth that the Dodgers were able to score.

In the ninth, after they got one run and had runners at first and against Dave Giusti, Moose took over and that was the end of the Dodgers.

Manny Sanguillen, who batted .488 last year against Dodger pitching and is 7-for-17 this year, doubled and scored on Bob Robertson's single in the first inning off Doug Rau, who lost for the second time in a row after winning 10 consecutive decisions.

Then came the home runs.

Bill Robinson, who is replacing the ailing Dave Parker, slugged his first of the year in the fourth—only his second RBI of the season—and then Al Oliver, the man the Dodgers had hoped to obtain in a trade last winter, unloaded a mammoth two-run shot in the fifth.

It was the fourth this season for Oliver and the 108th of his career, tying him with the legendary Paul Waner for eighth place on the Pirates' all-time home run list.

"Rau pitched all right," Dodger manager Walt Alston analyzed, "but I've seen him better. Anytime you hold these guys to six or seven hits you're done a good job."

Except when two of the six or seven hits are home runs.

DODGER DOPE: In a pregame meeting the Dodgers voted to honor a strike by NBC technicians and not appear in any interviews for the nationally televised game. "We didn't have any interviews anyway," said Tony Kubek, one of the announcers, and there was never any issue. . . . Tommy John, hit on the right ankle by a line drive Friday night, jogged five miles Saturday and reported he'll make his next scheduled start.

How they scored

PIRATES FIRST
With one out, Sanguillen doubled. Oliver grounded out, Robertson singled, scoring Sanguillen. Zisk fouled out. One run, two hits, one left.

PIRATES FOURTH
Robinson homered to center, his first. Hebner grounded out. Mendoza fouled out. Medich struck out. One run, one hit, none left.

PIRATES FIFTH
With one out, Sanguillen singled. Oliver homered to center, his fourth. Robertson and Zisk flied out. Two runs, two hits, none left.

DODGERS EIGHTH
Ferguson and Yeager walked. Russell forced Yeager, Goodson batted for Downing and hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Ferguson. Lopes grounded out. One run, no hits, one left.

DODGERS NINTH
Buckner singled. Giusti replaced Medich. Baker forced Buckner. Garvey doubled. Cey got an infield single, scoring Baker. Moose replaced Giusti. Ferguson popped out. Yeager lined out. Out run, three hits, two left.

Canadian girls swim standouts

SANTA CLARA (AP) — Canada's Cheryl Gibson, her country's top hope for an Olympic gold medal in swimming, won two events in meet-record time Saturday at the 10th Santa Clara Invitational.

The 16-year-old athlete from Edmondton, Alberta, captured the 200-meter backstroke in 2:19.25 and later won the 400 individual medley in 5:00.62. She won the same two events six weeks ago at the U.S. indoor nationals at Long Beach with slightly better times.

One of Miss Gibson's Canadian Dolphins teammates, 15-year-old Gail Amundrud, won the women's 200 freestyle in 2:06.05 to become a double winner. She won the 100 freestyle in Friday's opening session of the three-day meet at the Santa Clara Swim Club.

Canada's Olympic trials are in two weeks, while the American swimmers are four weeks away from their trials.

"I'm a little better rested than most of the swimmers here, but I'm not at a full taper yet," said Miss Amundrud, who is from Ottawa.

Foreigners won half of Saturday's individual events with Scottish teenager Jim Carter breaking former Olympic star Gary Hall's seven-year-old meet record in the men's 400 individual medley. Carter's time was 4:35.80, with Steve Furniss of the Long Beach Swim Club second at 4:36.29.

Furniss had broken Hall's record of 4:38.7 by three-tenths of a second in his morning qualifying heat.

The meet record in a fourth event, the men's 200 freestyle, was broken by Bruce Furniss, Steve's younger brother, who holds the world record. Bruce won in 1:53.06, breaking the meet record of 1:54.3 set by Mark Spitz in 1969.

Tim Shaw of Long Beach State was a disappointing seventh in the 200 freestyle in 1:56.76 and was also sixth in the 200 backstroke in 2:11.00.

Joe Bottom of USC and the Santa Clara Club won his second event of the meet, the 100 butterfly, in 56.66. He won the 100 freestyle Friday, but was unable to break meet records held by Mark Spitz in both events.

Casals spurs Strings win

Rosie Casals played on Los Angeles' winning women's doubles and mixed doubles teams, and Dianne Fromholtz won her singles match to rally the Strings to a 21-17 World Team Tennis victory over the San Diego Friars Saturday night at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Casals teammed with Ann Jones to score a 6-0 doubles victory over San Diego's Bettyann Stewart and Terry Holladay, then joined Vijay Amritraj to down the Friars mixed doubles team of Janet Young and Ross Case 6-3.

Fromholtz topped Stewart 6-2 to help the Strings even their mark at 4-4. The Friars are now 4-5.

UCLA rally tops USC for CIBA crown, 7-6

UCLA freshman Steve Splitt lashed a two-run single with two out in the ninth and Brian Viselli followed with another run-scoring single Saturday to give the Bruins a 7-6 victory over USC and the California Intercollegiate Baseball Association championship.

The UCLA triumph marked the end of USC's league domination spanning the last six years. The Bruins were the last team other than the Trojans to win a league title, in 1969.

Splitt, who had just three hits in 14 at-bats this season, delivered the bases-loaded single that tied the score off Trojan reliever and loser John Racanelli. Viselli then singled to left to score Bobby Dallas from third.

Ed Cowan went the distance for the Bruins, notching his 10th victory in 12 decisions, as UCLA finished with a 16-8 conference mark.

The Trojans ended with a 15-8-1 mark, having agreed earlier not to replay a 1-1 tie with California.

Catcher Dennis Delany hit a solo homer in the seventh inning for the Bruins, who had just four hits and three unearned runs entering the final frame.

Tim Tolman, Doug Stokke and Mark Carpenter had three hits apiece for the Trojans, who had beaten UCLA Thursday and Friday to delay the Bruins' claiming the league title.

The next stop for UCLA will be the Western Regionals—via a selection process that appears automatic.

No cliques, noncomformists

Rangers a big, happy family under Lucchesi

Frank Joseph Lucchesi (pronounced "Lou Casey"), 5-8 and 180 pounds, is a tough, 48-year-old Italian from San Francisco. He has taken the Texas Rangers from a 79-83 club that finished 19 games behind the Oakland A's in 1975 into first place in the American League West in the first five weeks of the '76 campaign.

He has been "through the grinder," playing and managing in such places as

"The key to the Texas Ranger turnabout is our manager. Frank Lucchesi has degrees of tolerance and kindness that I've never seen before. He cares about his players." — Jeff Burroughs.

Bisbee, Ventura, Twin Falls, Thomasville, Pine Bluff, High Point, Williamsport and Pocatello. He never played in the majors.

He started his player-manager career at the age of 23 in Medford, Ore. He is kind and understanding, but when his temper explodes, it's akin to watching Vesuvius erupt.

In Pine Bluff, Ark., in 1954, as player-manager of a club in the low, low minors, he nearly died when an errant fastball caught him on the side of the head and his life hung in the balance for several days.

WHAT MAGIC potion has Lucchesi brewed to make the Rangers break so fast from the gate and boast the best record in baseball?

"Every manager has a different philosophy," explained Frank, before an Angel game a few evenings ago. "Mine is to take the pressure off the kids and put it on me. I can take it.

"Also, and this may surprise you, I'm never concerned about the players who play every day. The starters don't need any special pat on the butt. I give special attention to the kids who aren't playing. I communicate with them more than I do with the regulars. The guys on the bench are the ones who need moral support.

"How do I communicate? For one thing, I pick up a kid's tab in a restaurant. I call over the waitress and tell her to give me the check. This makes the guy feel important.

"I don't do this every time I see a player eating, mind you, but I pick up a tab at what I think is an appropriate time."

"BASICALLY," Frank Joseph continued, "you start with players' attitudes. Don't get me wrong. You have to have talent, but you assume that everybody on a major league roster has talent to some degree. Then, you go from there.

"I was aware of this team's attitude long before spring training finally got started. These players worked together in Florida during the lockout and they picked up their own tabs in the process. I admired them for that.

"A guy here or there from other clubs was working out, too, but just about all the guys on this club were getting into shape together on their own. I was impressed the way they went about this without griping.

"Oh, I sneaked a couple dozen baseballs for them from the team's supply when the owner wasn't looking, but the players did the rest.

"There are no cliques on this club and everyone's working together. I sensed that from the start. There's a lot of togetherness and harmony on this club. There are no nonconformists."

FRANK WAS especially happy about the unexpected togetherness of his pitching staff. All four starters were spring training question marks.

Gaylord Perry was 37 and coming off a so-so 18-17 season, split between Cleveland and Texas. Jim Umbarger had a fair 8-7 rookie campaign. Bill Singer and Nelson Briles had come from the Angels and Royals, respectively, off bad seasons and with injury-prone tags.

"Frank Lucchesi is a different kind of manager. He has gone through the grinder and can be tough. He also is understanding, and makes a player, young or old, want to put out 110 per cent every minute." — Bill Singer.

The quartet looked like a collective prize from a crackerjack box, but each won three games in the first month of th season.

"The pitching really surprised me," said Lucchesi. "I figured the short training period would hurt us badly because of our pitchers' ages and their infirmities. I knew we could hit, so when the pitching came around right off the bat, I sensed we had something going.

"I even had a tentative trade set for Umbarger early in April. Thank God it didn't go through. Now the other club wants Jim, but there's no way it'll get him."

THINGS WEREN'T always so rosy for Lucchesi. His two and one-half year record at the Philadelphia helm (1970-72) was 166-233 and he was released in midseason.

FRANK LUCCHESI
A very happy fella

"When I managed the Phillies, they were in a rebuilding program," Frank explained. "We didn't have the talent that I have now with this Texas club. I found in Philly that I couldn't scoop water with a pitchfork.

"But this club's for real. I knew that when we beat Boston seven in a row and then Oakland three in a row.

"I'm a very happy fella. I said in the spring that this was going to be a happy year, so I'm not saying that I'm happy now just because we're in first place. The man upstairs has been good."

LIKE HIS manager, Burroughs felt from the outset that the Rangers would shake off their '75 lethargy and be wire-to-wire contenders this season.

"Frank made me a believer when he took over this club from Billy Martin last July," said Jeff, off to a fast start himself with an average around .280 and with a share of the American League home run leadership.

"We were 35-32 under Frank last season. We're good, but not great—yet. We're not lucky, either. We didn't beat the Red Sox and A's on luck."

"A big reason for the Rangers' fast start is the patience of Lucchesi. He's a tough Italian, but he's patient and the players appreciate that." — Jim Fregosi.

SINGER, baseball's bionic man, also is sold on the Rangers' togetherness, but in a slightly different manner.

"Before spring training opened, Brad Corbett (Ranger owner) gathered the players together for informal workouts. On the sly, of course. Then, Lucchesi slipped us a few baseballs and I realized immediately this whole club was harmonized.

"Corbett took us out to dinner and we drank together, owner and players.

"Corbett made me feel good, too, about the way I handled the player rep's job with the Angels. He also gave me a three-year contract before he ever saw me pitch.

"I attended a baseball banquet in January at Dallas. Toby Harrah, Lenny Randle and Mike Hargrove came up to me and told me how glad they were to have me with the team.

"I thank Harry Dalton for having sent me to Texas. It's been a lot of fun."

Frank Lucchesi is enjoying it, too.

Bukich, Dankworth keep coach guessin'

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

If UCLA's football team exposed itself to the degree its fans did Saturday afternoon, it would be treating severe sunburn today.

Playing under wraps before 5,000 sun-worshiping fans in Drake Stadium, the Bruins' Veer-T offense performed admirably. The Jeff Dankworth Golds and Steve Bukich Blues trampled the 60-yard turf for 479 yards total offense.

It is important to note those figures were accumulated without veteran running backs Wendell Tyler and Jim Brown plus seasoned linemen Mitch Kahn, Keith Eck, Greg Taylor, Rob Kezirian and Rick Walker. Also taking the afternoon off were such defensive stalwarts as Raymond Burks, Oscar Edwards, Tim Tennigkeit and Manu Tuiasosopo.

Even performing with and against second-team personnel, Dankworth and Bukich did little to help head coach Terry Donahue settle the quarterback question for next fall. Dankworth will likely get the nod on seasoning.

The senior-to-be from Reno led all ball carriers with 94 yards on 12 rushes, two of which went for touchdowns. He hit on three of seven passes, caught one from split end James Sarpy and performed about as well Saturday as John Sciarra did a year ago—and he went on to win all-America honors.

TERRY DONAHUE
In a quandary

He doesn't believe the position is his.

"We didn't decide anything today," Jeff said on the sidelines afterward. "I suppose there'll be some controversy in the fall because that's what the public likes. I like competition, too, but I'm only out there to get better every day. I never think about beating out Steve."

The Bruin offense was a carbon copy of what UCLA fans have viewed the last two seasons. Sure, there were a couple of halfback passes but those were purely for Arizona State and Arizona spies.

"We really didn't show anything," Dankworth continued. "We went with a very limited passing game and we'd be very pleased if Arizona State thought we couldn't throw."

Donahue indicated his primary concern regarding his quarterbacks is making the players aware of his philosophy.

"We can't have them choosing sides between Jeff and Steve. Right now they'll both be playing. Jeff's more polished because of his experience. If I had my druthers I'd go with one guy, but history shows you can do the job with both. Didn't USC win a national championship one year rotating Pete Beathard and Bill Nelsen?"

Bukich showed he could run, producing 54 yards, the same total as 6-3, 220-pound speedster Theotis Brown. Safety John Gibbs was a hitter and linebacker Jerry Robinson proved he'd made a quick transition from wide receiver by scoring on a 50-yard interception.

Junior college transfer Homer Butler may be the swift receiver UCLA needs to play opposite Wally Henry and Frank Corral has already supplanted graduated kickers Brett White and John Sullivan.

The Riverside City College product averaged 47 yards on six punts before having one blocked. Most of his extra points landed in the vicinity of Wilshire Blvd.

Clearly, all the talent wasn't lounging on the sidelines.

Bonds will never get used to losing

"A lot of people are happy when they perform well. My main concern is to win. I've never been on a losing ball club, and I don't want to be here." — Bobby Bonds.

The batter's name was Bonds—Elizabeth, the mother, not Bobby, the son—and she worked the pitcher to a 2-1 count before slapping a bloop single over second base.

Usually, these pre-game, first-ball ceremonies allow a couple of erratic efforts from a flannel-armed mayor before the hook comes out, but Mrs. Bonds hadn't driven all the way from Riverside to be denied her licks.

It's clear that Bobby Bonds' competitive instincts are hereditary, but he has seldom faced the prospect of being upstaged by his mom. What else could he do but clobber a three-run homer to launch the Angels' three-game sweep of Cleveland last weekend and set himself onto what is commonly known as a tear?

"It's gratifying that you're going good," says Bonds, noting that the Angels subsequently regressed to three successive losses, despite his exploits, "but it's not gratifying if your team is going bad. We're in this thing together—not as individuals.

"A lot of people are happy when they perform well. My main concern is to win. I've never been on a losing ball club, and I don't want to be here."

THE NUMBERS say that Bobby Lee Bonds, 30, is the best all-round player the Angels have ever had.

Twice in his seven seasons at San Francisco and again with the Yankees last year, he hit more than 30 home runs and stole at least 30 bases, a feat of versatility unmatched by anyone in baseball history. Nobody else did it more than once, except Willie Mays, who is somebody very special.

"I think every club needs a ballplayer that the other people will look up to," says Bonds, who came to worship Mays as a young member of the Giants.

BOBBY BONDS
Mays his hero

"Whether or not I'm that individual, I just want to do my part. It's going to take the whole 25 players."

The Yankees last season needed a leader, which Bonds tried to be.

"I played hurt . . . showed 'em that I'm willing to go out and do a lot of things, that winning means a lot to me, as opposed to some other guy who goes out and has a good night and doesn't give a crap what the team does."

So despite an injured knee, Bonds hit 32 homers, stole 30 bases and drove in 85 runs, while batting only three points below his career average of .273.

He doesn't mind playing hurt. It's worse not to play at all, as he discovered when he fractured a finger sliding into home plate against the Dodgers a week before the '76 opener.

"I don't think I've ever felt so bad in my life . . . don't think I ever hurt so much inside over anything. I've played hurt—pinch hit, pinch run or something—but this time I couldn't do anything.

"That part really got to me. The season's starting and the organization and my teammates are looking for me to play, and I'm on the bench with a cast on my hand."

APPARENTLY, Bonds is a fast healer, considering his performance of the past several days.

"The whole thing about having a good year is trying to keep your head on right," he says. "The least little problem around the home or any type of dissension can cause you to stop thinking about baseball.

"Anytime I have a particular problem I can get rid of it in a day. All I have to do is go fish. When I'm upset, uptight or just bugged, I head straight for the water.

"Sometimes I'll just go down and walk along the beach . . . walk out on the pier . . . just look at the water. Water is peaceful. Water doesn't fuss at you, doesn't do anything. There's always a nice breeze, and to me it's just beautiful. This is the way I find relaxation and peace."

It's been said that Anaheim Stadium is a peaceful place, even when the Angels are playing. Especially when the Angels are playing. This is a condition Bonds intends to change. He doesn't believe that losing comes with the franchise, nor does he indulge in silly superstitions when he is going well, such as wearing the same jock or socks as long as he is hot.

"I've never had a jock on," he confesses, "and I don't wear the same socks because they stink.

"If I have a superstition, it's only if I go oh-for-2 I won't use that bat a third time . . . like, it's not my fault I missed the ball, it's the bat's fault. Stupid, right?"

THERE ARE some things Bonds never changes, though—the crucifixion and Santa Barbara medals on the gold chain around his neck, as well as the puka shell necklace.

"My kids gave me that," he says. "I never take any of them off."

Bonds has three sons, ages 12, 10 and 6, "one wife," he adds, "and one dog."

Two trades in the last two years have created some upheaval in the family, which is only now becoming settled again.

"I guess my wife and I couldn't believe it because I did have a respectable season in New York last year," Bobby says. "My kids were very, very delighted because they were going to be close to their grandparents.

"Now I think coming back to California has relaxed me a lot. I was born and raised thirty-some miles from here (in Riverside), and people down here have seen me play since I was 10 or 11 years old. It's not like I have to go out and prove anything."

BONDS HAS been proving himself since he broke in under the wing of Mays, the heir apparent to Willie's role as the leader of the Giants.

"I wasn't a threat to Willie," Bobby says. "Willie and I were friends. We still are personal friends. I admire the man; I love the man.

"Willie helped me more than anybody that's put on a uniform in this game. He taught me things I probably wouldn't know right now if I hadn't been with him. I more or less try to play the game the way he used to play it. I run the bases like him. I've tried to pattern myself after him—not that I can be him, because there's only one Willie Mays.

"The whole world knows what a great player he was, but the world doesn't know Willie Mays the man. I know him both ways. He's helped me on and off the field.

"A lot of people didn't get to see Willie when he was doing a lot of things that I was able to see, playing with him and watching him day in and day out. Later, he wasn't performing like Willie the 25-year-old, but he was playing at an age when most people aren't even able to put on a uniform. I don't think he embarrassed himself.

"To say I felt sorry for Willie Mays after he hit six hundred and some home runs, three thousand and some base hits—you can't feel sorry for a man like that. A lot of players would take half of his records and have one helluva career."

The Angels would settle for that—or, better yet, Bobby Bonds.

Four-run 7th wins for Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Chambliss's two-run homer and Oscar Gamble's two-run pinch single accounted for four runs in the seventh inning Saturday and sparked the New York Yankees to a 7-3 victory over Baltimore that ended the Orioles' four-game winning streak.

Chambliss's blow kayoed Baltimore starter Mike Cuellar (1-3). The Yankees added two more runs when reliever Dyar Miller walked three men and Grant Jackson yielded Gamble's bases-loaded single.

After the Orioles took a 1-0 lead against starter Ed Figueroa (3-2) in the second inning, the Yankees tied it in the third on Fred Stanley's single, a wild pitch and Roy White's two-out single.

New York broke the tie with a run in the fifth on Thurman Munson's ont-out grounder after the Yankees loaded the bases on singles by Willie Randolph and White around a walk to Sandy Alomar. The relay to first beat Munson for what would have been an inning-ending double play but umpire Ron Luciano ruled that Tony Muser took his foot off the bag too soon.

Figueroa lasted until the seventh, when he needed help from Sparky Lyle, who notched his seventh save, matching his total for all last season.

Reds blank Mets; move back on top

CINCINNATI (AP) — Fireballing Santo Alcala, making only his second major league start, scattered four hits and struck out nine as Cincinnati whipped the New York Mets, 2-0, Saturday night.

The Reds, who had four stolen bases, including Danny Driessen's theft of home on a double steal, moved into first place in the National League West by percentage points over the Dodgers, which lost to Pittsburgh, 4-2.

Using mostly fastballs and locating them well, Alcala won his second game in as many starts and permitted only five men to reach base. He walked one.

Cincinnati pitchers have allowed only 15 earned runs in the last 82 innings and the staff has recorded five shutouts this year.

The Reds scored their two runs in the second after Driessen led off with a walk off Tom Seaver, 4-2. With one out, Driessen broke for second and Tony Perez singled, with Driessen continuing to third.

Then with two outs, Perez, who stole his first base of the season Friday night, broke for second. Catcher Jerry Grote threw to second but not in time to get Perez, and Driessen raced home. Dave Concepcion's triple knocked in the second Cincinnati run.

Brewers fall to Bosox, 9-4

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice and Carlton Fisk highlighted an eight-run seventh inning with long home runs and Boston won its fourth game in a row Saturday, a 9-4 decision over slumping Milwaukee.

Fisk started Boston's biggest inning since a nine-run explosion in Chicago on July 8, 1973, with a double high off the left field wall and capped it with his fifth homer, a two-run shot into the Milwaukee bullpen in right.

Rice, benched for weak hitting earlier this week, broke a 3-3 tie by drilling a three-run pinch homer into the left field screen off left-hander Ray Sadecki, the third of four Milwaukee pitchers in the inning.

Helped by the come-from-behind explosion, Ferguson Jenkins posted his second victory in seven decisions with an eight-hitter in handing the Brewers their seventh consecutive defeat.

Two-hitter by Detroit rookie

DETROIT (AP) — Rookie Mark Fidrych, making his first major league start, fired a no-hitter for six innings and wound up with a two-hitter Saturday as Detroit edged Cleveland, 2-1.

Cleveland's only baserunner off the 21-year old right-hander until the seventh inning was Alan Ashby, who walked with two out in the fifth after Fidrych had retired the first 14 batters.

Buddy Bell broke up the no-hit bid with a leadoff single in the seventh that bounced under the glove of third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez. Rick Manning followed with a single through the box and Rico Carty ruined the shutout bid with a grounder that scored Bell.

Detroit got its runs in the first and fourth innings on sacrifice flies off Pat Dobson (3-4). In the opening inning, Willie Horton's sacrifice fly followed singles by Ron LeFLore and Alex Johnson. LeFlore's hit extended his hitting streak to 18 games, longest by a Tiger since a 22-game string by Al Kaline in 1961.

Lonborg baffles Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Lonborg hurled 5⅔ innings of no-hit ball, finishing with a four-hitter, and Mike Schmidt hammered his 14th home run of the season Saturday night as Philadelphia edged Houston, 2-1.

Lonborg (5-0) lost his no-hitter when Wilbur Howard smashed a two-out double in the sixth. Howard then scored on Rob Andrews' single before Bob Watson grounded out to halt the rally.

The Phillies took advantage of an Astros error to score an unearned run in the second. Jay Johnstone was hit by a pitch, stole second and came home when losing pitcher Larry Dierker bobbled Bobby Tolan's grounder for an error, providing Philadelphia with a 1-0 lead.

Foli homers, Warthen 2-hits Braves for split

ATLANTA (AP)—Southpaw Dan Warthen fired a two-hitter and Tim Foli cracked a home run as the Montreal Expos battered the Atlanta Braves, 6-1, to split a twi-night doubleheader Saturday.

The Braves won the opener, 3-1, behind the pitching of Dick Ruthven and a two-run homer by Lee Lacy.

Foli's third homer of the year, a solo shot to left, broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning of the nightcap.

Atlanta had taken a 1-0 lead in the first when Lacy singled in Rowland Office, who had been hit by a pitch. Warthen (1-3) retired the next 14 Braves in order before Marty Perez collected the second hit, a single to center in the sixth.

Pepe Mangual tripled and scored on Jerry White's infield grounder when the Expos tied it in the third.

Montreal added two more in the fifth off Braves starter Phil Niekro (3-3). Mike Jorgensen singled in Mangual and later scored when catcher Vic Correll overthrew third for an error.

Jim Dwyer scored from first for Montreal in the sixth when Jim Wynn misjudged a liner to left, giving Pete Mackanin a run-scoring double.

Ruthven (4-4) ended a four-game losing streak while going the distance in the opener, stopping the Expos on seven hits.

He lost his shutout in the seventh when Pete Mackanin doubled to right and later scored on Pepe Mangual's pop fly single behind second.

Mayberry belt beats Sox in 12

KANSAS CITY (AP)—John Mayberry crashed his second home run of the season with two out in the 12th inning Friday night to give Kansas City its fifth consecutive victory, 2-1 over Chicago.

The first baseman connected off righthander Rich Gossage, who had gone all the way for the White Sox and allowed seven hits until the game-breaker.

The decision went to Mark Littell (2-0). Littell, who replaced lefthander Paul Splittorff at the beginning of the 11th inning, has allowed only one unearned run in 17⅔ innings of relief work. Littell struck out two and set down the White Sox in order in the 11th and 12th innings.

Gossage (1-3) struck out five and walked six in taking the stinging loss.

Ralph Garr singled home Chicago's run in the third. The Royals, who now have won 11 of their last 13 games, evened the score in the fifth on Tom Poquette's triple and Amos Otis' sacrifice fly.

Hrabosky's wild pitch wins for Giants, 2-0

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Relief ace Al Hrabosky wild-pitched two runs home in the top of the 11th inning, ending a scoreless tie and giving the San Francisco Giants a 2-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals behind the four-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell and Gary Lavelle Saturday night.

The Giants' triumph came after John Denny had pitched a six-hitter through the first nine innings for St. Louis in a duel with Caldwell and Lavelle.

Hrabosky spelled Denny in the 10th and struck out three Giants before Bobby Murcer singled with one out in the 11th.

Murcer advanced to third on Gary Matthews' double off Willie Crawford's glove at the wall. Both runners scored when Hrabosky (0-2) uncorked his wild pitch with Willie Montanez at bat.

St. Louis, in losing to the Giants for the first time in five games, was held hitless for six innings from the fourth while garnering only three singles and a double off the San Francisco pitcher.

Lavelle, making his 16th appearance of the season, surrended two of the hits after taking over for Caldwell in the Cards' half of the eighth.

The victory was only the fourth in 19 games for San Francisco.

Campy's error paves way for Texas, 6-4

OAKLAND (AP) — Shortstop Bert Campaneris's error on a controversial play in the 12th inning gave Texas two runs and a 6-4 victory over Oakland Saturday.

With one out and a runner on second base, Mike Hargrove hit a one-hop grounder to relief pitcher Jim Todd. Todd attempted to run down Lenny Randle between second and third but then changed his mind and threw to second attempting to get Hargrove.

Campaneris made a late tag of Hargrove and then threw to third trying to get Randle. The throw bounced off Sal Bando's glove and into the Oakland dugout. Two runs scored on the play.

The A's argued that Bando was interfered with as he attempted to field the throw. The A's played the game under protest.

Bellmar, Wallace lead huge L.B. golf field

BY DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

It was a familiar opening round Saturday in the 52nd Long Beach City Match Play Golf Championship at El Dorado.

The players who play or practice every day had no trouble outscoring the weekend golfers as a whopping field of 186 consumed 12 hours in their bids to eliminate two-thirds of the competition.

Husky Mike Bellmar, the SoCal Publinx champion, and Chuck Wallace, the No. 2 player at Long Beach State University, carded 2-under-par 70s to lead the way.

Jeff Newell and Greg Hetzer, who work at Skylinks and hit balls every day, posted 1-under 71s along with Rick Johnson, a former Wilson golfer who recently won a tournament at Spyglass Hill as a member of the USC team.

Jeff Fredensburg, the El Dorado club champion, was one of three at 72 and be is an every-day player as well. Also at 72 were Bill Workman and Vern Brickey, both in their 20s and players not so long ago.

Tony Campregher, the 1975 champion, did not have an official score because he is exempt into the tournament. He carded a 76 and said, "my game is coming around. I'll be ready by next week."

The low 63 scorers following today's second round will qualify for match play beginning next weekend. Campregher and Bellmar are the heavy favorites. The tournament continues through May 30.

Bellmar collected five birdies and three bogies. He slipped on the final hole while Wallace earned his 70 with a birdie on the par-3 18th. It was his fourth bird of the day.

Hetzer started fast, out in 34, but had only eight pars and a bogey on the easier incoming nine.

Trevino pads lead to three

FORT WORTH. (AP) — Don January glanced at the leader board showing Lee Trevino three strokes in front of the pack going into today's final round of the $200,000 Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament.

"It's his dice," January drawled in the Texas twang that dominates this event.

January was five shots back after three rounds.

Trevino, who shot a two-under-par 68 to take the commanding lead in the quest for his first title ever in Texas, generally agreed.

"I don't have it won by any means," he said. "But if I can shoot something around par tomorrow, maybe one under, they'll have trouble making it up."

Trevino, again exhibiting the flair and flamboyance that made him one of golf's most popular performers, completed his three rounds in 200 strokes, 10 under par.

An Act follows trend, upsets Crystal Water

Three-year-old bubbles were burst on both coasts Saturday.

A few hours after Bold Forbes was upset in the Preakness, California's top-ranked sophomore, Crystal Water, was a similar victim at Hollywood Park.

Responsible for the mild surprise locally was An Act, the Santa Anita Derby hero whose stock had dwindled sharply after his disappointing try back of Crystal Water in the Hollywood Derby.

However, An Act, who races for a syndicate that is headed by Al Yank, had his day Saturday. He outran Crystal Water through the stretch to win by a length and one-half in the $53,100 El Dorado Handicap, witnessed by 39,502 fans.

Crystal Water was the 4-5 favorite, with An Act a well-backed, 2-1 second choice. As such he paid $6.80. An Act's time for one mile on the dirt was an excellent 1:34 2/5, just one tick off the stakes record.

An Act's seven-man ownership combine voted after the Hollywood Derby to replace Laffit Pincay with Marco Castaneda for the El Dorado and the Colombian-born jockey handled him flawlessly to gain his first Hollypark stakes triumph.

"When I asked him to move, coming to the quarter pole, he gave me a good run," said Castaneda, who has been working and galloping An Act in the morning for the past two weeks. "No, I wasn't worried when Crystal Water came up on us, because I felt my horse had plenty left and he did."

Bill Shoemaker rode Crystal Water and he commented afterward that he liked his chances all the way. "We were laying perfect down the backside and I honestly thought I could take the leaders any time. He finished strongly, but so did the winner."

An Act was lapped on pace-setter Sure Fire through a 22⅘ first quarter, but Castaneda was able to rate him about a length off the lead on the backstretch.

An Act and Crystal Water, who had been racing third, moved together mid-way around the far turn, but the favorite was not gaining an inch on the winner through the final yards.

This was the fifth victory in seven career starts for An Act, a $100,000 yearling purchase. The $31,600 he earned Saturday increased his bankroll to $179,150.

Trainer Ron McAnally said afterward that he doubted An Act would be shipped east for the Belmont Stakes.

"He acted like he loves the turf when he worked on it last week and I would hope to run him next in the Will Rogers."

That $50,000 race will be on the grass Sunday, May 30.

The Hollypark greensward will be the scene of battle today, when 10 handicap stars clash in the $50,000 Lakeside Handicap.

Winds Of Thought and Pass The Glass, who finished heads apart in the recent $111,500 Cenury Handicap, head a potent Lakeside field that also includes Top Crowd, Zanthe, El Tarta, Riot In Paris, Antique and Victorian Prince, all stakes winners on the turf during their careers.

Winds Of Thought and Antique will race coupled as the Ross Gilbert-owned entry, while Mrs. Marjorie L. Everett's El Tarta and Mary J. Bradley and Charlie Whittingham's Riot In Paris will race as the Whittingham-trained entry.

With 11 starters, the race will carry a net purse to the winner of $34,600.

Winds Of Thought was the longest priced horse on the board in the Century, but came flying in the stretch to out-photo Pass The Glass. The son of Hail To Reason previously had taken a classified race over the Lakeside turf course and has more than justified the $115,000 that trainer Evan Jackson advised owner Ross Gilbert to spend for the horse last fall at the Rokeby Stable dispersal sale.

Antique, a gelding which Gilbert purchased privately from Daniel Schwartz last summer, subsequently won the Cortez Handicap over the local lawn and has ranked as one of California's better turf runners since.

Most recently, Antique finished strongly to be second behind King Pellinore in a division of the Inglewood Handicap.

Pass The Glass also was a Rokeby castoff, although trainer Tom Pratt didn't have to go six figures to obtain the son of Buckpasser last year.

Pass The Glass was voted Hollypark's grass horse of the meeting last year while racing in Sarkowsky's orange and black silks. This year, the five year old horse won the Golden Gate Handicap in course record time before his narrow defeat in the Century.

Cerritos blanks Titans

Freshman rightfielder Jim Wilson went 3-for-3 and knocked in a run while Dave Patterson and Tim Olivarez collaborated on a four-hitter as Cerritos College defeated Fullerton State, 2-0, Saturday afternoon in a benefit game at Cerritos.

The Falcons, three-time defending state junior college champions, stifled a Fullerton State lineup that included seven former Cerritos College players. The Titans won the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title for the past two seasons and is the defending NCAA District 8 champ.

Wilson's first-inning RBI single provided Cerritos with a 1-0 lead. The Falcons gained an insurance run in the eighth when Art Harold led off with a triple and came home on a fielder's choice.

Patterson fired two-hit ball for five innings to improve his record to 14-1. Olivarez permitted only two hits in four innings of relief.

All-America Dan Boone absorbed the loss but was the day's biggest winner in that the game's proceeds went to his family, whose home was recently destroyed by fire. Boone, reliever Butch Black and catcher Andy Pasillas are all former Cerritos players.

Cerritos is now 32-4, Fullerton is 44-13.

Race roundup

BELMONT PARK — Lord Rebeau, the 5-2 second choice, took the lead at the head of the stretch and drew out to an impressive 6¼-length victory in the $57,550 Roseben Handicap. The time of 1:21 for the seven furlongs broke a stakes record that had stood for 14 years. Rose Net set the previous mark of 1:21⅖ in 1962. Honorable Miss, the 9-5 favorite and 121-pound highweight, came from last place at the head of the stretch to finish second by three-quarters of a length over Amerrico.

HAWTHORNE — Honey Mark, undefeated this year, scored his fifth victory with a galloping, nine-length decision in the $56,000 Chicago Handicap. Illiopolis finished second, Marauding third in the field of five. Honey Mark paid $2.80 for his easy win.

CALDER — Favored Controller Ike drove between horses in the final 40 yards to score in the $31,250 Julian Cole Memorial Handicap as Calder opened its summer season. One Moment closed fast to finish second, catching El Rosillo in the final stride.

GARDEN STATE — Majestic Light, ridden by Carlos Barrerra, came between horse throught the stretch and held off Chati to capture the $27,050 Cavalcade Handicap. Majestic Light raced the 1 1/16 miles on the grass in 1:43⅕ and paid $15.60 to his backers in the crowd of 20,292. Fabled Monarch finished third.

AK-SAR-BEN — Favored Real Value won the $36,425 Ak-Sar-Ben Handicap by a length over Roman Zipper before a crowd of 26,412. Chance Landing was third. Real Value paid $5.60 for the win.

PREAKNESS—

It was also the biggest money victory in Lively's riding career. The 34-year-old graduate of Oklahoma quarterhorse tracks once had won a $110,000, 5½-furlong thoroughbred stakes at Sunland Park in New Mexico. The name of that horse was Admiral's Blade.

But he'll be longer remembered for Elocutionist.

ELOCUTIONIST, rated in good striking position, eased out between rivals leaving the backstretch, circled horses four-wide entering the stretch and wrested command near the furlong marker. He was brushed by BOLD FORBES a few strides later but gamely drew away under strong left-handed whipping. PLAY THE RED, unhurried while saving ground early, drifted out brushing with HONEST PLEASURE when rallying inside horses in early stretch and continued with good courage. BOLD FORBES quickly took command away from the gate, drifted out slightly entering the first turn and drew clear while racing a few feet out from the rail entering the backstretch. He swerved out in early stretch, came out under left-handed whipping brushing ELOCUTIONIST just inside the furlong marker and gradually weakened. BOLD FORBES returned with a cut on his left rear coronet band. COJAK, away in good order, was rated along the rail, eased out leaving the backstretch, gave way slightly behind a wall of horses entering the stretch but continued willingly outside rivals. HONEST PLEASURE, hand-urged shortly after the start, was taken under light restraint when moving abreast of BOLD FORBES reaching the wire the first time. He was carried out slightly into the first turn, urged in pursuit of the pacesetter as that one drew clear, and brushed with PLAY THE RED when drifting in slightly when weakening in early stretch. LIFE'S HOPE made a mild bid outside rivals leaving the backstretch and weakened.

VIGORS was off slowly and raced unhurried along the outside, advanced through traffic into the final turn to reach contention, swung to the outside to challenge for the lead, took command and drew away in full stride. KENTITO saved ground early to prompt the pace, was sent up between horses on the backstretch to challenge for the lead nearing the final turn, held a slim edge in the drive but could not contend with the winner. SKY CHARGER set the pace from along the rail, weakened slightly in the drive and finished on even terms with PETER VADNAIS. The latter forced the pace early from between horses, dropped to the rail to save ground to the stretch and lacked renewed energy.

AN ACT broke cleanly and raced up under his own courage to press SURE FIRE into the first turn, continued to apply pressure under a snug hold to the final turn, was permitted to drift out nearing the stretch while taking command then responded to urging in the lane to impressively hold CRYSTAL WATER. The latter moved up along the outside to stalk the leaders under restraint, offered his best bid on the final turn, was fanned out a bit into the stretch but could make no impact on the winner. SURE FIRE set the pace to the stretch then lacked the needed response. REDLANDER failed to enter contention. AMANO moved up inside on the backstretch but had nothing left when the test came.

Scratched — Double Dealer, Qualification.

PERSONALITY KNIGHT dropped inside early to race patiently to the final turn, maneuvered to the outside to launch his bid into the stretch, took command late and held in full stride. TREVI was always a forward factor, moved up to challenge on the final turn, forged to the front into the stretch, ducked out just past midstretch and held for the place. After an objection from the rider of AMERICAN SCOUT, the stewards reviewed the films and disqualified TREVI III for interference in the stretch and placed him sixth. ROYAL RETLA lacked speed to the final turn, caught his stride from the outside and finished willingly.

Scratched—Noble Lark.

TREVI III DISQUALIFIED AND PLACED 6TH.

RUTHERFORD HAS LEAD FOR POLE—

Most drivers expressed dissatisfaction with their attempts.

Larry (Boom Boom) Cannon, a licensed barber and the recorder of deeds in Vermilli on County, Ill., made the day's first qualifying run at 181.398.

Cannon was followed on the track by defending champion Bobby Unser, who pulled off with mechanical troubles after one lap at 187.032, as time trials began about 3½ hours behind schedule.

Cannon, who qualified last in the 33-car field in 1974 in his only other Indy 500 appearance, got the honor of being the first qualifier when the man who had drawn the No. 1 position, Dick Simon, elected to try later.

A stiff breeze and new power restrictions enacted this year were credited with holding speeds generally below last year when it took at least 181.754 to get into the lineup.

Continual rains Friday night and Saturday morning left the track soaked until almost noon, when an armada of emergency vehicles and a jet-powered blower succeeded in drying out the surface of the famed 2½-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway oval.

As the weather cleared, a crowd estimated at well over 100,000 poured onto the speedway grounds to watch the race for the coveted No. 1 starting position and the $10,000 prize and public adulation that go with it.

A 30-minute practice session prior to time trials ended abruptly when rookie Spike Gehlhausen, the top rookie in Indy style racing last year, smacked the outside wall in the south short chute and extensively damaged his McLaren. Gehlhausen, at 21 the youngest driver entered, was uninjured.

The one- and four-lap records are held by Rutherford, clocked at 199.071 for 2½ miles and 198.413 over 10 miles in winning the pole position in 1973.

Foyt won the pole in 1974 and 1975 with speeds of 191.632 and 193.976, reflecting a series of rules changes since 1973 that have been designed to hold speeds down at the 67-year-old track.

The pole position has traditionally not been a good place to win the race from. Only eight pole starters have gone on to victory, the last being Al Unser in 1970.

Economy doesn't come cheap.

Many Peugeot parts are forged instead of stamped, and that's not cheap.

Peugeot's patented shock absorbers are built to last at least 60,000 miles, and that's not cheap.

And some 46,000 points on every single Peugeot are subject to rigorous quality control before it leaves the factory. That's not cheap, either.

In short, Peugeot is an economical car specifically because it's not a cheap one. Because with a better car in the beginning, you save in the end.

USC WINS PAC-8—

Cal's Ed Miller, who led the decathlon after nine events, was badly beaten in the 1,500-meter run by UCLA's Steve Alexander. Alexander won the grueling 10-event, two-day contest with a total of 7,386 points to Miller's 7,369.

Kenyan John Ngeno won his fifth Pac-8 championship for Washington State in the 5,000 meters at 13:51.2.

Jason Meisler of UCLA high jumped 7-1 to take that event. His mark was only a half-inch under the Pac-8 record. Lee Braach, Washington State, also jumped 7-1 for second place.

Wolfsberger 'relaxes' at Olympic Trials

Frantic, hectic life of a gymnast

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

For Leslie Wolfsberger, who trains with Scats in Westminster, this weekend's Olympic gymnastic finals at the L.A. Sports Arena must have seemed almost relaxing compared with her experience at the International Gymnastic Meet in Hamburg, Germany.

The 17-year-old Torrance High School junior, who is a member of the 1976 U. S. National Team, received a phone call only hours before competition and told to catch the first plane for Europe.

It seems that Kathy Howard of Oklahoma had scratched from the meet with a broken toe. This left the first alternate to take Kathy's place and Leslie to move into the alternate position.

Upon arrival in Germany, Leslie learned that alternates would not be allowed on the competition floor after a brief warm-up. So she settled down to watch and wait.

Then minutes prior to the competition, Debbie Wilcox, a youngster from Colorado who is the only girl in the world to attempt a front sommersault on the balance beam, injured her ankle during the final warm-up period and was forced to withdraw.

With 30 seconds to spare and no warm-up at all, Leslie found herself running to join the USA contingent as they marched into the arena to compete.

For Leslie it was a real challenge. Her performance was needed to give the team a finish strong enough to qualify the U.S. for Olympic competition this summer in Montreal.

Leslie came through with a remarkable set of scores to place 11th all around among the 75 women from England, West Germany, Poland, Bulgaria, Italy, Australia, the Netherlands and Cuba. The U.S. took first in the meet.

Some younger Scats members added to their laurels a week ago at the Junior National Gymnastics Championship, sponsored by the U.S. Gymnastic Federation, in Eugene, Ore.

The six-girl team, ranging in age from 12 to 14, took first with 216.425, edging the Diablos of Walnut Creek, which had a 216 score.

Members competing were Andra Turner, who finished seventh; Colleen Michaels, 10th; Donna Kemp, 11th; Lori Wright, 12th; Sheri Donaldson, 13th, and Ann McCabe, who fell from the beam and finished out of the top 13.

LONG BEACH City College swimmers didn't finish in the top three in any event, but they bettered times in every race they entered during SCCCIAC finals at East Los Angeles College.

Mary Hammond led the way, finishing fourth in the 50 butterfly with a time of 28.84. Then against 108 entrants in the 50 freestyle, Mary with finished fifth in 26.13. In her other two events, the 100 individual medley and the 100 butterfly, the LBCC swimmer clocked 1:06.58 and 1:08.3.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Janis Cook, who qualified in three events, was 14th in the 200 individual medley with 2:40.34, ninth in the 100 breastroke at 1:18.06 and eleventh in the 50 breaststroke with 35.83.

Janet Balter, Mary, Janis and Becky Thomas swam the medley relay in 2:07.8 to finish 11th, and then returned for the freestyle relay (with Susie Neumann in the lineup instead of Becky) to capture 12th with a 1:52.98.

IT WAS a hard 5-2 loss for Sally Mosser's LBCC tennis team during playoffs for the league championship against Golden West College.

The two teams had earned victories against each other during the regular season. LBCC wins were recorded by Chris Schrubbe and the doubles team of Jani Kuhn and Betsy Hose, who had an in-progress game forfeited by Golden West after that school was assured of the title.

Previously undefeated Marilyn Pruett lost her first match of the season, 6-4, 6-0, 6-0.

If you are not afraid to read it. Do you take "Salesmen Wanted Ads" with a grain of salt? Can't say I blame you. I followed up a few myself in the past.
I'm looking for sales people who are interested in a high income with advance commissions.
If your qualifications match our requirements this could be the sales position you are looking for.

RANCHO LOS CERRITOS
BOARD OF REALTORS
Realtor of the week

MEDFORD "MED" W. COGBURN

Moving to California in 1948 with his wife, Carrie Jo, Mr. Medford "Med" W. Cogburn soon became known as a respected realtor and citizen interested in the progress and development of our Southern California communities.

Pioneering from one of the first Real Estate offices in this area, Mr. Cogburn now owns and operates his own modern "complete service" real estate business centrally located at 10001 E. Artesia, Bellflower, staffed with 16 experienced personnel. Proudly serving the community for 28 years, his business offers complete well-established and reputable services including insurance, income tax guidance and assistances. Many years have seen the consumation of thousands of sales and investments varying from acreage and subdivisions to income property and residential homes.

Years of conscientious civic dedication display Mr. Cogburn's outstanding service record; President of the Bellflower District Board of Realtors in 1953 & 1962 (member since 1948); President of Chamber of Commerce in 1956 (member since 1950); President of Community Chest in 1955; President of Bellflower Kiwanis in 1959 (member since 1955, boasting a perfect attendance record for 20 years); member of Bellflower Junior Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors and Chairman of the first Home Decoration contest, still in existence today; an organizer of Bellflower YMCA; charter member of Bellflower BPOE club lodge No. 2003; and recently active in organizing the Bellflower Savings & Loan in Organization.

One of our leading Southern California Realtors, Mr. Cogburn was voted Realtor of the Year in 1956, and in 1975 was presented the first Lifetime Membership Award for his many years of hard work for his community from the Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors.

"Med" and his lovely wife, Carrie Jo, are orginally from North California and have made Bellflower their "hometown." With his loyal support, Mr. Cogburn has devoted his interests and many talents to preserving community life and striving to better the communities of Southern California, through his real estate integrity and civic pride.

21 Olympic Games Insignias

$1.00 each with one wrapper from any package of Wrigley's Gum.

Special offer from Wrigley's Gum

Now you can get any or all of the 21 Olympic Games Insignias minted in deep, sharp relief on 1¼" diameter solid bronze by the Hamilton mint. Order the Insignia of your favorite sport in either of 2 styles: Key ring or Pendant style with 24" neck chain. Order yours soon—while supplies last.

How to order:
1. Indicate each Insignia ordered by circling with pen or pencil the "K" or "P" below the desired Insignia shown at left. Circle "K" if you want Key Ring style. Circle "P" if you want Pendant style.
2. For each Insignia you want, send one wrapper from any package of Wrigley's Gum and $1.00. Print your name and address below and mail to:

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

It's Emmy time again—who'll be the winners?

And, now, it's Emmy time.

Oscar and Tony and numerous others have had their evening in the spotlight, and now it's time for the major television awards program of the season.

The 28th annual Emmy Awards ceremonies will be televised live from the Shubert Theatre at the ABC Entertainment Center in Los Angeles at 6 p.m. Monday on Channel 7 and the ABC network.

Mary Tyler Moore and John Denver will host the program, and a number of celebrities will participate as performers or as presenters of awards.

ABC's "Rich Man, Poor Man," which is in the "limited series" category, dominated the Emmy nominations with 23, including a record 13 for acting.

ABC's "Eleanor and Franklin," in the "outstanding special — drama or comedy" category, was second in nominations with 16.

CBS' "M-A-S-H" with 11 nominations and CBS' "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" with 10 were the leaders among the weekly series in nominations.

Edward Asner was nominated both as outstanding supporting actor in a comedy series ("Mary Tyler Moore Show") and as outstanding lead actor for a single appearance in a drama or comedy series ("Rich Man, Poor Man").

Here are the major categories and nominees:

Comedy Series: "All in the Family," "Mary Tyler Moore Show," "M-A-S-H," "Barney Miller," "Welcome Back, Kotter."

Drama Series: "Baretta," "Columbo," "Police Story," "The Streets of San Francisco."

Variety Series: "The Carol Burnett Show," "NBC's Saturday Night."

Limited Series: "The Adams Chronicles," "Jennie: Lady Randolph Churchill," "The Law," "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Upstairs, Downstairs."

Drama or Comedy Special: "Babe," "Eleanor and Franklin," "Fear on Trial," "The Lindbergh Kidnapping Case," "A Moon for the Misbegotten."

Variety Special: "John Denver's Rocky Mountain Christmas," Shirley MacLaine's "Gypsy in My Soul," "The Monty Python Show," "Steve and Eydie: Our Love Is Here to Stay," "Lily Tomlin."

Actor (Comedy Series): Jack Albertson in "Chico and the Man," Alan Alda in "M-A-S-H," Hal Linden in "Barney Miller," Henry Winkler in "Happy Days."

Actress (Comedy Series): Beatrice Arthur in "Maude," Lee Grant in "Fay," Valerie Harper in "Rhoda," Cloris Leachman in "Phyllis," Mary Tyler Moore in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Actor (Dramatic Series): Peter Falk in "Columbo," James Garner in "The Rockford Files," Karl Malden in "The Streets of San Francisco."

Actress (Dramatic Series): Angie Dickinson in "Police Woman," Michael Learned in "The Waltons," Anne Meara in "Kate McShane," Brenda Vacarro in "Sara."

Actor (Limited Series): George Grizzard in "The Adams Chronicles," Hal Holbrook in "Sandburg's Lincoln," Nick Nolte in "Rich Man, Poor Man," Peter Strauss in "Rich Man, Poor Man."

Actress (Limited Series): Susan Blakely in "Rich Man, Poor Man," Rosemary Harris in "Notorious Woman," Jean Marsh in "Upstairs, Downstairs," Lee Remick in "Jennie: Lady Randolph Churchill."

Actor (Drama or Comedy Special): William Devane in "Fear on Trial," Edward Herrmann in "Eleanor and Franklin," Anthony Hopkins in "The Lindbergh Kidnapping Case," Jack Lemmon in "The Entertainer," Jason Robards in "A Moon for the Misbegotten."

Actress (Drama or Comedy Special): Jane Alexander in "Eleanor and Franklin," Susan Clark in "Babe," Colleen Dewhurst in "A Moon for the Misbegotten," Sada Thompson in "The Entertainer."

Actor (Single Appearance in a Series): Edward Asner in "Rich Man, Poor Man," Bill Bixby in "Streets of San Francisco," Tony Musante in "Medical Story," Robert Reed in "Rich Man, Poor Man."

Actress (Single Appearance in a Series): Helen Hayes in "Hawaii Five-O," Sheree North in "Marcus Welby, M.D.," Pamela Payton-Wright in "The Adams Chronicles," Martha Raye in "McMillan and Wife," Kathryn Walker in "The Adams Chronicles."

Supporting Actor (Comedy Series): Edward Asner in "Mary Tyler Moore Show," Gary Burghoff in "M-A-S-H," Ted Knight in "Mary Tyler Moore Show," Harry Morgan in "M-A-S-H," Abe Vigoda in "Barney Miller."

Supporting Actress (Comedy Series): Georgia Engel in "Mary Tyler Moore Show," Julie Kavner in "Rhoda," Loretta Swit in "M-A-S-H," Nancy Walker in "Rhoda," Betty White in "Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Supporting Actor (Drama Series): Michael Douglas in "Streets of San Francisco," Will Geer in "The Waltons," Ray Milland in "Rich Man, Poor Man," Robert Reed in "Rich Man, Poor Man," Anthony Zerbe in "Harry O."

Supporting Actress (Drama Series): Angela Baddeley in "Upstairs, Downstairs," Ellen Corby in "The Waltons," Susan Howard in "Petrocelli," Dorothy McGuire in "Rich Man, Poor Man," Sada Thompson in "Sandburg's Lincoln."

Supporting Actor (Comedy or Drama Special): Ray Bolger in "The Entertainer," Art Carney in "Katherine," Ed Flanders in "A Moon for the Misbegotten."

Supporting Actress (Comedy or Drama Special): Rosemary Murphy in "Eleanor and Franklin," Lilia Skala in "Eleanor and Franklin," Lois Nettleton in "Fear on Trial," Irene Tedrow in "Eleanor and Franklin."

Dozen youngsters new Mousketeers

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"Mickey Mouse ... Mickey Mouse ... Forever let us hold his banner high ..."

Soon a new chorus of young voices will be singing the anthem that is remembered fondly by the generation that grew up in the 1950s. The Mickey Mouse Club, which staged a comeback with reruns across the country last year, has a brand-new set of Mouseketeers.

The new dozen differs from the original Mouseketeers in two ways. There is more of a geographical mix; new members come from St. Louis, Fort Worth, Miami and Vancouver, B.C., as well as the Los Angeles area. There is racial balance; two are blacks, one is Mexican-American, one is Chinese-Canadian.

Ages range from 7 to 13 with most of them in latter range. They are an engaging bunch, bright and alive without precocity.

"We want to avoid the slick pro, and that's why we looked beyond Hollywood," said coproducer Mike Wuergler.

"We advertised for applicants in Seattle, Atlanta, Boston, Cincinnati and Denver and held auditions in those cities. We also interviewed and auditioned in New York and Chicago, at Disneyland and Walt Disney World, and in Dallas and Phoenix."

Out of the hundreds of hopefuls came the final 12:

— William (Pop) Attmore II, 11, Mission Hills, Calif. Sang and danced in Las Vegas at 4, appeared in commercials, variety shows with Cher and Ken Berry, "The Brady Bunch," new Disney film "Treasure of Matecumbe," nicknamed because he loves soda pop.

THE ORIGINAL MOUSEKETEERS

— Scott Craig, 12, Lakewood, Calif. Has performed on variety show for clubs and hospitals, appeared on commercials, TV specials with Lily Tomlin and Dick Cavett.

— Benita Di Giampaola (Nita Dee), 9, Lakewood, Calif. Has done jazz, ballet and tap in school talent shows and performances at Tehachapi prison and Los Angeles County Fair.

— Mindy Feldman, 7, Chatsworth, Calif. The youngest Mouseketeer, she has been in TV commercials.

— Angel Florez, 12, Hawaiian Gardens, Calif. His only professional experience: a soft-drink commercial and "Tony and Pony" kids' show.

— Allison Fonte, 12, Buena Park, Calif. Started in commercials and "Juvenile Jury," has appeared in light operas, writes own music.

— Shawnte Northcutte, 12, Los Angeles. Dances, sings, plays piano, has been in 10 commercials, "Bionic Woman," "Marcus Welby, M.D."

— Kelly Parsons, 12, Miami, Fla. Has modeled in clothing ads and commercials, has performed in ceremonies at the Orange Bowl.

— Julie Piekarski, 12, St. Louis, Mo. Appeared in telethons and children's shows, performed with Municipal Opera in "Wizard of Oz" and "Snow White."

— Todd Turguand, 11, Los Angeles. Plays stepson on "Rhoda," has appeared with Carol Burnett, in commercials and stage plays.

— Lisa Whelchel, 12, Fort Worth, Tex. A ventriloquist, plays classical guitar, appeared on radio and TV commercials, in Dallas-Fort Worth musicals with Van Johnson, Yvonne DeCarlo.

— Curtis Wong, 13, Vancouver, B.C. Has appeared in TV commercials.

ALL WILL report to the Disney studio in Burbank on May 24 for the start of rehearsals. Production on the first 85 of 150 scheduled shows will begin June 21 and end late in September.

"The new series will go on the air in January," said Wuergler.

Bicentennial concert to be offered by PBS

By GEORGE MAKSIAN
New York News

NEW YORK — A concert of American music, featuring Andre Kostelanetz and the National Symphony Orchestra with violinist Yehudi Menuhin, will be televised live from Wolf Trap in Vienna, Va., by the Public Broadcasting Service Saturday, July 3.

The concert, part of the nation's Bicentennial celebration, will include Bruch's Violin Concerto No. 1 in G Minor, a medley of tunes from "Show Boat," and the premiere of a new work by composer Alan Hovhaness, commissioned by Menuhin for the broadcast.

In addition, there will be fireworks and an all-American countdown to midnight by Astronaut Neil Armstrong.

The program will be taped for retelecasting in the fall as part of PBS' "In Performance at Wolf Trap" TV series. There will be four other programs taped during the summer for airing next season.

These include: "The World Series of Jazz" (June 27), featuring the first appearance together of Billy Eckstine, Earl Hines and Dizzy Gillespie; "Cleo Laine, John Dankworth & Ensemble" (July 2), presenting an evening of pop and jazz songs; "Mikhail Baryshnikov and Gelsey Kirkland Pas de Deux" (July 20 and 21), and Verdi's "La Traviata," starring Beverly Sills and Richard Fredricks (Aug. 12 and 14), with Julius Rudel conducting.

GLEN CAMPBELL stars in a musical tour of Australia, with Olivia Newton-John as his guest star, in "Down Home, Down Under," a variety special on Ch. 2 at 10 p.m. Thursday.

In addition to starring in the opera, Miss Sills will introduce each of the five programs. The fall series also will include 11 repeats from past seasons. David Prowitt is the producer of the series.

Novelist subject of film

JASON MILLER plays F. Scott Fitzgerald and Tuesday Weld portrays his wife, Zelda, in the new TV movie "F. Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood," on Ch. 7 at 9 p.m. Sunday.

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1959, there was a flick called "Beloved Infidel," based on Hollywood columnist Sheilah Graham's book about her romance with F. Scott Fitzgerald in the last, sad years of the writer's life.

On Sunday, ABC will have another go at basically the same story with "F. Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood," starring Jason Miller as the writer, Tuesday Weld as his wife, Zelda, and Julia Foster as Miss Graham. (It airs at 9 tonight on Channel 7 in Los Angeles.)

It differs from the original in that it contrasts the Fitzgeralds' arrival in Hollywood at the peak of his success in 1927 with his return there 10 years later, when his popularity was gone, his wife was in a sanitarium and he was broke, battling the bottle and grateful for any work.

THIS TWO-HOUR TV movie was written by James Costigan, an Emmy Award-winner who for my dough has an annoying tendency to drag out scenes and let his characters chatter on interminably and ever so poetically.

But, by golly, he curbs this tendency for the most part in Sunday's effort, which features an unexpectedly strong performance by Miss Weld and downright brilliant work by Miller and Miss Foster.

Much of the show is a brisk, well-edited example of the use of juxtaposition for dramatic effect, cutting from the boozy, confident scenes of 1927 to the misery and despair of a decade later, then back again.

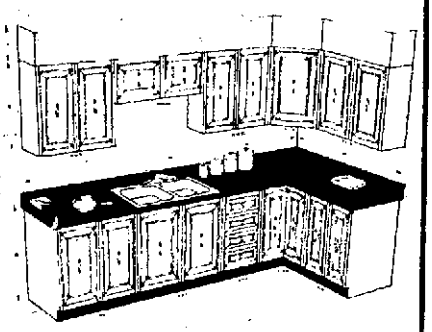

In an opening scene, the Fitzgeralds, fresh from the success of his novel "The Great Gatsby," arrive by train in Hollywood. They're advised by a studio publicist a gang of reporters and photographers are outside on the platform waiting to see them. The novelist asks what to tell them.

"Tell them you have the highest regard for the cinema, but, confidentially, you're here for the money," laughs his Alabama-born wife, doing her whimsical Southern belle bit in their first-class train compartment.

Ten years later he arrives alone, traveling peasant-class.

It sets the pattern for things to come, the hard, desperate work of Fitzgerald set against the alcoholic glory years when he and Zelda were wont to gather up purses and watches of guests at a party and toss them in a pot of boiling water.

Award winner

NBC News correspondent Tom Pettit is the only network television winner of the 1975 Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Award for Outstanding Coverage of the Problems of the Disadvantaged. Pettit won for his "NBC Nightly News" series of reports on feeding the poor.

The award was presented at a luncheon in Washington, D.C.

People don't expect to get rich on Social Security. But neither do they think it'll bring them to this.

Yet these people may actually be the lucky ones.

By the time the rest of us are ready to collect, the system may be totally bankrupt. This year alone it'll pay out $4 billion more than it takes in.

Be sure to watch Channel 7 tonight when reporter Geoff Smith begins his five-part Eyewitness Closeup on Social Security.

As bleak as the future may seem, we want to help you get all you're entitled to.

And who knows? With enough active concern, maybe we can find ways to put the security back in the system.

ABC AFTERSCHOOL SPECIAL (7), 4:00 p.m. — "Dear Lovey Hart (I Am Desperate!)" Meegan King, Susan Lawrence, Stephen Liss, Elyssa Davalos. The story of a high school newspaper editor who launches an advice to the lovelorn column to attract more readers.

LONG BEACH youths Jim Dengerd (left) and Steve Berry demonstrate to Arte Johnson the use of special effects in the film "Zap," to be shown on Ch. 28's "Young Filmmakers' Festival" special Wednesday at 8 p.m. Dengerd and Berry are part of the Lightning Factory Movie Workshop in Long Beach that made the film. It's about a ray gun that can reduce cars and humans to toy size. Johnson hosts the TV special.

Kissinger on 'Today'

An interview with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, filmed by Barbara Walters in the State Department in Washington, will be presented on the "Today" program Monday morning, May 17, on the NBC Television Network.

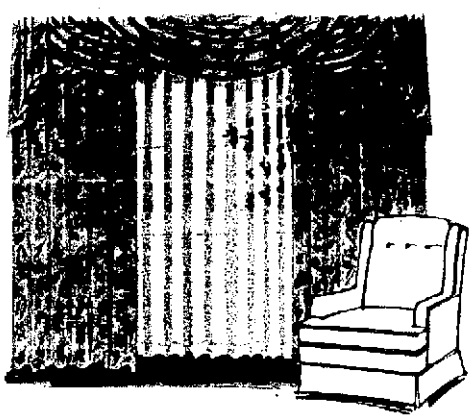

BOBBY RAY HICKS of Fullerton is draped in a winner's wreath to mark his record-breaking achievements as a contestant on NBC's "Celebrity Sweepstakes," which airs weekdays at 9 a.m. on Ch. 4. In five appearances on the game show, Hicks picked up prizes totaling an all-time high for the program of $37,543, including $33,150 in cash. Panel member Carol Wayne shares his excitement.

The BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith
MIRACLES HAVE CEASED NO. 4
$5000.00 Reward for one Bonified Miracle as the one we read about in Acts 3
We will provide the person to be healed. We will have this person examined by two doctors in Long Beach who are members of the AMA before and after the "healing." If they, in fact, testify that the person is healed, we will provide the $5000.00 reward. We are serious about this. If miracles are still in existence today, then everyone should know about it.
DIAL A MESSAGE
Yes, you can dial 421-0309 and get a different 3-minute message each day. We hope you will take advantage of this. Tell your friends about it.
FREE CORRESPONDENCE COURSE
The Studebaker Road Church of Christ is offering a free Bible correspondence course. You can use this Bible correspondence course in your own study of the Bible in the privacy of your home — without cost or obligation. The Bible correspondence course consists of eight lessons, and will be mailed to you upon request.

SPECIAL

"ROYCE" (2), 8:00 p.m. — World Premiere Western. A strong silent man who has lived with Commanche Indians and learned well how to deal with the harsh realities of 1870 frontier life makes a dangerous journey with a woman and her two children who have been abandoned in the Kansas wasteland. Stars Robert Forster.

MOVIE (7), 9:00 p.m. — "You'll Like My Mother." A house of madness becomes a terrifying maternity ward for a pregnant young woman trapped by a snowstorm. Stars Patty Duke, Rosemary Murphy, Richard Thomas.

JACK NICHOLSON and Barbra Streisand share a romantic moment — and a lot of problems — in "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," the Alan Jay Lerner musical film making its TV debut at 8:30 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 7.

Candy Bergen on Ali show

Candice Bergen, a film actress who has exhibited a high degree of professionalism as a photo-journalist on the "Today" program on NBC-TV, will join commentators Joe Garagiola, Dick Enberg and Larry Merchant as a photo essayist for NBC-TV's coverage of the heavyweightchampionship boxing match between champion Muhammad Ali and European titlist Richard Dunn, Monday night May 24.

The 15-round bout, which will be colorcast, live, via satellite, from Munich, Germany, will offer Miss Bergen her first opportunity to cover a championship fight, or any fight for that matter.

TV MOVIE TIPS

TODAY

"Pink Panther," 3 p.m., Ch. 9 (1964). David Niven, Peter Sellers. Priceless gem is sought by wanted jewel thief whose accomplice is the wife of a French police inspector. Thief and his nephew romance the beautiful owner of the jewel.

"The Parent Trap," 7 p.m., Ch. 4. Hayley Mills, in a dual role, portrays teen-age identical twins who conspire to maneuver their estranged parents back together again. Brian Keith, Maureen O'Hara, Charles Ruggles and Una Merkel also star.

"F. Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood," 9 p.m., Ch. 7. Jason Miller, Tuesday Weld, Julia Foster. The drama of the brilliant but tragic jazz-age novelists' life from the height of his success to its bitter aftermath.

MONDAY

"Marilyn" 3:30 p.m., Ch. 7 (1963). Rock Hudson narrates this tribute to Marilyn Monroe which includes selections from 15 of her films, including "The Seven Year Itch," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "How To Marry a Millionaire" and her last unfinished film, "Something's Got To Give."

"The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams," 8 p.m., Ch. 4 (1974). Accused of a crime he did not commit, a fur trapper ventures into the western mountain wilderness, finding solace in a life far away from civilization and companionship with wild animals that had never seen a man before. Dan Haggerty stars.

"The Plainsman," 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1936). Gary Cooper, Charles Bickford, Jean Arthur. Post Civil War: Wild Bill Hickock, Buffalo Bill Cody and Calamity Jane set out to get the white man selling guns to the Indians leading to Custer's massacre.

TUESDAY

"Niagara," 3:30 p.m., Ch. 7 (1953) Marilyn Monroe, Joseph Cotten, Jean Peters. A two-timing wife brings her husband, a war-shocked veteran, to Niagara Falls and plots with her lover to have him pushed over the edge.

"Swingin' Summer," 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2 (1965). Teen-age drama, starring James Stacy, William A. Wellman Jr., and Quinn O'Hara. A group of teenagers, financed by the wealthy father of one of them, take over a place in Lake Arrowhead, refurnish it and open it up for the rock music crowd.

WEDNESDAY

"For Whom the Bell Tolls," 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1943). Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, Akim Tamiroff. Based on Hemingway novel: Story of a group of Spanish loyalists and an American adventurer who pledge to destroy a bridge during the Spanish Civil War.

THURSDAY

"Shark Kill," 8 p.m. Ch. 4. Richard Yniguez and Phillip Clark star as Cabo Mendoza and Rick Dayner, two ocean-oriented adventurers who sail in search of a man-killing great white shark in a 90-minute World Premiere presentation.

"The Pride of the Yankees," 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1942). Gary Cooper, Teresa Wright, Walter Brennan. Biographical-life of Lou Gehrig, the "iron man" of baseball who was also a fine and humble man.

"The Dark Side of Innocence," 9:30 p.m., Ch. 4. A 90-minute drama of today's American family, as three generations attempt to cope with the stresses of modern-day morality. World Premiere presentation. Joanna Pettet, Anne Archer, John Anderson, Kim Hunter and Lawrence Casey star.

FRIDAY

"Stolen Hours," 8 p.m., Ch. 9 (1963). Susan Hayward, Michael Craig. Wealthy American playgirl, suffering from a brain tumor, falls in love with the doctor who operates on her, and although she discovers that her illness will return, they marry and she has months of happiness before her time is up.

"You'll Like My Mother," 9 p.m., Ch. 7 (1972). Patty Duke, Rosemary Murphy, Richard Thomas. A house of madness becomes a terrifying maternity ward for a pregnant young woman trapped by a snowstorm.

"The Missing Are Deadly," 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2. Ed Nelson, Leonard Nimoy. Jeff Margolin, the emotionally disturbed young son of a research scientist, takes a rat from his father's lab, not knowing the animal is infected with a deadly virus, and leaves on a camping trip.

SATURDAY

ADLAI STEVENSON

ALICIA PATTERSON

Q. The late Adlai Stevenson—was he a great lover who at various times made love to Alicia Patterson, founder of Newsday; Dorothy Fosdick, daughter of the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick and a member of the State Department; and Marietta Tree of the United Nations?—L. T., Washington, D.C.

A. According to John Bartlow Martin, author of "Adlai Stevenson of Illinois": "Moreover, he [Stevenson] was seriously in love with a woman who was married to someone else. She was Alicia Patterson, the third wife of Harry F. Guggenheim, member of the Guggenheim copper family . . . founder in 1940 with his wife of Newsday, a Long Island daily newspaper." Stevenson was also fond of Dorothy Fosdick and Marietta Tree, but apparently the great love of his life was the late Alicia Patterson.

Q. Now that he is dead, I am sure Hollywood will make half a dozen pictures on the life of Howard Hughes. Who will play Hughes? How about Steve McQueen?—Helen Levin, Bridgeport, Conn.

A. David Wolper, a producer who specializes in nonfiction films, has purchased the rights to Clifford Irving's "The Billionaire." Irving sold the book to McGraw-Hill for $750,000 as the autobiography of Howard Hughes. It was denounced by Hughes as a "hoax" and Irving was imprisoned for 17½ months. McQueen would make a good Hughes, but Wolper's film has not yet been cast. Actor Warren Beatty has plans to star in another version of the Hughes story.

Q. Is Walter Annenberg, who owns TV Guide, Richard Nixon's best friend?—D. L., San Clemente, Cal.

A. Walter Annenberg, who was Nixon's appointee as U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain, is one of Mr. Nixon's close friends, but not nearly so close as Charles "Bebe" Rebozo and other Nixon cronies.

Q. It is my understanding that Robert Redford is now the highest-paid motion picture actor in the world, receiving $100,000 a day. Is this true?—Theresa Klein, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. Producer Joe Levine reportedly is paying Redford $2 million for 20 days of acting in his forthcoming film "A Bridge Too Far," the story of an unsuccessful parachute drop in Arnhem, Holland, in World War II.

Q. I notice that President Gerald Ford writes left-handed. How come he plays tennis and golf right-handed?—Mrs. Lee Ayres, Pinehurst, N.C.

A. He wrote left-handed as a boy, learned to play tennis and golf right-handed as a man.

Q. Is it true that the brain of Italian dictator Benito Mussolini is on file in the Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D.C.?—Helen Burns, Baltimore, Md.

A. A segment of Mussolini's brain was obtained by a U.S. Army psychiatrist in 1945 after Mussolini's execution by Italian partisans. It was delivered to Walter Reed Army Hospital for examination. Mussolini's widow, Rachele, insisted that the U.S. return the brain segment to her. Finally in March, 1966, the U.S. government agreed. It sent back the brain fragment in the State Department diplomatic pouch.

Q. I would like to know how much Dick Cavett paid Mae West for appearing with him on his CBS-TV show?—Maude Robinson, Salt Lake City, Utah.

A. Miss West was paid $30,000 for her appearance on the Cavett program.

DICK CAVETT AND MAE WEST ON HIS SHOW

SOLZHENITSYN AND WIFE NATALYA

Q. The Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn — isn't he fundamentally a fascist?—Ron Lovett, Chicago.

A. Solzhenitsyn believes in and will support passionately any force or ideology opposed to the Soviet Union. His hatred of Soviet communism is so visceral and pervasive that he exalts Francisco Franco's Spain and denigrates Gerald Ford's America. He loses sight of the fact that were it not for American reaction to Soviet oppression he would not be a free man today. He serves a purpose, however, in advising the West never to trust the Soviets.

Q. How old is Lowell Thomas?—D. Roth, Albany, N.Y.

A. Thomas is 84.

Q. Several years ago Mick Jagger, the rock and roll star, made an out-of-court settlement on a paternity suit brought against him by actress Marsha Hunt. What's happened to Marsha Hunt and the child she claimed was Jagger's?—T. F., Providence, R. I.

A. Marsha Hunt, who starred in the stage play "Hair," lives with daughter Karis, 5, in London, recently appeared in a London musical, "Mardi Gras." She claims that Jagger never visits their daughter, but she figures it's his loss.

Q. How old is comic Jerry Lewis, and how many children does he have? How many times married? —Alice Wertheim, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Lewis, 50, is the father of six sons, is still married to his first wife, Patti.

Q. I have been told that Barbara Walters is having a difficult time finding a husband. Is this because she lisps and has a New York accent? Is any of this true? —K.T., Mt. Vernon, N.Y.

A. Barbara Walters has a New York accent, a yearly income of about $400,000, and a demanding career as a TV personality. These last two factors make difficult the finding of a husband, since many men are reluctant to be eclipsed financially and career-wise by a successful, ambitious wife.

Giscard d'Estaing

An Interview With the French President on the Eve of His Visit to the U.S.

by George Michaelson

President Giscard d'Estaing with his wife, Anne-Aymone, and their two dogs. The photo was shot in his Elysée Palace office, where he granted PARADE a one-hour interview. There's an apartment in the palace where Giscard stays about half the time. His wife and four children live in a house about a 10-minute drive away.

PARIS.

Nearly 30 years ago, a young, athletic-looking, rather adventurous Frenchman sold his motorcycle and bought a boat ticket to America. For six months he traveled by car and train in Canada and the United States, supporting himself by teaching French and writing articles for a newspaper back in France. And while at first he didn't speak a word of English, apart from "hot dog" and "hamburger," he managed to teach himself enough so he could at least get by. In the end, when he returned home, he took with him, he now says, "a lasting impression of the U.S. where, unlike postwar France, everyone was free to buy what they wanted to buy, go where they wanted to go, do what they wanted to do; where, in a word, everyone had absolute freedom."

Tomorrow, Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, now 50 years old but still athletic-looking, is to pay another visit to America—this time as President of France. As one of the first official visitors to come celebrate the Bicentennial, he and his wife, Anne-Aymone, will spend this week visiting Washington, D.C., Yorktown, Va., Philadelphia, Houston and New Orleans (their four children, who are in high school and college, are not expected to accompany them). In addition the French President will address Congress—in his now-excellent English.

'The right thing to do'

"The main point I plan to make is that this Bicentennial year is a good time for our two countries to think about where we have been and where we are today," Giscard told PARADE on the eve of his departure for the U.S., as he sat along with his wife in his elegant office at the Elysée Palace. "As you remember, France fought alongside the American Colonies against the British. We did this not so we could pat ourselves on the back two centuries later, but because it was the right thing to do."

As it happens, the Bicentennial is actually something of a family celebration for Giscard d'Estaing. A distant cousin, Count Charles d'Estaing, commanded the first French expedition supporting the American Colonies and was wounded in battle. Thus, when the French first couple go to Yorktown to commemorate the spot where French and American forces met in the campaign against the British, the occasion will take on a personal as well as an historical significance. Adds Giscard: "What we will be honoring is the fact that after two centuries, our people still share the ideals of freedom and independence, and that we continue to travel down parallel paths, through thick and thin."

As America's oldest ally, France has indeed remained with us on a "parallel path, through thick and thin"; one has only to think of the two world wars in which we fought together. But, as Giscard is well aware, it was only a decade ago that this historical connection was at its thinnest. Throughout the 1960's, under the leadership of Charles de Gaulle, France was constantly acting in ways that American leaders found irritating—or "galling," as it was sometimes put. Against American wishes, de Gaulle insisted upon developing France's own nuclear arsenal (force de frappe); he withdrew France from the NATO command structure and had NATO forces quit France; and he never let up in his criticism of U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

In de Gaulle's cabinet

"These were not the easiest years," admits Giscard, who at the time was de Gaulle's Minister of Finance. "But today, I can frankly tell you that the state of relations between France and the United States is better than it has ever been. We have no bilateral disputes between us. So when I meet President Ford on this visit, unlike what usually happens when two heads of state meet, there will be no major disagreements to iron out."

At this point, Giscard says, there are only minor differences of opinion, ones that certainly can be managed. For instance, there is some disagreement about how our countries should relate to the Third World and certain Communist nations. (France has taken a different stance, as in their greater support of Palestinian nationalism and their recognition of Cuba and Vietnam.) And there is some concern on the French part over American willingness to fully support the Franco-British Concorde. ("Landing rights in the U.S. will be decisive for the success of our supersonic," states Giscard, who pointedly will be coming here on the Concorde.)

'We like Americans'

Then, reaching down to pet his black English hunting dog at his feet, Giscard quickly adds that these minor disagreements notwithstanding, he personally is satisfied with the good relations between our two countries. "Moreover, I can tell you that speaking for the French, we like the Americans. We do. I want to point this out because sometimes one hears of an irritation on the part of some French, say, towards the Americans. But this is never on the personal level. And really, in my opinion, what it comes down to is the historical fact that until the 18th century, France was the most important power in the known world. Now you are. You see, it's not always easy to give a hearty welcome to a young and influential newcomer."

That Giscard should see French-American relations in this perspective is, perhaps, not surprising. For, within the French political scene, he, too, is something of a "young and influential newcomer." In fact, when he was whisked into the Presidency two years ago (for a seven-year term), he became France's youngest head of state since Napoleon. And as one veteran French journalist told me: "Everything about Giscard smacks of youth, vigor and success. He's one of those enviable people who seem to come into the world with —how do you say it?—a silver spoon in the mouth."

As a matter of fact, Giscard was born with more advantages than most. One of five children of a wealthy and prominent economist, young Valéry was raised in the comfort of his family's countryside estate in Auvergne and their house in Paris. Throughout his youth he was surrounded by culture (he plays the piano and writes fiction). And, naturally, he was sent off to the best schools, where he gravitated, like his father, towards economics.

However, as with all other Frenchmen, rich or poor, when World War II came, he went and served: first, as a messenger and gun-runner in the French Resistance under the German occupation and then, after enlisting in the regular army, as an officer in the tank corps. He fought in France and North Africa and was severely wounded by a bazooka shell that struck his tank. Of his war experience, which brought him into contact with the gamut of his countrymen, he says it is an event in his life that deeply influenced and tempered him.

Career in government

After the war Giscard finished college and then went off on his solo jaunt to America. ("My family insisted I pay for it out of my own pocket, which is why I had to sell my motorcycle.") When he returned, he settled down in Paris and began to carve out a career—one that combined his bent for economics with a flair for politics. Hence, he became an assistant in the Ministry of Finance (1952); was elected to parliament (1956); formed his own small political party, a Gaullist offshoot known as the Independent Republicans (1962), and was appointed to two terms as the Minister of Finance (1962-66 under de Gaulle and 1969-74 under Pompidou). Finally, with the death of Pompidou in 1974 and the need to vote in a new President, Giscard rallied the liberal-conservative coalition around him and in a close vote beat out the Socialist-Communist candidate for his country's No. 1 job.

"His status as a liberal artistocrat who might be able to change France without disrupting things too much appealed to the majority of Frenchmen," explains Jean-François Kahn, a well-known French political commentator. "What also helped his image was the fact that he has a lively, attractive family, and, contrary to French tradition, they took an active part in his campaign, very much like you do it in America. In fact, overall, Giscard came across like your former-President Kennedy: a prince that is not out of touch with his people. And as you may know, Kennedy is still quite popular here." (Asked about the comparison to Kennedy, Giscard added: "I think Kennedy's attempt to bring spontaneity and gaiety into public life was, and still is, something the public expects—and also slightly distrusts. Personally, I admired him very much, and, yes, I have tried to do the same type of thing.")

New, informal image

Thus, right from his first day in office, Giscard began, as he put it, "to dust off the Republic." He wore a business suit instead of the customary white tie and tails to his inauguration at the Elysée Palace, and, unlike his predecessors who arrived by limousine, he chose to come by foot. Once installed in the palace, he further set about informalizing the image of the Presidency—most dramatically, perhaps, by inviting a number of "ordinary" Frenchmen to come dine with him there and, in turn, going to visit people in their homes.

Says Giscard of these unprecedented visits: "In the U.S. you are accustomed to the idea that the head of state is a person like everyone else, but here the President has always been somewhat remote, off on a pedestal. By visiting typical French families in their homes —my wife and I have enough invitations to last for every day until my death— —we can demonstrate that the President is someone with whom ordinary contact and conversation are possible."

Conservative opposition

Apart from these shifts in style, Giscard has also brought about some changes in the country's structure. Though France is predominantly Catholic, he has pushed through measures which have legalized abortion, liberalized the sale of contraceptives, and made divorce easier to obtain. In addition, he has reduced the voting age to 18, ended police wiretaps, and—in a move that has been opposed by conservatives within his coalition—he has attempted to introduce progressive reforms in worker-manager relations and to levy higher taxes on the rich.

Breaking bread with the residents of an old-age home in Paris. About once a month—often with his wife—he dines with ordinary French families, and occasionally he invites folks to the Elysée Palace. Some people call it pseudo-democracy, but he feels the visits bring him closer to the people.

office.") As for France's, and Europe's, place in this world of competing superpowers, he believes they must continue to play a somewhat independent role. Says Giscard: "While we recognize the major responsibility of the U.S. in the Western world, we must continue to maintain a level of security of our own, which is why we in France have stepped up our military expenditures."

However, Giscard says he considers himself to be hopeful about where the world is going. It is not in his nature, he says, to be pessimistic. In fact, he has some positive ideas about the future. He feels that his own country has a special contribution to make as a model of a relatively small (France has 53 million people), progressive society—or société libéral avancée, as he calls it. "The world today suffers from a lack of vision and purpose," he says. "It has some practical solutions for problems, but it lacks a conception of the future. Hopefully, we in France can make a contribution there."

How has all this gone over? "Unfortunately for Giscard, not as well as he hoped," answers political commentator Kahn. "The conservatives say he is trying to do too much, and the Socialist-Communist coalition says he is doing too little. You see, France today is a divided society, and the fact that we are in a recession with 1 million people out of work makes the division even greater. For Giscard's part, in keeping with his campaign motto of 'Change Without Risk,' he has tried to bridge the gap. But more and more it appears that he may not make it. The possibility of a Socialist-Communist victory, sooner or later, begins to look very real, and right now, it's got Giscard scared."

Indeed, in recent weeks, with the victory of left-wing candidates in local elections and with students and workers taking to the streets to demonstrate, Giscard would seem to have quite a problem on his hands. And some American spokesmen have gone so far as to issue public warnings about the possible danger of Communist participation in the French government and elsewhere in Europe. Yet, at least for the moment, Giscard seems to feel he can handle the situation. Somewhat philosophically, he muses: "When there is a darkening of the political scene, people sometimes forget that in the end the sun comes back again." As for the public expressions of concern on the part of American leaders, he makes it clear that it would be better if they kept their worries to themselves. "It is up to us," he says, "to handle our own affairs. And we will."

Worry over U.S. intent

But if Giscard prefers America to be publicly silent with regard to France's domestic affairs, he makes it equally plain that he by no means wants the U.S. to withdraw militarily from Europe or other areas in the world. On the contrary, he hopes the U.S. will continue to take an active role, and he is concerned that, in the post-Vietnam period, there may be some hesitation to do so. Says Giscard, quite bluntly: "There is a feeling in the world today—in all of Africa and part of Western Europe—that the U.S. is less committed to its foreign participation than it was before. This is not desirable, and while in the long run we in Europe have not lost faith, we are concerned."

Accordingly, he supports détente but with the proviso that the U.S. continue to maintain its military strength and not fall behind the Soviet Union. (His view of détente advocate Kissinger: "He's the man with the most penetrating vision and the best analyst of the world situation I have met since taking

Observations™

Myth of oil power. The American people are being duped — there, we said it, straight out. Politicians running for office, aware that voters are frustrated and angry about many things, have discovered in the bigness of business—especially oil companies—a convenient explanation for all the things wrong with our country. But think about that "issue." Where's all that power our critics say we have? It wasn't enough, certainly, to keep Congress from raising industry taxes in 1975 or to keep foreign governments from taking over many of our producing properties. It hasn't been able to get price controls removed on oil—ours is the only industry still subject to those "emergency" controls, imposed five long years ago. Oil's power, frankly, is a myth. But it's no myth that oil companies have become scapegoats. If we sound angry about it, we are.

HE'S EXPLAINING HOW BREAKING UP THE OIL COMPANIES WOULD WORK!

Achilles' heel. America's dependence on foreign oil is bad and getting worse, according to a report prepared for the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy by the Congressional Research Service. Says the report: "A careful analysis of current worldwide oil reserves leads to the inevitable conclusion that the U.S. will become highly dependent on oil from the Middle East and North Africa during the coming decade." What to do about it? " . . . maximizing coal utilization and nuclear power would significantly reduce dependence on foreign imports of oil by 1985 and beyond," the report states.

One we won. We're delighted that Mobil's underwriting of a Bicentennial exhibit of 250 unique American posters prompted Business and Society Review to name us a winner of its 1975 Corporate Social Responsibility Awards. And we'd like to share these robust, persuasive posters with you. A part of our country's artistic tradition, they shock, entertain, entreat, admonish, invite, and rejoice. The entire collection, Images of an Era: the American Poster, 1945-75, has been published in a full-color exhibition catalog. It's available for $17.50 in check or money order, made out to "Images of an Era," at the address below.

And what about the U.S. role in the future? "Well, during this, your Bicentennial year, that certainly is a question worth asking," says Giscard, as he rises and walks slowly over to the large window looking out on the lush Elysée Palace lawn.

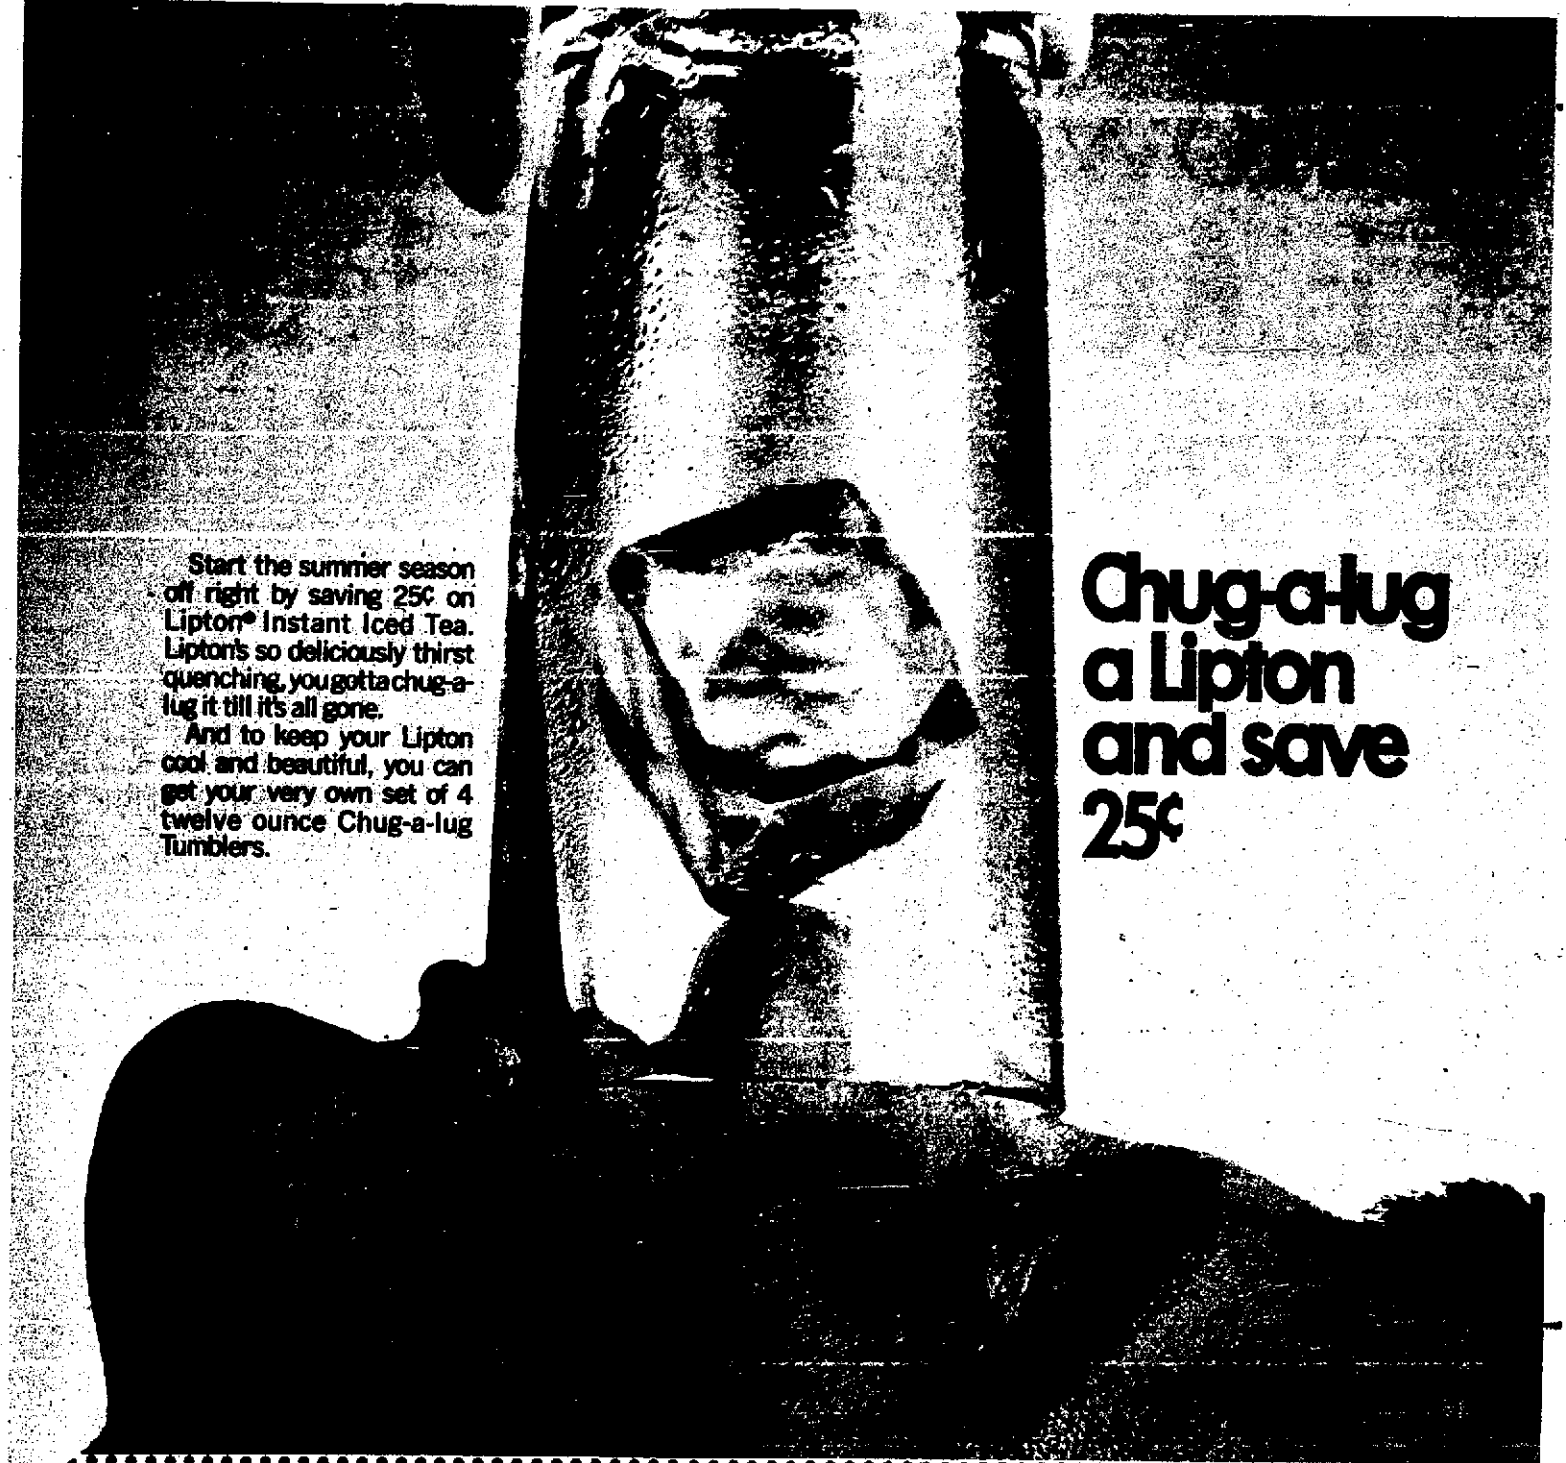

Then, smiling broadly, he concludes: "Look, the U.S. is in many ways the most important country in the world today, so it is only natural that you will have a tremendous influence on where the world is going. For 200 years, you have had a history of freedom and independence, and, yes, you've been a model in this way. But while we in France come to pay our respects to you, to share your Bicentennial, it is not for us to predict what role you will actually play in the future. That answer, as I've suggested in our talk and as I will suggest again in my speech to your Congress, is something that still remains to be heard. Meanwhile, I assure you of this: We are all listening."

Giscard plays with his dogs outside the Elysée Palace. His informality is in sharp contrast to the unbending manner of predecessor Charles de Gaulle.

Giscard is an active sportsman, enjoying skiing, tennis and soccer. He plays the piano and writes fiction, says he would like to do a personal, not political, novel.

How many times have you decided to give up smoking?

Nobody these days is telling you not to give up smoking.

But if you've given it up more times than you'd like to remember, the chances are you enjoy it too much to want to give it up at all.

If you're like a lot of smokers these days, it probably isn't smoking that you want to give up. It's some of that 'tar' and nicotine you've been hearing about.

So you tried cigarettes which were low in 'tar' and you found yourself checking every once in a while to see if they were still lit. Which drove you right back to your regular brand.

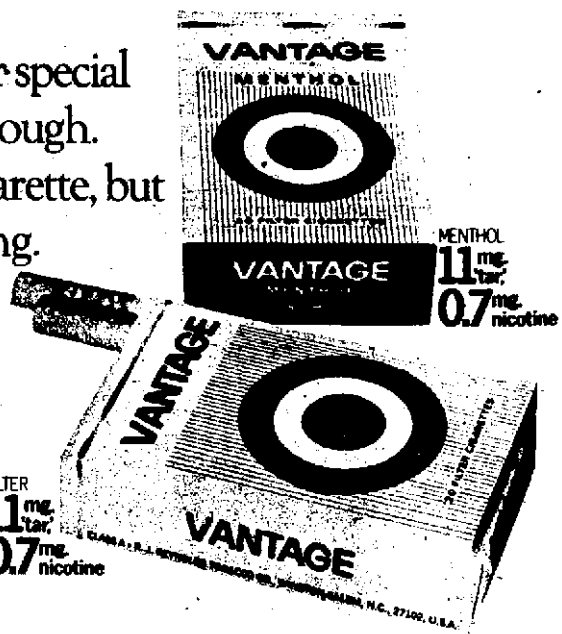

Now, there is Vantage.

Vantage cigarettes, either filter or menthol, deliver considerably less 'tar' and less nicotine than most cigarettes.

But what really makes Vantage special is our special filter which allows the tobacco flavor to come through.

Vantage isn't the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette, but it may well be the lowest one you'll enjoy smoking.

And that's what makes all the difference.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

FILTER, MENTHOL: 11 mg. "tar", 0.7 mg. nicotine, av. per cigarette, FTC Report SEPT. '75.

Doctors are making remarkable progress in treating severe arthritis by replacing disease-wracked joints like shoulders, knees, and hips with new plastic-and-metal devices.

The Growing Use of Surgery in Severe Arthritis Cases

by Lawrence Galton

A Bronx, N.Y., housewife today can knit a scarf. Only two months ago, her hands were cruelly deformed and made useless by arthritis. Now, thanks to new artificial knuckles, they're undeformed and uncrippled.

In Chicago, a new shoulder joint has restored use of a previously immobilized right arm for a 62-year-old woman.

In Boston, after years of intractable pain from arthritis-caused destruction of an elbow, a young woman and an elderly man are free of their pain thanks to a new, remarkably functional elbow-joint replacement.

These are just a few of the people with severe arthritis now beginning to benefit from an explosion of progress in the development of prosthetic joints.

Our most widespread chronic disease, arthritis in its two major forms—osteoarthritis, which develops with aging, and rheumatoid, which strikes younger people—afflicts 20 million Americans, one in every 11.

Its causes remain unknown; worse, there is no cure. Many victims benefit from treatment that may include medicine, exercise, heat, rest, physical therapy and mechanical aids.

But for many others, such measures are inadequate. It's for them that rapid development of joint-replacement surgery at 42 Arthritis Foundation centers and medical centers all over the country offers promise.

EXTENDING THE HIP JOINT BREAKTHROUGH: A dramatic development about 10 years ago was a workable artificial hip.

The hip joint bears body weight. The difficulty in replacing it was to find a material strong enough to withstand a cumulative burden of millions of pounds over the years, yet elastic enough to mimic the energy-absorbing qualities of living bone and cartilage. The joint had to be durable, self-lubricating and slip-proof.

How Candice Walker got Slender and stayed Slender.

Candice Walker's thick, auburn hair falls softly to her shoulders. Her eyes are sky blue. She has the cheekbones of a model. She has the figure of a model—almost. Yet Candice once weighed 220 pounds and rarely went outside her house.

Today, Candice, who's 5'7" tall, weighs 137 pounds. Her waist measures 26", not 39"; her hips are 37", not 48." Instead of a matronly 40" bustline, she's a trim 34B.

Candice did it with Slender® diet food and sensible portions of solid foods. It took 14 months. But Candice is a realist. She'd spent half her life putting it on.

"I tried lots of diets before Slender but I couldn't stay on them. I tried pills but they made me climb the walls. I screamed at everybody I was so nervous.

"You see my downfall was that I loved things like ice cream and milk shakes...so when I finally found Slender it was like a thick, creamy shake to me. I prefer Slender powder because you can shake it up. I put in the milk and a couple of ice cubes and shake it until it becomes thick and foamy. Then I sip it with a straw. I varied my Slender diet with solid foods. Sometimes I'd have nothing but Slender for 2 or 4 days. Then I'd start off with a light breakfast, Slender for lunch, and a salad and lean meat for dinner. After a week or so, I'd go back to Slender again for 3 or 4 meals a day. Yet I never think of Slender as a diet; it's more of a newfound way of eating—for my newfound life. My friends see me in the store and say—'Gee, you've REALLY lost the weight,' and they look in my shopping cart and say, 'I see you buy Slender.' I say, 'Yes, it's my favorite pal. I have it in the kitchen at all times. I put it in my purse, I take it to work with me.'

"Today I wear a size 11 or even a 9 in some clothes," says Candice, "and I used to take a size 34½. I look great in my clothes and I know it. When I'm walking down the street, men look at me. I'll admit it—it makes me feel great! I feel like a woman again!

"I'm not rich. I'm not famous. But I want to make some kind of mark in this world that says I've been here. I could be an entertainer, a country rock singer, even a face model. If I can lose 83 pounds I can do anything!"

Candice knows the hardest part is keeping it off. "Oh sure, every now and then I consume large quantities of sweets for 2 or 3 days. Then I get out my Slender and say, ok, pal, let's get together and take off those two or three pounds. That's the trick...never gain more than 5 pounds back or you're done. And I've only varied from 135 to 137 in three years. So I'm proud of myself for keeping it off.

"Slender's worked for me, and I say anybody can do it."

Candice Walker is a real Slender success story. And it all started the day she decided to pick up Slender at her market—and stayed with it. You can do the same. Just get Slender, and get started.

Ask your doctor before starting any program of weight reduction.

The hip prosthesis, developed by Dr. John Charnley of England, worked. It uses stainless steel or Vitallium for one component, polyethylene plastic for the other, with both cemented into place. Most patients walk within a few days after surgery. Pain disappears.

At first, hip replacement was limited to patients over 60 because of uncertainty about how long the prosthesis might last. Now, with a decade of satisfactory experience, surgeons are implanting artificial hips in much younger patients, even in some children. Currently, 40,000 people a year in this country are receiving the hips.

And the success of Charnley's hip encouraged other developments.

KNEES, ANKLES AND TOES: The knee was long regarded as a "nightmare joint" to replace because of its complexity. It bends, rotates, locks when extended, has a mechanism for shifting body weight during bending and straightening without which we could never get up from a squatting position.

Yet several knee joints have now become available. At New York City's Hospital for Special Surgery, Dr. John N. Insall has recently used the Freeman-Swanson knee (named for its English developers) to replace more than two dozen rheumatoid- and osteoarthritis-crippled knees with excellent results in pain relief, motion and stability.

In other medical centers, other knee prostheses — a "polycentric" knee, a "geometric" knee, and a "UCI" (University of California at Irvine) knee—now have been used successfully in hundreds of patients. Pain is relieved. After a rehabilitation period during which crutches or a walker may be used temporarily, most patients no longer need help in walking.

Until very recently, artificial ankles were of limited usefulness. The natural ankle is an intricate hinge that not only supports the body but also allows the foot to rotate and tilt. Even the best artificial ankles of the past allowed only up-and-down motion.

Now a new ankle joint developed by Dr. Theodore Waugh at UCI permits side-to-side as well as up-and-down movement of the foot. A T-shaped metal device that screws up into the shin and rocks on a rounded runner that covers the talus ankle bone, it can be implanted in half an hour. Most of the first three dozen patients to receive it have been walking on crutches five days after surgery, with many walking unaided in less than a month. Some of the patients, Dr. Waugh says, unable to walk without crutches for years, are now playing golf and tennis.

Toe implants, too, have been developed. They include half-joints, spacers and hinged devices suited to individual problems. At UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles, Dr. Andrea Cracchiolo III has reported on 19 patients receiving 25 implants to relieve foot pain and improve toe alignment. Ten now walk without limitations, while five others can walk up to six blocks at a time.

FINGERS AND KNUCKLES: Arthritis can twist and gnarl hands into grotesque shapes that even bear such descriptive names as "swan neck" and "buttonhole."

Finger-joint implants now often help. A typical one, made of silicone rubber, resembles a piece of taffy pulled out at both ends. After a deformed joint is removed, the ends of the implant are positioned in channels in bones with the thickest part of the device lying between and keeping the bones aligned.

Dr. Alfred B. Swanson, a hand surgeon at Blodgett Memorial Hospital, Grand Rapids, Mich., who developed the joints, has reported that they provide 75 percent of the efficiency of natural healthy joints. They are now being used by many medical centers.

Within the last year, successes with new prosthetic knuckles have been reported by Dr. Robert J. Schultz of the Hospital of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Bronx, N.Y. They are for patients with hands so deformed that gripping, pinching and opening the hands widely to grasp large objects are no longer possible.

The replacement knuckles, of stainless steel and polyethylene, are implanted in two hours, and patients begin to use their hands in four days. In the first 150 implanted and followed for as long as 2½ years, there have been no undesirable effects, and the joints, reports Dr. Schultz, "are not perfect, but close."

SHOULDERS AND ELBOWS: The Chicago woman mentioned earlier was one of the first to benefit from a new shoulder joint developed at the Michael Reese Medical Center in Chicago by a team headed by Dr. Melvin Post.

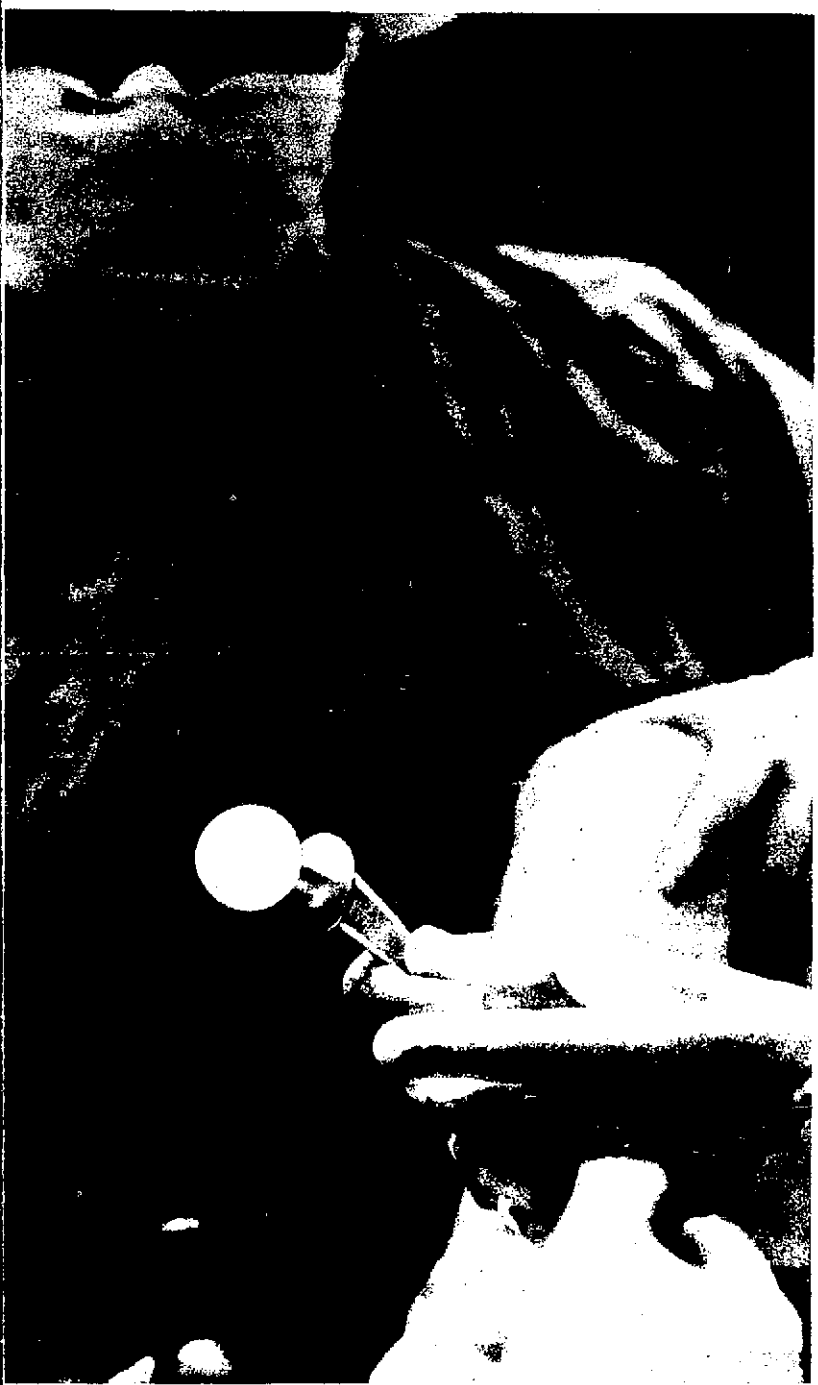

Somewhat like the Charnley hip, it replaces damaged shoulder surfaces with a metal-to-plastic ball-and-socket joint. And, because the shoulder is subject to extreme twisting, the device has a plastic collar to prevent dislocation.

After implantation, the arm is immobilized for four weeks, then gentle motion exercises are begun. The prosthesis shows promise of allowing patients to carry out ordinary shoulder movements and perform tasks that were painful or impossible before.

Just a few months ago, Dr. Frederick C. Ewald of Boston's Robert B. Brigham Hospital and Harvard Medical School reported remarkable success with a new elbow joint.

Previous elbow-joint prototypes could provide only limited motion and tended to loosen. The new one is a cup-like plastic element with a ladlelike metal component. The cup goes on top of the ulna bone on the inner side of the forearm; the handle of the ladle fits into the long humerus bone of the upper arm. Cemented into place, the two elements work like a natural elbow.

The first patients to receive it were 24 women and four men, aged 44 to 74, all with complete elbow-joint destruction and in intractable pain for three to 10 years. Now their pain has been relieved, better than 90 percent normal arm function has been restored and, reports Dr. Ewald, all the patients have resumed "the tasks of daily life, and some have returned to their occupations."

NEW HOPE: Arthritis, of course, can affect more than one joint. Not all affected joints require replacement. But now when more than one joint causes extreme and intractable pain and no longer can function, more than one can be replaced.

Often, the most troublesome may be replaced first and others later. The order may also depend upon the particular joints. When, for example, hip and knee joints require replacement, rehabilitation is easier if the hip is replaced first. Once use of the hip is regained, the knee joint can be replaced.

The great needs in arthritis, of course, are for better understanding of causes and improved means of medical control and even prevention. Until they're met, however, the development of reconstructed joints makes rehabilitation possible for many patients once considered virtually hopeless.

Readers of Parade are invited to Enjoy collecting a stirring panorama preserved for future generations.

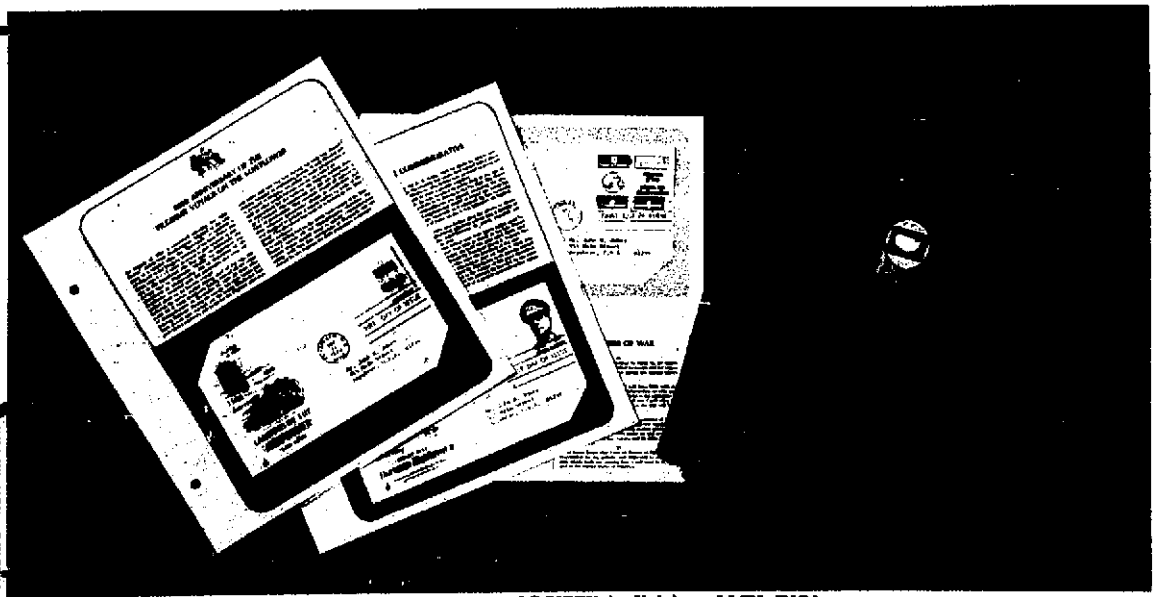

• At a surprisingly modest cost, you can receive beautiful First Day Covers for each new commemorative stamp issue of the United States. • Each First Day Cover will be individually addressed and sent automatically to the name and address you designate.

The United States regularly honors the important men, events and places in its history through the issuance of official U.S. commemorative postage stamps. When a new stamp is to be issued, one, and only one, post office is designated to provide the official "First Day" cancellation. The specially designed envelope bearing the new stamp, cancelled with the exact date of first issue of the officially designated post office, is a First Day Cover.

First Day Covers are fascinating collectors' items. As you can well imagine, the combination of a historic stamp, cancelled with the "First Day of Issue" postmark of the officially designated post office on a specially designed envelope, results in a collector's item of the first order. One that has been prized by collectors like Dwight D. Eisenhower, George C. Marshall and Franklin D. Roosevelt, plus others with the foresight to preserve yesterday and today for tomorrow.

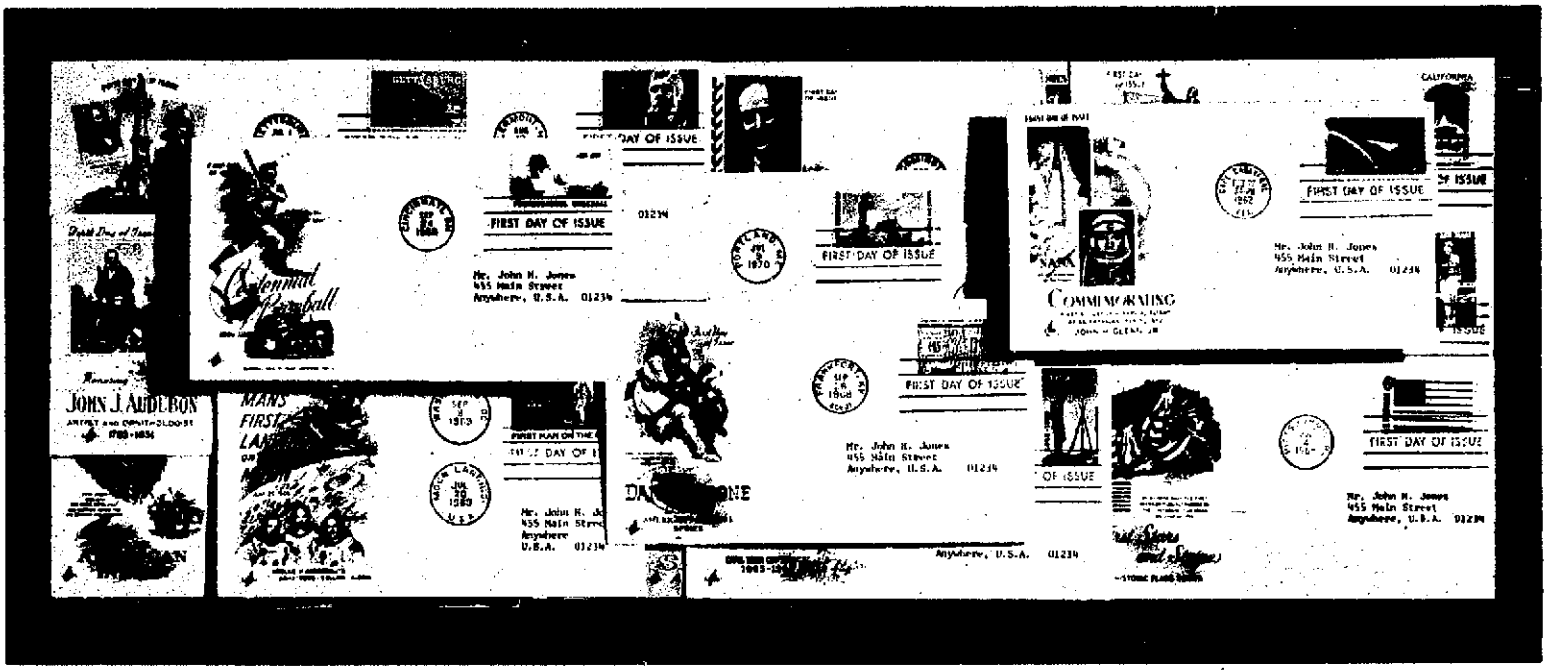

The best time to obtain these prized collectors' items is when they are issued. This is now made easier than ever by the Postal Commemorative Society.

Postal Commemorative Society members receive everything they need to build and maintain a personalized "mint condition" collection of U.S. First Day Covers. For each cover issued, the Society provides an exclusive custom designed display page, especially made for the member's personalized album.

of U.S. history. To be treasured now and

First Day Covers combine art and history in a tribute to our American heritage.

Eisenhower... The Battle of Bunker Hill... the writing of the Star Spangled Banner... the landing of astronauts on the moon... such are the subjects chosen by the United States for national honor on commemorative postage stamps.

The post office chosen for a first day of issue usually bears particular significance to the subject commemorated. For example, a first day cover of the Eisenhower stamp bears the "First Day of Issue" postmark of Abilene, Kansas.

The nation's leading artists and designers are called upon to portray the subjects chosen. Such commissions naturally are highly prized, and bring forth the best efforts of the artists involved.

Membership in the Postal Commemorative Society makes it possible to easily collect First Day Covers as they are issued.

The Society will guarantee your receiving a personally addressed First Day Cover of every U.S. commemorative stamp issue. All details of arranging for your First Day Covers to be sent to you will be handled by the Society.

Commemorative stamps normally are issued by the United States at the rate of one every three to four weeks. You will receive a beautiful First Day Cover for every United States commemorative stamp issue during the term of your membership at a total cost of just $1.65 per month.

As a member, you will also receive the Society's exclusive display page for each new issue. Each beautiful, specially designed page is die-cut to hold the First Day Cover, and contains a full description with all important historical information about the subject of the commemorative issue. These pages are available only to members of the Society.

At the surprisingly low cost of $1.65 per month, you will be building a truly worthwhile First Day Cover collection to be enjoyed now and preserved for future generations of your family. Shouldn't you really give it a try?

Becoming a member now brings you an important collector's bonus at no additional cost.

The Postal Commemorative Society makes available to its members a handsome collector's album with the member's name hand-embossed on the cover. This album, specially designed to hold the Society's display pages, makes it possible for members to keep each new First Day Cover in perfect condition. It is yours free, if you join now!

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

ROTATING PLANT STAND: If you haven't the time to rotate your house plants so all sides receive optimal amounts of sunlight, a new stand does it for you. It plugs into any household outlet, holds up to an 8" pot, rotates a plant once an hour, uses only 2½ watts. $9.95 ppd. Bryce-Branton, Dept. PP, 690 Southern Ave., Muskegon, Mich. 49442.

TORNADO ALARM: A recently discovered phenomenon is that an active tornado vortex approaching within 18 miles can turn a TV screen white, providing a visible warning. Now, based on that, a new electronic alarm system you can attach to a TV set will emit a loud, piercing warning when a tornado comes that close, then will turn itself off when the tornado passes out of range. Complete with nine-volt battery, instructions for use and what to do in the event of a tornado: $29.95. Marketing Inputs, Dept. PP, Box 11205, St. Louis, Mo. 63105.

ULTRALIGHT OUTBOARD: Weighing only 11 pounds—13 pounds less than usual two-horsepower motors — this one runs for 10 hours at top speed on two gallons of gas, for 50 hours at trolling speed, claims the maker. It develops 35 pounds of thrust and, at trolling speed, is said to be as slow and, to a fish, as quiet as an electric. With automatic rewind starter, sliding shaft for shallow running: $165. Also available: a 17.6-pounder, with 70 pounds of thrust, that operates for seven hours at top speed on three gallons of gas, for 48 hours at trolling speed. $235. AquaBug International, Dept. PP, 100 Merrick Road, Rockville Centre, N.Y. 11570. (above)

DO YOU NEED A TONIC?

Doctors report iron-poor blood definitely improves with Geritol.

As you can see from the chart and photomicrographs below, medical records show that iron-poor blood definitely improves after you use Geritol. Thin, pale, badly shaped iron-poor red blood cells become round, rich and red.

		Before Geritol	After Geritol	Improvement
	Blood Count Patient B	3,800,000 red blood cells	4,900,000 red blood cells	over 1,000,000 more red blood cells

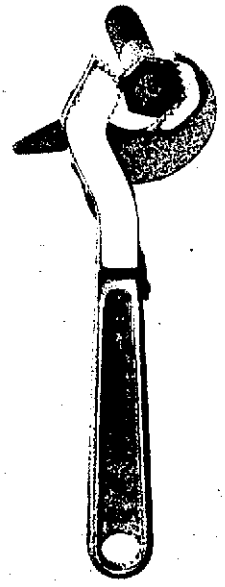

With the help of Geritol iron in your bloodstream, millions more healthy red blood cells are built to circulate all around your body 1500 times a day!

And the Geritol formula also gives you vitamins important for nutrition.

Geritol is the tonic that's protecting so many Americans today. If you need a tonic, try Geritol, tablets or liquid, starting today.

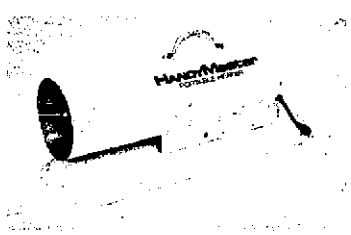

Geritol.
America's medically proved blood builder.

NEW IDEA IN A WRENCH: Useful around house, car and boat, this wrench can do the jobs of adjustable, open-end, box and pipe wrenches, turning pipes, nuts and bolts, including badly chewed and rounded nuts and bolts, claims the maker. It adjusts instantly to hardware size; just open jaw with thumb, slip wrench head around hardware, release thumb, and the jaw grips securely. With ratchet action: $4.50 ppd. Joseph Mennen Co., Dept. PP, 192 Vincent Ave., Lynbrook, N.Y. 11563. (above)

PORTABLE AND POWERFUL HEATER: Suitable for many uses, including warming garages, workshops and greenhouses, this new heater delivers 30,000 BTU's of heat an hour, nearly one-third as much as the average home heating system. Just fill with kerosine or #1 fuel oil, plug into any 110-volt outlet, and it operates for 10 hours, shuts off automatically when fuel supply runs out. It uses less current than a 60-watt bulb. Total operating cost is 11¢ an hour. 30" x 11" x 14". Suggested retail price: $119.95. Details: Koehring Atomaster Division, Dept. PP, Box 719, Bowling Green, Ky. 42101. (right)

WALLPAPER IN SQUARES: A new way to put up wallpaper is to use handy-sized, 15¾", pre-pasted squares that go up as easily as postage stamps, claims the maker. Just dip square in water, place on wall. As each square goes up, the pattern matches automatically. The paper is vinyl-coated for washability and dry-strippable for easy removal when it's time to redecorate. Available in many designs and colors, in packages of 18 squares. Details: Decro-wall, Dept. PP, 375 Executive Blvd., Elmsford, N.Y. 10523.

My favorite jokes

by Jay Marr

EDITOR'S NOTE: Originally from Boston, comedian Jay Marr makes his home these days in Miami. He's been working on cruise ships for the last few years and says: "I've been on the cruise circuit so long I walk with a list."

He broke into comedy in New York, where he lived from 1968 to '73, and recalls: "Usually my name was so far down on the bill only dogs could read it. My first job—well, it went like this. I worked with a ventriloquist who was so bad his lips moved even when he was listening. This guy was so terrible, one day his dummy went out looking for a new partner."

Here are some of Jay Marr's current favorites:

They say all those soap operas are supposed to be so true to life—I don't understand why you never see any of the people on them spending their afternoons watching TV.

A girlfriend of mine just bought a mobile home. She woke up one morning and discovered she had a sunken living room—somebody let the air out of her front tires.

A guy says to his doctor: "Doc, I'm having trouble with my love-life at home." The doctor says: "Look, take off 20 pounds. Run 10 miles a day." Two weeks later the guy calls his doctor and says: "I took off 20 pounds, and I've been running 10 miles a day." So the doctor says: "And how's your love-life?" The man answers: "I don't know, I'm 140 miles from there."

My girlfriend loves to shop. She'll buy anything that's marked down. Last week she bought a dress, handbag, and an escalator.

If, in the face of disappointment, adversity, and misfortune, you can maintain a smile and a word of cheer, some will call you an optimist. Most will call you a jerk.

One way to beat the system: Take a "Go Now, Pay Later" trip—but don't come back.

Things are tough. Ten percent of the people are on welfare, 30 percent on unemployment, and the rest on sedatives.

Some people have no sense of humor. I got in a taxicab with a woman driver. She said, "Where to?" I said, "Your place." So she took me to the garage.

A 58-year-old elephant fell into a trench and all efforts to get him out failed until someone paraded a young female elephant in front of him and out he came. Which proves that even at 58 an elephant never forgets.

It was so hot in Miami the other day the senior citizens were down to one sweater.

Doctors never listen. I called mine the other day and told him I had taken an overdose of aspirin. I said: "What do I do?" He said: "Take two aspirins and call me in the morning."

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

JENNIE DALEY: A BUSINESS DEAL

$1000 for a Husband

Jennie Daley would like to buy a husband for $1000 before July 2, 1976.

"I want the man to marry me for the money, nothing else," says Jennie, 23, a student at Portsmouth Polytechnic in England. "It will be strictly a business deal, no sex, no honeymoon, just a quick marriage followed by a quick divorce."

Jennie's problem is that she was born in Zambia and has a South African passport. Her visa to stay in Great Britain expires in July. She does not want to return to South Africa because of apartheid, which she opposes.

"It's tragic," she says, "that I should be put in this position, but I will have to leave England unless I find a British husband. I've asked about this sort of arrangement, and I've been told that 500 pounds ($1000) is a fair price for a husband. Divorce proceedings can begin at once, and after two years the marriage can be dissolved."

Jennie, who is majoring in computer sciences, has appealed over the local Portsmouth radio for a husband, and perhaps by this time she has found one.

Book Lists

Many of the books kids love to read—"Little Women," "Treasure Island," "The Arabian Nights" and the story of "Rip Van Winkle"—are not "approved" reading. Not, at least, in the "Guide to Non-Sexist Children's Books," by Judith Adell and Hilary Dole Klein. Why are these classics omitted? Because they depict women in traditional, and often uncomplimentary, roles.

Rip Van Winkle, for example, has "a shrewish wife whom we are all glad has burst a blood vessel," write publishers Jordan and Anita Miller. "Books like 'Little Women' show girls and young women only as extensions of men." And in "Treasure Island," they assert, "everything good and exciting happens to boys."

The new guidebook provides parents with a list of more than 400 fiction and non-fiction books, divided by grade level, which portray girls as heroines or as equals to boys. These books "treat boys and girls as people who have the same kinds of frailties and strengths," says actor and feminist Alan Alda in the introduction.

Mary Jane Anderson of the American Library Association says, "We encourage lists of this kind." But, she cautions, books excluded from the guidebook should also be in the library.

"Some groups in our society—blacks, Chicanos, feminists—have begun to use children's literature the way the moralists did 100 years ago—as a means to mold children's thoughts," she explains.

Fortunately, she says, parents and children still have the option to read what they want. But if any group begins to dictate which books a child should read, "we will run into serious problems."

Sad Students

A flood of depression has struck students at Lund University in southern Sweden. Last year, 53 of them took their own lives. Another 500 attempted suicide but failed. And 2000 went to psychiatrists for help. The principal motives were given as loneliness, failure in their studies and financial difficulties.

Bob Dylan Appraised

Bob Dylan is no longer the authentic voice of protest, reflecting the disenchantment of a disillusioned generation. He is merely a salesman of pop melodies.

That's the opinion of Marco D'Eramo, an Italian sociologist and journalist, writing in "Cultures," a publication of UNESCO.

D'Eramo, based in Paris, claims to have made a thorough study of Dylan's works for his thesis, "The Rhetorics of Protest," in which he writes: "He [Dylan] is now a variety act, a professional spinner of melodies—nothing more, nothing less."

D'Eramo claims that Dylan's career has plummeted sharply from the early '60's, when popularity polls rated the singer-composer directly behind President John F. Kennedy. "At age 34," D'Eramo writes, "he [Dylan] is already on the downgrade slope, exploiting the success he enjoyed formerly when he was at the height of his popularity.... He is no longer the spokesman of those young people who stormed American political life, fought for the civil rights of black people, revolted on the university campuses and saw Dylan as a prophet."

Today, D'Eramo concludes, Dylan has accepted his role in "the system." He is happy singing songs of domestic bliss and pastoral love.

No one, of course, stays young forever.

Drug Poll

Liquor may have reestablished itself on college campuses but other drug use remains high, especially during examination period. Academic pressures may have forced many "straight" students who would not ordinarily think of taking drugs to consume large numbers of uppers to get their work done.

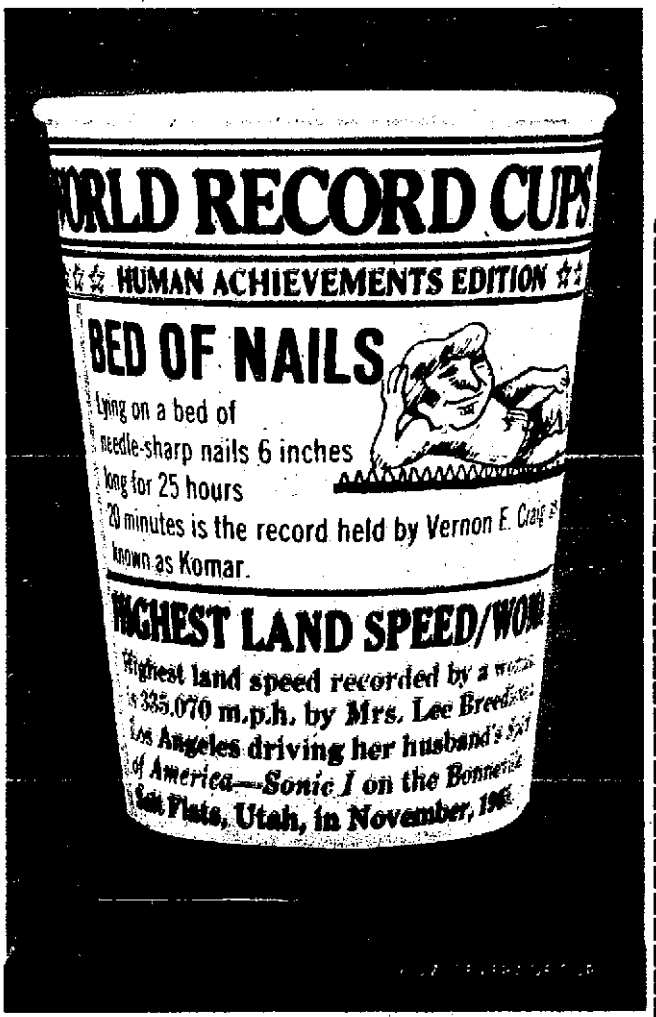

"There has been a big rise in amphetamines at Yale," states David Zweig of the Yale Daily News. "More and more students are staying up late and speeding to get good grades." The use of amphetamines is another product of academic pressure.

A recent survey of 811 Yale undergraduates found 78% had tried marijuana, 20% LSD, and 45% hashish. Other drugs used included cocaine, mescaline, and laughing gas.

Home fires kill 6000 a year in the U.S., but the number could be reduced if more homes had a new kind of reliable sensing device that blares at the first whiff of smoke, thus rousing a family that might wake up too late.

A New Fire Alarm For Your Home

by E. D. Fales Jr.

Night fires have always been among the most dangerous to human life because they strike when people are asleep.

Now, often fed by modern materials, night fires have become more deadly than ever. The vastly increased use of plastic furnishings and some fibers has produced a dramatic rise in deaths and injuries. At the present rate, 60,000 Americans will be killed and 3 million injured in home fires during the next 10 years.

Some plastics help bring on home fire casualties in two ways. Because of their use in wall coverings, carpeting, drapes and furniture, many fires no longer spread from room to room in the old familiar pattern. Instead, they often explode in bursts that engulf whole buildings before firemen arrive.

"We used to figure you needed at least two minutes' warning to escape a night fire," says Paul Sawin of the National Fire Protection Association. "Today when you wake up you may have 20 seconds."

Moreover, today's fires can also prove deadly when they don't flare up, but only smolder unnoticed. All such fires pour out deadly carbon monoxide. But today, to make matters worse, plastics-fed fires emit "chemical smoke" and invisible lethal fumes that can turn a home into a poison-gas factory while the occupants sleep on unaware of the peril.

Only a small fire

That may be what happened recently in Norwalk, Conn., when William Paulovic, his wife and two children died of fumes from a small living room fire that never spread and caused little property damage.

Usually the invisible fumes come first. Then comes the terrible chemical smoke—black, choking clouds that block the rescuers' vision. "We have to find victims by feel," says one fireman. "We pass our hands over the beds."

The suffocation danger is heightened in today's tight, "climate conditioned" homes where little fresh air enters. The oxygen is quickly used up, sometimes snuffing out the lives of the occupants before they even know there is a fire. Some 75 fumes can be emitted by polyvinyl chloride (PVC), a material used in curtains, carpets, furniture, packaging, drain pipes, wiring, shower curtains—even baby pants. Other plastics are used in insulation, paneling and paints.

Even the flame-retardant chemicals pose dangers. "When you force any fabric, such as a curtain or a rug, to burn slowly, it pours out more fumes," says one investigator. "And such fumes can asphyxiate you or even cause an explosion. So we trade one danger for another."

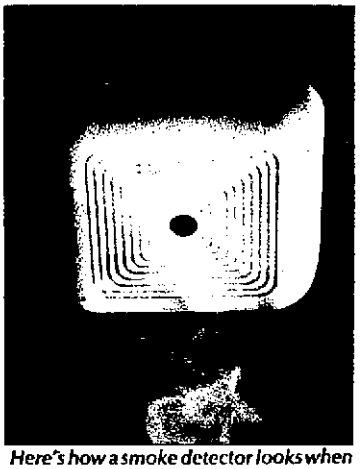

But if modern technology has increased the hazards of fires, it has also produced an ultrasensitive new warning device that can virtually erase the chance that you or your family will ever be trapped.

Uncanny ability

It's a remarkable gadget that has uncanny ability to know—sometimes within seconds—when fires start. It's not a "heat detector"—an older device which is usually hung directly over a possible fire source (such as a furnace or oven). It's more sophisticated—a first cousin to the fire-detection devices used in spaceships and nuclear plants.

Called an "electronic smoke detector" (ESD), it is an inexpensive ($25 to $50 and up) electric-powered device roughly the size of a candy box. A few costly ESD's appeared on the home market about 1970. Today there are 18 brands.

There are two basic types—photoelectric and ionization—but each contains a small leather-lunged horn intended to rouse the soundest sleeper. Most photoelectric ESD's contain a minute electric bulb (visible at night). If smoke enters, it scatters the light toward a photoelectric cell, triggering the alarm. The ionization devices utilize a tiny bit of radioactive material (less than a watch dial's) that "ionizes" air in a small pocket, causing a faint electric current to flow through the air itself. More sensitive than light, the current is disturbed if very fine (invisible) smoke enters. The interrupted current triggers the alarm. There is little difference between the two types in appearance or price. A device combining both methods is expected to reach the market in July. In addition, there are gas detectors today which sound an alarm when carbon monoxide forms.

Here's how a smoke detector looks when installed: Today there are 18 brands.

Some ESD's can send electric waves rushing through house wiring to touch off small "remote" horns in each bedroom. They are pocket-sized ($17.50 and up) plastic boxes that plug into any electric outlet.

Help from neighbors

In addition, "broadcasting" models (which may cost a few dollars extra) can simultaneously send signals over the outside utility wires and into your neighbors' homes to set off alarms there, too. Thus, if you have a fire, your neighbors know instantly and come rushing even before firemen arrive.

Experts warn that some ESD's are poor. It helps, they say, to be sure yours has an "FM" (Factory Mutual) or "UL" (Underwriters Laboratories) label.

Among the best customers for ESD's are scientists whose specialty is investigating fires. Richard Bright, who heads the U.S. Bureau of Standards' special Fire Protection Project, has installed five ESD's in his home. According to the bureau, a single ESD close to the ceiling outside your bedroom increases by 46 percent your chances of getting the precious two minutes' escape time. With an ESD on every floor, your chances go up to 86 percent.

His wife's pizza

One problem with the ESD's is their extreme sensitivity. Bright says ruefully that his ESD's went off when they were triggered by invisible fumes from a pizza his wife was cooking at 550° F.

But the risk of an occasional false alarm is worth taking, the scientists say. "Even a couple of false alarms a year are small price for your family's safety," says Jack Abbott of Factory Mutual.

U.S. Fire Administrator Howard D. Tipton estimates they could save eight out of every 10 persons who now die in night fires. He recommends them for all American homes. Laws requiring their use in new houses have been enacted in Ohio, Massachusetts and elsewhere. The Federal Housing Administration demands them in every new home it helps finance. Some insurance companies have begun to offer a slight cut in premium rates for homes with ESD's.

But the best reason for installing an ESD is basic: it may save your life one night.

Are you one of the "quiet ones" who should be a writer?

Often it's the quiet ones who have the most to say. Indeed, some of the finest novelists and poets, some of the most successful journalists and playwrights, are people of an essentially quiet nature.

If you are somewhat reserved in a crowd . . . a bit detached from others . . . shun small talk because you favor deeply felt ideas . . . you may well have the sensitivity that is the sign of a writer. You may be hiding a talent that could change your life!

Now there is a way to find out whether you are one of these fortunate people with talent in writing. Simply send for our Aptitude Test. It's free — there's no obligation. We'll grade it and tell you whether you have abilities that qualify you for further training.

Famous Writers School was created to help promising amateurs develop their talent so it means something — self-fulfillment, writing that sells, even a full-time career. The famous authors who founded the School have all had long and successful careers. Faith Baldwin, Rod Serling, Rudolf Flesch, Bergen Evans, Bruce Catton, Mignon Eberhart and Max Shulman are among those who wrote our textbooks, and their experience is passed along to you on every page.

The School is geared to your individual needs. You learn at home . . . in leisure time . . . at your own pace. Your instructors are all professional writers whose personal advice helps you learn the ropes toward realizing your goals.

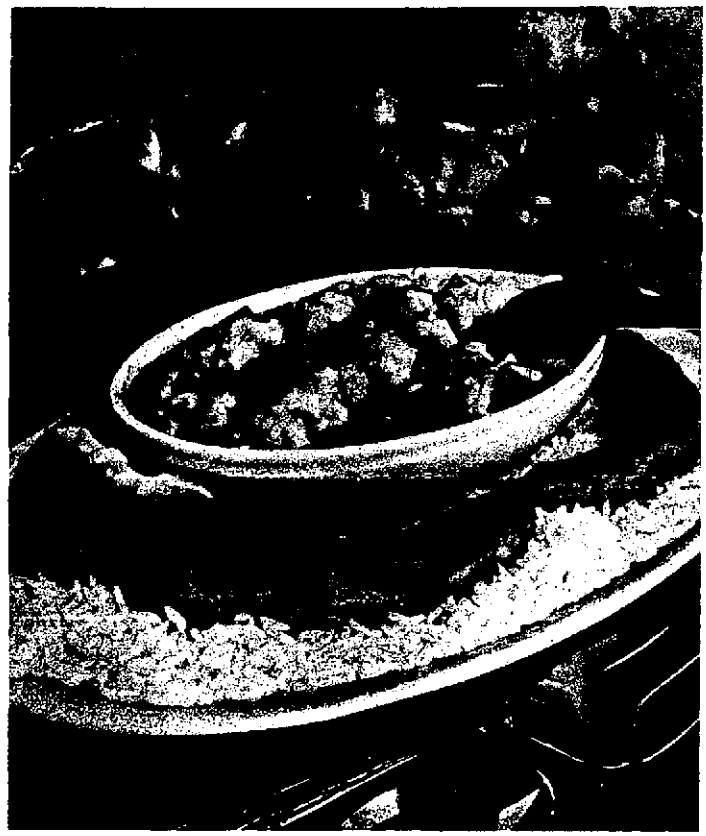

Here is what two West Coast students say:
Karen O'Connor Sweeney, who sold 21 pieces during the 19 months she was in the Course, writes: "For this success — thank you!" From Charles A. Lehman: "I got a check in the mail before I finished the Course. My work has now appeared in a dozen magazines."

If you've been keeping quiet about your talent, here's a chance to do something with it. Send for the Aptitude Test today — before you forget!

FOR A SPECIAL OCCASION

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Exotic is the word for this dish. It is a taste-tantalizing treat with a base of sliced rock lobster tails, made savory with onion, garlic, bay leaf, stewed tomatoes, plus the unusual addition of cubed sweet potatoes. Served with golden-brown sautéed bananas and fluffy rice, it has a tropical air and is pretty as a picture. Your guests will be enchanted!

There is no need for a first course, though you might like to serve a crisp green salad after the main course. For dessert select something not too rich or cloying —perhaps lemon sherbet garnished with grapes, crisp wafers and espresso.

EXOTIC ROCK LOBSTER AFRICAIN

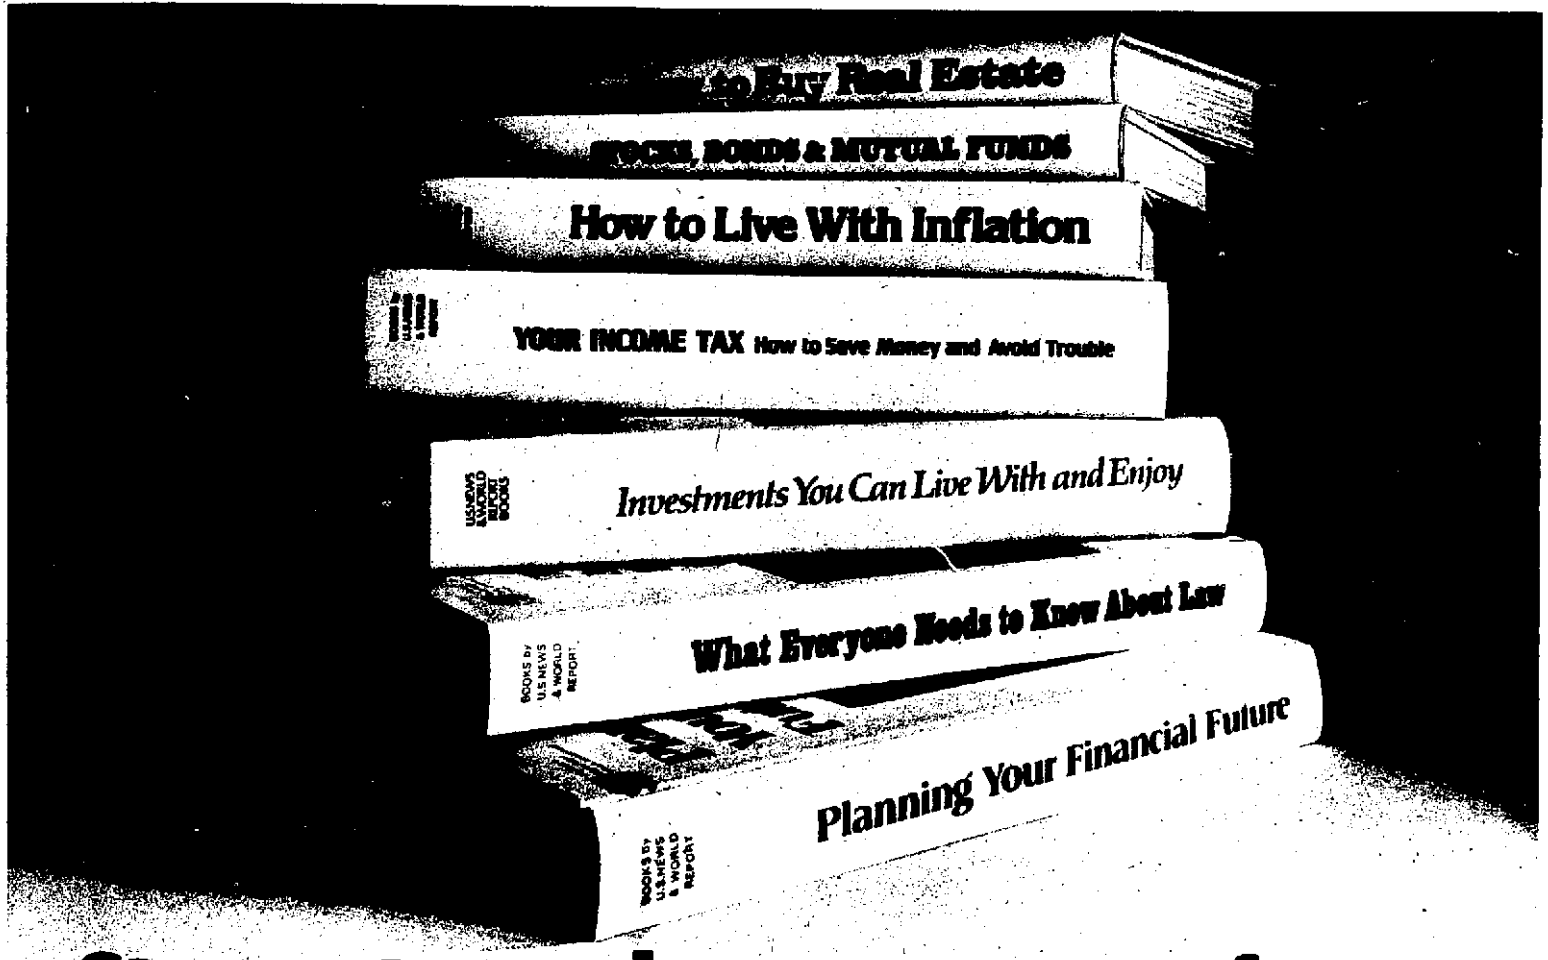

- 3 packages (8 oz. each) frozen rock lobster tails
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 small garlic clove, chopped
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cans (16 oz. each) stewed tomatoes
- 1 bay leaf
- 3 sweet potatoes, peeled and cubed
- 1 cup cream
- Salt and pepper
- 6 small bananas
- Hot fluffy rice

Parboil frozen rock lobster tails by dropping into boiling salted water. When water reboils, drain immediately, drench with cold water and cut away underside membrane. Remove meat; cut into crosswise slices.

Sauté onion and garlic in half the butter until golden. Sprinkle with flour. Add tomatoes, bay leaf and potatoes. Stir to blend. Cover; simmer until potatoes are tender. Remove bay leaf.

Add rock lobster pieces; simmer another five minutes. Add cream; bring to serving temperature, but do not boil. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Sauté bananas in remaining butter. Accompany the dish with bananas and rice. Makes six servings.

Step up toward a more secure future

... with these and other books in a valuable series on managing your money, prepared by U.S.News & World Report. Read here how to help yourself get started on a sound wealth-building program — then send for Volume 1 to read for 10 days free.

If you're out to build any kind of real wealth in this day and age, you've got a lot to contend with:

Inflation. Taxes. Legal considerations. Insurance needs. The ups and downs in the value of stocks and other kinds of investments.

To cope with it all, you need know-how — all the know-how you can get. Solid, reliable, factual information to help you keep more money out of what you earn... manage and invest it shrewdly... protect it against loss . . . and build it into an estate that offers you real security.

It is to provide you with this kind of know-how that the publishers of U.S.News & World Report have created the MONEY MANAGEMENT LIBRARY — a valuable series of books packed with authoritative money management advice to help you meet your goals.

Here is in-depth guidance on such subjects as "Planning Your Financial Future," "Your Income Tax," "Stocks, Bonds & Mutual Funds," "How to Buy Real Estate," "Investments You Can Live With and Enjoy," "How to Live With Inflation," and other important areas.

Read Volume 1 FREE for 10 days

To introduce you to this Library, we would like to send you the first book to read and use free for 10 days. It's on a subject which can dramatically influence your financial well-being for better or worse: the law.

Called "What Everyone Needs to Know About Law," this book discusses — in concise, easy-to-understand language — the various kinds of law that affect your life. For example, some of the things you'll learn are:

—How to use a merchant's Retail Installment Contract to find better buys

—The one legal document you should not keep in your safe-deposit box

—When you may legally break a lease

—How long you should save your income tax returns to "play it safe"

—How to see yourself as a jury would see you in court

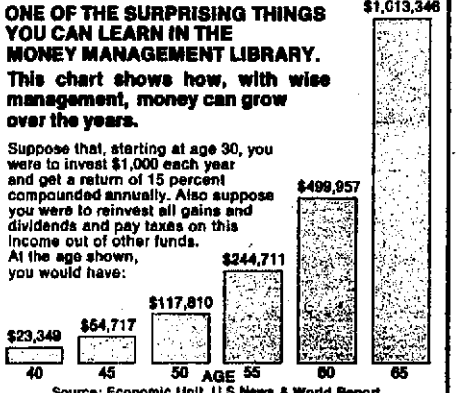

—How to spot costly problem areas in contracts before you sign them

And this is just a small sampling of what you'll learn in "What Everyone Needs to Know About Law." See coupon for details of our free-examination offer. Then mail it today.

ONE OF THE SURPRISING THINGS YOU CAN LEARN IN THE MONEY MANAGEMENT LIBRARY.

This chart shows how, with wise management, money can grow over the years.

Suppose that, starting at age 30, you were to invest $1,000 each year and get a return of 15 percent compounded annually. Also suppose you were to reinvest all gains and dividends and pay taxes on this income out of other funds. At the age shown, you would have:

Please send me "What Everyone Needs to Know About Law" for free examination. If I am not completely satisfied with it, I may return it within 10 days without owing anything, and that will be the end of it. Otherwise I will keep the book for only $5.95 (a saving of more than 25% off the suggested retail price of $7.95) plus shipping and handling. You will send me another volume in the series approximately every other month, to examine free and to keep, if I wish, at the same low price. There is no minimum number of books that I must buy, and I may cancel my subscription at any time simply by notifying you.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

NUCLEAR THREAT Four of America's leading nuclear experts gathered recently in Albert Einstein's former study at Princeton University. There they were recorded for "World in Action," a TV show produced by the Granada Television Company of England.

All four spoke of the growing threat of nuclear war throughout the world.

All four felt that small, politically unstable nations or desperate groups of fanatical terrorists will inevitably make and use the atom bomb unless the controls on the use of nuclear power are tightened.

The four men, each widely respected and each involved in nuclear research, are: Dr. George Kistiakowsky, President Eisenhower's science adviser and a pioneer in nuclear explosives; Dr. George Rathjens, former chief scientist for the Pentagon; Dr. Theodore Taylor, former nuclear weapons designer, and Herbert Scoville, former chief of scientific intelligence at the CIA.

"The risk that a nuclear war will break out is growing day by day," Scoville declared.

"I believe that nuclear war is probable," he added, "and that it will involve large numbers of deaths. By the year 2000, fatalities could run to one billion."

The quartet warned of two primary dangers: (1) the irresponsible international trade in nuclear fuel reprocessing plants necessary for fuel enrichment and the production of bombs, and (2) the growing stockpile of plutonium, a highly poisonous element in the manufacture of atomic bombs.

Explained Dr. Taylor: "There is the possibility that an aggressive or beleaguered country, or a deranged leader in charge of a national government, might seek a way out of their problems by using the most powerful weapon ever invented."

Dr. Rathjens suggested Israel, Taiwan, and South Africa as possible users. He might have suggested other countries as well.

The U.S., the Soviet Union, Great Britain, and France are the world's leading suppliers of nuclear power plants. The U.S. is the world's chief supplier of enriched uranium, without which sophisticated nuclear bombs are impossible to manufacture.

Fortunately, the U.S. government currently has a monopoly on the enrichment of such uranium. Of late, however, there has been talk in Congress of turning over this vital monopoly to private industry.

MONEY, NOT LOVE Frenchwomen used to kill because of love, because men betrayed them, because they were jealous. The crime of passion is a traditional ingredient of French literature. But crimes of passion are no longer the specialty of Frenchwomen betrayed.

Dr. Susanne Troisier, chief prison medical inspector, recently studied women in French jails. She reports that women in France still kill--but more frequently for money than for love. The crime of passion, she says, is virtually passé. One in every four female prisoners Troisier studied in jail had been incarcerated for fraud.

FASHION TREND For the past 10 years women have been dressing more and more like men. So claims Gilbert Feruch, one of the top tailors in Paris. Feruch makes suits for Elizabeth Taylor, Pauline de Rothschild, Liza Minnelli, many of the jet-setters.

French dress designers say that clothes which can't be worn by both sexes are out of style.

Yves Saint-Laurent shows gentlemen's suits in his collection on the theory that women buy them because it gives them a feeling of power or equality. French psychiatrist Jean Claude Meyer thinks the trend is ridiculous. "Women," he declares, "are simply not built for suits. They should remain women--and men should remain men."

Marlene Dietrich started wearing men's suits in the 1930's.

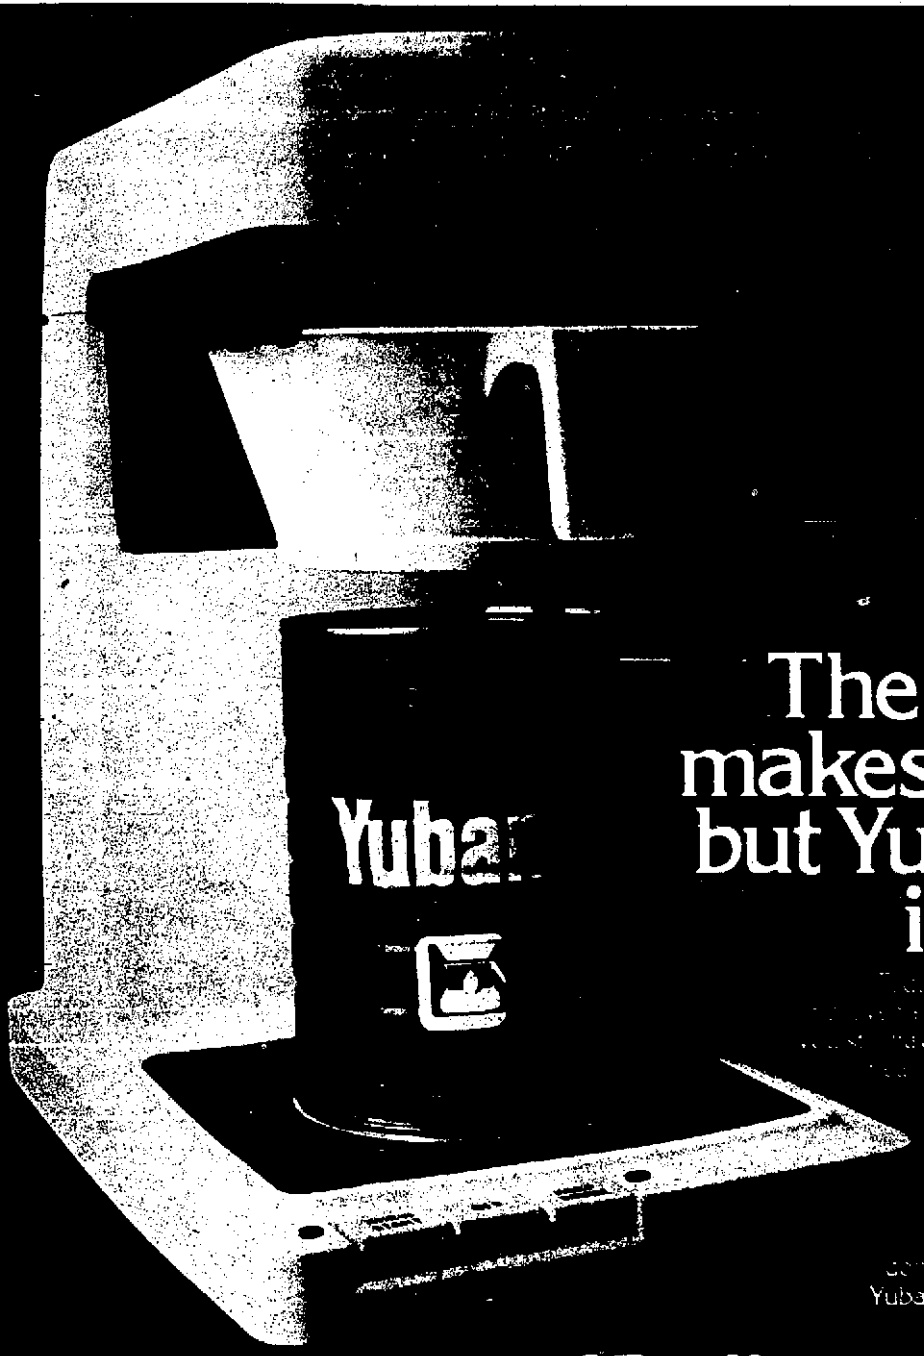

CONCORDE SCHEDULE British Airways plans to start commercial Concorde flights between Heathrow Airport, London, and Dulles Airport, outside of Washington, D.C., on May 24th.

The Concorde has been banned from Kennedy Airport, New York, at least for the time being, so British Airways and Air France will concentrate on the transatlantic run to Dulles.

The British Concorde will fly to Dulles each Saturday, returning the next day. By September it is expected to fly three round-trip flights a week.

The fare will be around $700 one way.

HOW THE SOVIETS USE CUBA The Soviet spy apparatus is now using Cuban freighters to sneak their spies into Hong Kong.

According to the South China Morning Post: "The Cubans are being used to do the Russians' dirty work. There are Russian KGB men on board almost every Cuban ship that has entered Hong Kong in the past four years."

If the Soviets are so eager to infiltrate Hong Kong with their agents, why don't they bring them in aboard Soviet ships? That's exactly what they used to do until 1972, when a group of Hong Kong's Special Branch detectives discovered and smashed a Russian spy-ring.

This prompted the KGB to alter tactics and place its spies on Cuban vessels where they masquerade as Cuban seamen. The Soviets have also trained a number of Cubans as KGB spies.

Why does the KGB want to infiltrate Hong Kong? Because the Crown Colony is next door to the People's Republic of China and serves as a listening and departure post for agents.

To date, Cuba is the only Communist country which has established official diplomatic representation in Hong Kong.

MALE MIDWIVES British babies will be delivered by male midwives in another year or so.

Britain is setting up a couple of schools for men who want to deliver babies. Under the 1951 Midwives Act, women only were specified for that position, but it is now against the law in Britain as it is in the U.S. to discriminate against a job-seeker on the basis of sex.

The new ruling has made Norman Imms, a father of three children, particularly happy. For years Mr. Imms from Peterlee, County Durham, has tried to enroll as a student midwife, but hospitals have consistently turned him down. No more.

SEAN CONNERY

CONNERY GOES POLITICAL Sean Connery, who earned fame and fortune as Agent 007 in the James Bond movies, is fighting for an independent Scotland. Connery, a tax exile whose official residence is now Marbella, Spain, wants his native Scotland to become a tax paradise, sort of like Switzerland.

"I believe," he says, "Scotland would be better off as an independent nation. If the Scottish National Party [SNP] could come to power they could nationalize the oil fields in the North Sea and the banks."

Connery is one of the leading financial supporters of the SNP and has guaranteed $1 million to the Scottish Educational Trust Foundation.

TV DATA Here's a batch of TV statistics you may find interesting: about 97% of all U.S. households now have TV sets. About 75% of these are color sets. There are around 715 commercial TV stations in this country, about 200 of them UHF.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS' RISING FEE Should you plan to climb Mt. Everest, be advised that the government of Nepal has raised its climbing fee to approximately $1200 per expedition.

NEW IQ QUESTION Does intelligence depend on genetics, race, class, income, environment--or should the number of children in a family be included in that vital question?

A study conducted by Robert B. Zajonc, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, and his colleague Gregory Markus suggests that the fewer children in a family, the more probability that the children will possess higher intelligence quotients.

Zajonc and Markus suggest that a child's rate of mental development is influenced by the amount of adult knowledge he or she shares. They contend that a child's intelligence tends to expand more rapidly when parental knowledge is not shared by two or more children.

If the theory is correct, "only children" should score the highest IQ's.

CLOTHES FOR HIRE How many men own tails or a tuxedo or a costume for a ball? The answer is relatively few -- especially in Europe.

As a result Moss Brothers in London has become the largest and oldest clothes rental establishment in the world. It boasts 37 branches, employs 800 people, and according to its chief, Montagu Moss, "We rent everything from a magistrate's robe to an ordinary raincoat."

The concern has been serving the British, including royalty, for 150 years and prides itself on offering a wide range of sizes and on keeping its stock up-to-date.

"You might say," Moss points out, "that we offer borrowed elegance at reasonable prices." An evening gown for three nights will rent for $32, a full dress suit, top hat, white tie and tails for $24, a dark suit for a funeral for about $16.

Ski clothes, riding habits, shooting outfits -- all these are rented at prices that make rental preferable to ownership.

Do you need roughage?

Roughage is important because it retains essential water to form the bulk that moves waste material through your system.

But, unfortunately, roughage is processed out of so much of the food we eat, many of us don't get enough of it.

Without sufficient roughage in your diet, you may suffer from constipation.

Here's where Serutan can help you.

Serutan is the natural ingredient laxative that contains a rich source of roughage. It has the capacity to absorb over 20 times its weight in water. But, unlike certain foods containing harsh roughage, Serutan forms gentle bulk. Your intestinal wastes remain soft and moist and they pass through your system more rapidly.

Try Serutan. You'll be very comfortable with it.

Our plans affect you. You can affect our plans.

Public Participation founded this nation. And Public Participation is needed now. This Thursday, May 20, there will be important public hearings sponsored by the Sanitation Districts of Los Angeles County and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). By reading this, then letting us hear from you, either in person or by letter, you'll have helped guide your government to a decision that will affect you and nearly 4 million of your neighbors through the year 2000. It's an important decision, one we'll all have to live with.

Why should sewers interest you? Because your land, air, water and pocketbook interest you.

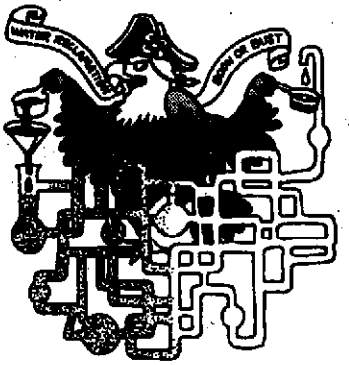

We need a wastewater management plan to serve a large portion of Los Angeles County through the year 2000. If you live within the area served by the County Sanitation Districts (see map), the plan will affect you. And it will also affect energy consumption, water conservation, public health, land use planning, air quality, the ecology, and your pocketbook. And that's why we invite you to a public hearing. You have a right to help form a plan of action. A right to be heard. But first, a little background.

Today: Serving 3,650,000 people.

We convey, treat and discharge about 415 million gallons of wastewater (sewage) daily. We service a network of over 1,000 miles of large trunk sewers. And to connect users to the trunk sewers takes over 7,000 miles of smaller sewers. Currently we operate and maintain six treatment plants. Pipes, pumps—and treatment plants all working together. Our system is one of the largest in the world today. To understand how it works—and the problems we face tomorrow—you'll have to understand (gulp!) what happens to wastewater after it reaches a sewer.

Wastewater: Repulsive... or a resource?

Drinking water starts out clean and pure. Once used, whether by industry, (historically about 1/3 of the flow) or residents, it has to be cleaned up and then disposed of...somewhere. The real questions start to crop up here...how clean is clean, where do we treat it, where do we put it? Currently the Sanitation Districts utilize two differing systems of treatment and disposal.

Coastal vs. Inland

Right now four-fifths of our wastewaters go to one coastal plant, it's one of the largest in the world—our Joint Water Pollution Control Plant, in Carson. The Carson plant provides primary treatment to some 335 million gallons of wastewater daily. Primary treatment consists of settling tanks which remove solids by gravity. The removed solids are stabilized by digestion and some are recycled—and sold commercially as nitrohumus or organic soil conditioners. After primary treatment and chlorination, the water is sent two miles out into the ocean off Palos Verdes, through two underwater pipes (one 7-1/2 and the other 10 feet in diameter) and discharged at a depth of 200 feet. There the ocean continues the purification process.

Importantly, our coastal plant creates, captures, and uses energy generated from biological digestion...it currently produces as much energy as it consumes! A consideration of growing importance, especially when you know that it takes the equivalent of a 30 watt bulb burning 24 hours a day, everyday, in every home in the District, just to treat wastewaters.

The remaining one-fifth of our wastewater is treated and discharged differently. At our five inland plants the water receives primary and then secondary treatment—biological action purifies the water after most of the solids are removed. This secondary treated wastewater has up to 95% of the solids removed.

Inland treatment provides reusable water, currently one-third of it is reused for irrigation or replenishment of ground water supplies. In effect, wastewater is recycled. The remainder of the water flows down the San Gabriel River and Rio Hondo River Flood Control Channels to the ocean.

That, very briefly, is the way the system works—today.

Tomorrow's System

Our existing collection, treatment and disposal network is a good one. But it doesn't meet recently enacted Federal and State standards. So, like many districts around the country, we've already begun adding to our treatment of wastewaters. Construction is underway, many of the improvements will be in operation by 1977.

Clean water is costly water

Improvements already underway will cost some $181 million for construction through completion. A lot of money.

And while Federal and State agencies will pay 87-1/2% of the construction costs, your County Sanitation Districts will pay 100% of the operation and maintenance costs for the improved facilities...adding six or seven dollars a year to your sewer bill. While these decisions have already been made, we want you to know what you'll be getting for your money.

Coastal plant improvements

Our large coastal plant, now providing primary treatment to 335 million gallons of wastewater daily, will, by 1977, be providing advanced primary treatment. We'll be taking out 80% of the solids. Under previous treatment methods some solids have built up on the ocean floor immediately adjacent to the outfall pipe; by 1977 the deposits should stop and the build-up reverse itself. A distinct improvement.

Another improvement will come with the addition of secondary (biological) treatment at our Coastal plant. The first module, designed to secondarily treat 100 million gallons a day, will soon be under construction. This will reduce solids discharged to the ocean by 40 tons a day. Secondary treatment also will further reduce the amounts of heavy metals and chlorinated hydrocarbons (like DDT) in the wastewater before discharge to the ocean.

Altogether, the improvements to the coastal plant mean that a greater degree of treatment will occur prior to discharge. Let's now take a brief look at what's planned "upstream."

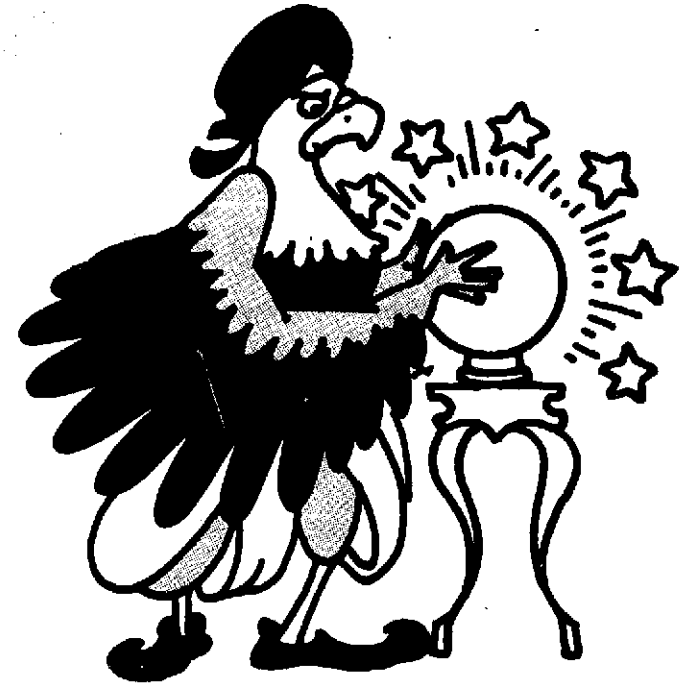

Inland plant improvements

We've told you about primary and secondary treatment. Our inland plants will be required by the new laws to provide tertiary treatment. That means the construction of a sophisticated filtering system at each of the plants. Basically, what primary treatment doesn't settle out or secondary treatment digest out of the system, tertiary treatment filters out. In a way we're the victims of our own success. As we've increased the quality and quantity of wastewaters discharged by inland plants we've made the San Gabriel and Rio Hondo River channels more appealing for recreation. To not jeopardize the public's health, the State Water Resources Control Board has mandated the construction of filters at each plant.

That's where we've been and where we're going.

Now, on to where we've got to be.

If you've read this far, you may think you know more about "sewers" than you wanted to know. We've told you a lot about how your Sanitation Districts have worked. But now we have new, urgent, decisions to make, now we want you to tell us how you want the system to work in the future, through the year 2000. We want to hear from you. So read on.

Water reclamation: Boon or Bust?

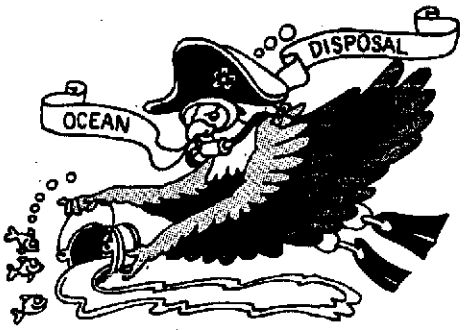

The ocean plant reclaims no water. The inland plants treat their water and release 70% to flood channels, 30% for water table replenishment or irrigation. In a sense, either inland use is a reuse; the water discharged to flood control channels provides recreation and a desirable flowing action during dry weather.

Federal and State agencies also believe that reuse is an important conservation objective. And there are many forms of reuse—including irrigation, industrial uses and water table replenishment. Early studies indicate that reuse in Los Angeles County would decrease energy consumption and costs...every gallon reused is one less gallon to be pumped to our area. And remember, water is a basic resource. History tells us that any resource, no matter how plentiful it appears, can be abused. And today's abundant resources have a way of becoming scarce in the future. But water reuse has some disadvantages. Use of reclaimed water may require a new distribution system—there could be construction impacts. Would reclamation spawn growth in the area, bringing social and air pollution

Alternative: Emphasize ocean disposal.

Under this alternative we would plan no additional capacity for our inland treatment plants. Instead, we will upgrade our Carson plant to full secondary treatment. Discharge will continue to the ocean through existing outfall pipes. By the year 2000 this single plant would provide secondary treatment to 400 million gallons a day; the remaining 100 million gallons a day would receive tertiary treatment at inland plants.

It is not now nor will it be practical to reclaim treated waters from the Carson plant. Because it receives heavier industrial input the salt or mineral concentrations are too high to permit reuse without desalting, a prohibitively expensive process. Also the low elevation of the plant would dictate expensive and energy-consuming power to transport the water to potential users. If this alternative is adopted the amount of treated wastewater available for reuse will remain at current levels through the year 2000.

Impacts

1 Energy.	Under Ocean Disposal Emphasis substantial amounts of energy will continue to be recovered during the treatment process. Gross energy use for the total system is estimated at 484 million kilowatt hours a year. Net energy use is estimated at 213 million kilowatt hours a year at probable levels of reuse.
2 Water Quality.	Full secondary treatment. Total discharge to the ocean: 400 million gallons a day. Swimming and shellfish standards met by chlorination levels same as inland discharge alternative. Virus control, suspended solids removal and chlorinated hydrocarbon reductions, same as inland discharge alternative. 100 million gallons a day available inland for reuse.
3 Growth and Air Quality.	These are related impact areas as growth historically has brought more air pollution. Population growth projections used in these plans assume a condition of no growth which is consistent with current population trends in the districts. The system's direct emissions will be equal under both alternatives, contributing between 1/10 and 1/2 of one percent of total Air Basin emissions through the year 2000. Construction will create 150 permanent jobs, 7,500 construction jobs, 45,000 peripheral jobs.
4 Costs.	Capital: $368 million (87-1/2% Federally and State funded). Operations and maintenance: $23.4 million yearly (100% locally funded). Increase in average annual sewer taxes and assessments by $16 per household, raising the total to $31. $9–10 million additional from industrial users.
5 Other Impacts.	Construction nuisances: 8 to 28 miles of urban trenching. Public Health: Improvement. Biological: No known areas of special significance are threatened. Archaeological: No impact on known sites. Historical: No impact on known sites. Paleontological: Possibility of uncovering artifacts, adverse impacts can be avoided. Rare or endangered species: No significant impact. Recreational: If channel flow decreased because more of the 100 million gallons a day was reused that could alter recreational uses in the channels.

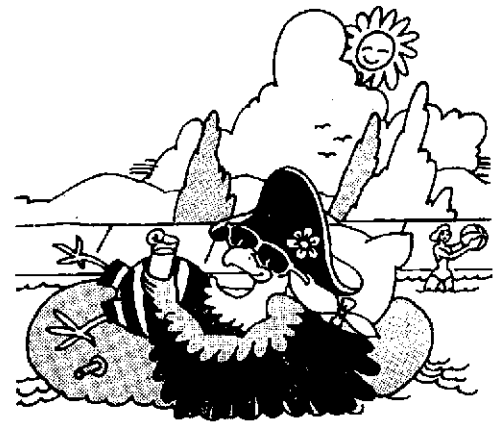

impacts? Then there's the money needed for reclamation. Most of it up front—while the benefits are long range. Not only that, users have to want the reusable water. How quickly that market develops is another good question. Lastly, there's Public Health. What happens if minute quantities of chemicals survive tertiary treatment and somehow ultimately enter a municipal water supply? No one knows for sure—there are no Federal or State standards. Confused? You're not alone. But try to sort out those arguments and give us your ideas about reclamation. Either on page 7 or on May 20.

Over the past few years, we've examined dozens of alternative plans for wastewater management. We've held public workshops to get more input. And now we have a final two important choices before us. Below, you'll find our best arguments for emphasizing ocean disposal in the future. And our best arguments for emphasizing inland disposal in the future. Read them carefully—please. Then let us hear from you.

Alternative: Emphasize inland disposal.

Under this alternative we would plan no additional capacity for our ocean treatment plant in Carson. Instead we would expand the capacities of our five inland plants. By the year 2000 these plants would provide tertiary treatment for 200 million gallons a day; our plant at Carson would provide secondary treatment to the remaining 300 million gallons a day, discharged to the ocean.

The increased flow of waters treated inland are practical to reclaim. Because the wastewaters come largely from suburban, residential areas they're lower in mineral salt concentrations. No expensive desalting processes would have to be employed. Additionally, because these plants are located at higher elevations, and scattered throughout the potential reuse area, distribution costs and energy consumption would fall within practical limits. Under this alternative, water for available reuse would increase 100% over the ocean disposal alternative.

Impacts

1 Energy.	Under Inland Disposal emphasis maximum amounts of energy will be recovered during the treatment process. Gross energy use for the total system is estimated at 500 million kilowatt hours a year. Net energy use is estimated at 154 million kilowatt hours a year, at probable levels of reuse.
2 Water Quality.	Full secondary treatment. Total discharge to the ocean: 300 million gallons a day. Swimming and shellfish standards met by chlorination levels, same as ocean discharge alternative. Virus control, suspended solids removal and chlorinated hydrocarbon reductions, same as ocean discharge alternative. 200 million gallons of reclaimed water a day available for reuse. Under this alternative ammonia control on the river system may be more important in the 1980's.
3 Growth and Air Quality.	These are related impact areas as growth historically has brought more air pollution. Population growth projections used in these plans assume a condition of no growth which is consistent with current population trends in the districts. The system's direct emissions will be equal under both alternatives, contributing between 1/10 and 1/2 of one percent of total Air Basin emissions through the year 2000. Construction will create 150 permanent jobs, 7,500 construction jobs, 45,000 peripheral jobs.
4 Costs.	Capital: $373 million (87-1/2% Federally and State funded). Operations and maintenance: $25.5 million, yearly (100% local). Increase in average annual sewer taxes and assessments by $17 per household, raising the total to $32. $10 million additional from industrial users. Reuse distribution costs would be separate.
5 Other Impacts.	Construction nuisances: up to 13 miles of urban trenching. Possibly a major reuse distribution system. Public Health: Improvement. Biological: No known areas of special significance are threatened. Archaeological: No impact on known sites. Historical: No impact on known sites. Paleontological: Less possibility of uncovering artifacts than under Ocean Emphasis Alternative. Rare or Endangered Species: Increases in the flow for the San Gabriel River could, in principle, affect the feeding habitat of the California Least Tern. Recreational: The initial increased flow to inland flood channels could alter recreational uses of the channels.

Decisions, decisions, decisions– here's where we need your help.

As you've seen, no matter what plan we adopt there will be environmental and other impacts. The County Sanitation Districts and the Environmental Protection Agency have written a report assessing these impacts, each County library has a copy. The Environmental Protection Agency has been, and will continue to be very much involved in all aspects of our plans that touch upon their Federal responsibilities, including among others air and water pollution, drinking water purity, and waste disposal management. No matter what plan we choose, we'll impact all of those areas—and more.

What do you want to get, what are you willing to give?

As you know from reading the preceding pages, we're faced with important trade-offs. Our job is to lessen (mitigate) impacts. To get one thing (purer discharge water, for instance) we have to give up other things (money and energy, as examples). And that's where you come in. What are you willing to give up? And what are you willing to give?

There are no "right" answers. But your answer, regardless of what it is, has importance to us. Because it will help guide us to the plan that's best for most of us.

An invitation from John D. Parkhurst

Your County Sanitation Districts are made up of twenty-seven Districts, the first established in 1926. The Districts include a total of 72 cities and are governed by a Board of Directors comprised of the mayors and county supervisors within the Districts' boundary. Our operation under a single, unified administration has permitted the development of a qualified technical staff with years of experience, able to address regional waste management problems. We regularly host tours of others in our occupation—many of whom come from around the world to tour our plants and talk to our experts.

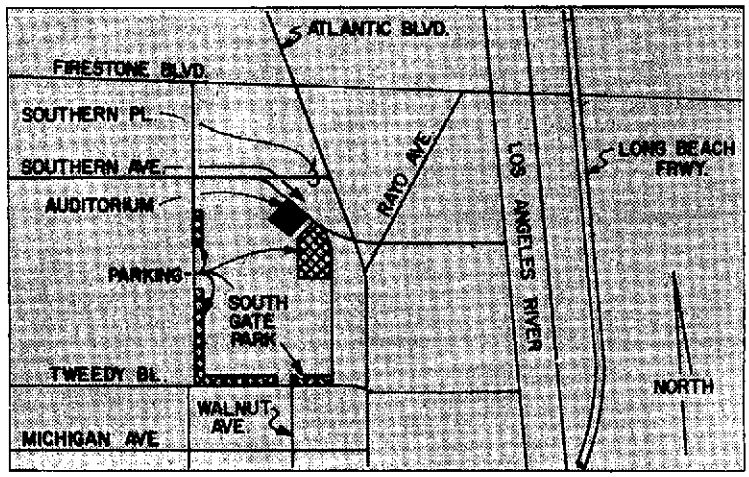

The importance of the projects discussed on these pages cannot be overemphasized. The task is monumental.

All of our technical expertise, all of our experience, mean nothing if we embark upon a plan that does not serve the best interests of the people we serve. You, in person or by letter, can help assure a brighter future for yourself and your fellow citizens. Give us just three hours of your time, just this once.

John D. Parkhurst
CHIEF ENGINEER AND GENERAL MANAGER
SANITATION DISTRICTS OF LOS ANGELES COUNTY

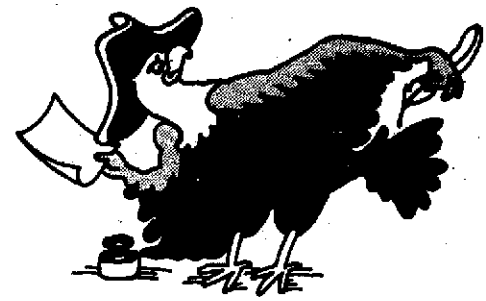

We want to hear from you May 20th

We've scheduled two Public Hearings, at 9:30 A.M. and 7:00 P.M., this Thursday, May 20, in the South Gate Auditorium, 4900 Southern Avenue, South Gate. At either hearing all you have to do is fill out a brief form telling us you want to be heard. Your comments will become part of the official hearing record. And your contribution will affect our plans...to the year 2000.

For more information, call (213) 699-7411, and ask for "Hearings."
8:00 A.M.– 4:00 P.M., Weekdays

If you can't attend a hearing, you can still be heard.

Write us. If you've read this far you know how important your opinion is. So, if for any reason you can't attend a hearing, take a few minutes and let us hear from you by letter. You can address yourself to one issue or to all of them. Tell us as much, or as little, as you want. On balance it's a small investment. Write—right now, please.

Old killers poised for L.B. dance of death

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Southland cities are in a race against time to beef up or tear down the unreinforced masonry buildings that will be mass killers in the next major earthquake.

Long Beach has a chance of winning. But in most cities the race will probably be lost, because city officials are just beginning to acknowledge that they're in a race, like it or not.

And no one is sure when time will run out and a major temblor will strike. Earthquake prediction is still an infant science.

"Most cities are doing nothing to get rid of these buildings," said Robert Olson, executive director of the state's Seismic Safety Commission. "I'm afraid that they'll eventually pay a heavy toll in both money and human misery."

Edward M. O'Connor, chief of Long Beach's Building and Safety Department, said that the Palmdale Bulge, recent earthquake predictions, and earthquakes in Guatamala and Italy, have made more people think about quake hazards in their own cities.

"But we've always known that we'll have another major quake and a lot of smaller ones," he said. "We've known since 1933 that these old buildings will be death traps in a major quake. People just tend to forget about it when it's not in the news."

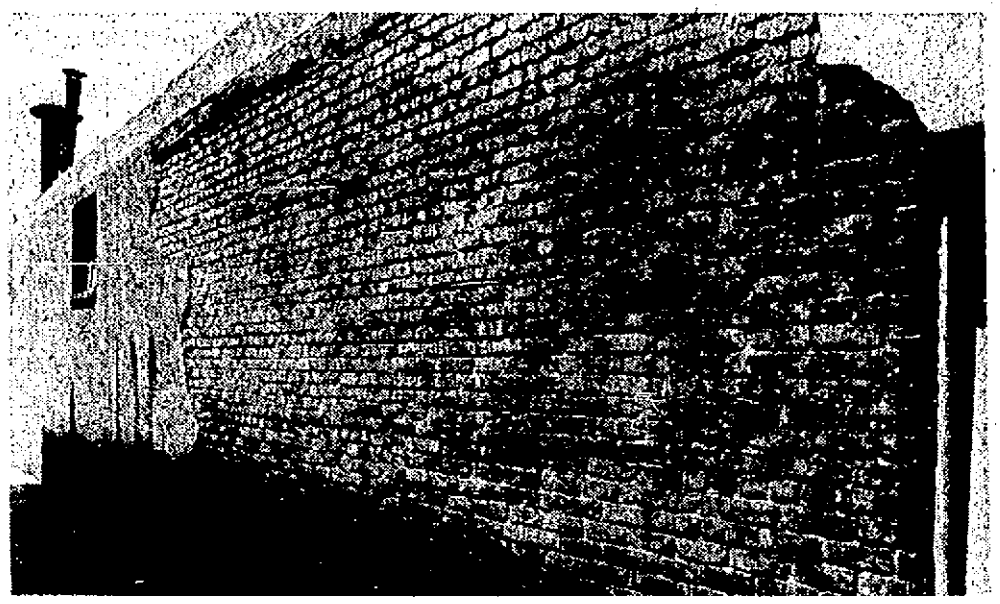

Anyone who has seen O'Connor's films of downtown Long Beach dancing in the throes of the disastrous 1933 temblor would have a hard time forgetting about it, however.

Walls of unreinforced brick buildings smashed into city boulevards, parapets toppled off buildings, and scores of people died of head injuries from chunks of the structures they'd trusted—or taken for granted—for years.

It was the same story in Santa Barbara in 1925, Bakersfield in 1952 and parts of the San Fernando Valley in 1971.

Although it is possible for modern buildings to collapse with enough shaking—the soil beneath them can betray them—it's the pre-1934 unreinforced masonry struc-

Hughes may have died 'poor'

Court order ties up assets

By DONALD L. BARLETT and JAMES B. STEELE
Knight News Service

When billionaire industrialist Howard Hughes died April 5 he did not have the legal authority to give away one penny of the assets of his wholly owned Summa Corp.

In fact, Hughes was barred by an obscure court order—and his estate remains barred by that same order—from distributing the assets of Summa to charity, relatives, friends, business associates or anyone at all.

The court order—handed down by a Delaware state judge in 1962 and upheld by the Delaware Supreme Court—placed all Hughes' stock in Hughes Tool Co. under the control of the Delaware court.

In 1972 Hughes sold off Hughes Tool Co., which makes the famous oil-drilling bit invented by his father, and reincorporated all his other interests under the name Summa Corp. It is those other interests that are now enjoined by the Delaware order.

That little-known order has been in effect now for more than 14 years and could remain in effect until a long and bitter legal battle between Hughes, and now his estate, and Trans World Airlines, a company he once controlled, finally is resolved.

That could take years. In the meantime, Summa's assets cannot be given away, notwithstanding the provisions of any will or probate-court action directing the distribution of Hughes' estate.

Summa Corp. is the wholly owned holding company through which Hughes controlled his gambling casinos and hotels in Las Vegas and Reno, massive land holdings in Nevada and California, a helicopter-manufacturing plant, gold and silver mining properties, Hughes Airwest, a Las Vegas television station and other assorted investments. (While Hughes maintained some assets in his own name, the bulk of his estate was and is held by Summa Corp.)

The existence of the 14-year-old Delaware court order—and its effect on the Hughes estate—was turned up last week by the Philadelphia Inquirer in a continuing investigation of the Hughes business empire, a probe that was started in February 1975.

"Buddy, can you spare a quarter?"

Staff Drawing by ERWIN DeGROOT

For TWA, which has been in a legal battle with Hughes since 1961, there is a bittersweet irony in the Delaware court order.

Three years ago, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned a federal court decision in New York City that had resulted in a judgment against Hughes in favor of TWA.

The Supreme Court decision was long hailed as a significant Hughes legal victory. In fact, it turned on a legal technicality and had nothing to do with the merits of the case.

Since the decision, TWA has been quietly pursuing a parallel case in the Delaware state court, a case that ultimately will test the company's claims for damages against Hughes.

As long as that lawsuit is proceeding—the one in New York lasted nearly 12 years—TWA is in a position to tie up Summa assets.

If TWA should ultimately win the Delaware case and a judgment is entered, then the airline the eccentric billionaire once owned could in fact become a major beneficiary of the Hughes estate.

Reagan tax data 'hazy'

'Paid less than most'

By EILEEN SHANAHAN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California almost certainly paid no federal income tax in 1970, despite an income in excess of $73,000. In at least two other recent years, he also appears to have paid less federal income tax than most people with a small fraction of his income.

These conclusions are based on an analysis of information about his income and taxes for the years

EXCLUSIVE

1970 through 1975 that Reagan has made public since the start of his formal campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

The data he released do not contain enough details to make it possible to determine with certainty either the exact amount of income he had in any of those years or the amount of income tax he paid for any year except 1975.

Reagan refused last week, through his press aide, James H. Lake, a request from the New York Times that he provide this information.

President Ford, Reagan's competitor for the Republican presidential nomination, has made much more detailed disclosures of his financial and tax records. They show that Ford paid substantial amounts of federal income tax in each of the last 10 years.

Analysis of the limited information that Reagan has so far made public indicates that what he has done is within the law. It appears that he has made investments that

Wild parties led to Mayer

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Long Beach Planning Director Ernest Mayer, Jr., free on $25,000 bond after his arrest Friday for allegedly accepting a $25,141 bribe paid in gold coins, was in seclusion Saturday in Capistrano Beach with a girl friend.

And as the suspended city official hid out, another facet of his continuing story unfolded, an angle that also had to do with pleasures of several sorts.

Parties at Mayer's Marina Pacifica "rendezvous and party"-condominium— "parties tending to be ribald," were mentioned in an affidavit filed by a district attorney's investigator before Mayer's arrest.

But even before that information, word of swinging private parties attended by city officials had come to the police department's intelligence unit. And it was this information—not anything to do with alleged bribes solicited by Mayer from two Long Beach architects—that was the basis for what City Manager John Mansell believed was a call to the district attorney's office in early December asking for an investigation.

Lt. Ray Henry, head of the intelligence division, Saturday told the Independent, Press-Telegram his recollection of the matter.

"In either late November or December I received word of conversations by Mr. Mayer in which he reportedly had told several persons that he had parties to which city officials were invited. I cannot reveal the nature of these parties but it was such that I relayed the information to Chief Ralph Kortz and to City Manager John Mansell at that time," he said.

"I remembered nothing further about the matter until Friday when I reported to Mr. Mansell after Mr. Mayer had been arrested. At that time he was in his office with Jack O'Neil (Assistant City Manager)

Oklahoma all for Reagan

By WALTER STOVALL
Associated Press

Ronald Reagan, criticizing Ford administration farm policies Saturday at the Oklahoma Republican Convention, won all the state's national convention delegates, while President Ford rolled across Michigan on a train in quest of votes in Tuesday's GOP presidential primary in his home state.

Democratic frontrunner Jimmy Carter rested at his home in Plains, Ga., as he does every weekend, while other Democrats campaigned without letup in their attempts to derail Carter's drive for the presidential nomination.

Reagan spoke to Oklahoma Republicans just a few hours before the convention voted to give him the second half of their 36 votes at the GOP national convention. Eighteen delegates were chosen last week at district meetings, and 18 more were selected Saturday. All 36 are pledged to Reagan.

"Having told the grain farmers for months to plant fence-to-row, fence-to-row," Reagan said in a keynote speech, "the administration clamped an embargo on future grain sales to the Soviet Union. During the weeks of that embargo, American farmers lost sales of approximately $2 billion.

Marina Pacifica plans to fix cracking floors

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

The Marina Pacifica Corporation will spend more than $700,000 to prevent further cracking of the floors at the huge condominium complex in Long Beach.

The $24 million, 570-unit complex on Second Street was designed and contructed to now-outdated Uniform Building Code specifications and it was not built with enough support "in some places, so they are having to go back and beef up the pilings," according to Mel Carpenter, executive director of the Southern California Regional Planning Commission.

Carpenter said "From a layman's view, there is just too much weight on the first floor in some places and that is causing the cracks in the concrete."

Dale Curtis, owner of Curtis Engineering Corp. in San Diego, who was hired by Marina Pacifica Corporation several months ago to

$1.5-million medical award

A 30-year-old Norwalk woman has won more than $1.5 million in what was believed the largest medical malpractice judgment in Orange County history.

By unanimous vote, the 12 jurors found Drs. H. Rudolph Alsleben and Charles Henderson and their Alsleben Clinic guilty of malpractice in their administration of the drug EDTA to Patricia Beverly Gail Phillips. They ordered the two doctors and the clinic to pay the Norwalk woman—who is also blind and diabetic—a total of $1,512,500.

The five-week trial in the courtroom of Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Robert Kneeland ended with the jury's decision late Thursday.

Donald B. Caffray, the Long Beach lawyer who represented the plaintiff, told the jurors in his summation that the two doctors knew that EDTA was a nephrotoxic drug but continued to prescribe it for Miss Phillips for a prolonged period ending in 1973. As a result of the regular administration of the drug, Caffray said, Miss Phillips suffered "renal shutdown"—failure of all kidney function—and has been placed on permanent, thrice-weekly dialysis.

A representative of the California Medical Association was called to testify on behalf of the plaintiff. He said that California doctors had been warned of the dangerous side effects produced in using EDTA in the treatment of arteriosclerosis cases.

Neither Alsleben nor Henderson was available for comment, a spokesman for the clinic said. John Cobb of Los Angeles, who represented the doctors and their clinic, also was unavailable to say if his clients planned to appeal the huge judgment.

Disabled vet has lot of motivation

Combined News Services

Hilliard Carter is winding up a thesis on motivation as applied to rehabilitation and will soon earn his master's degree, a degree he can neither see nor touch.

"It was a long and sometimes discouraging rehabilitation period in Walter Reed Hospital," said Carter, 30, a former Army man who lost his sight and forearms in a booby trap blast in 1966. "Blind veterans would try to explain how it was. Veterans without hands would tell me how it was. But not once did I meet anybody blind and also handless.

"I finally made up my mind that I was useless physically, but I could develop brain power and could put it to work helping others."

When he receives his master's from the Illinois Institute of Technology, Carter said a job of counseling awaits him at a Veterans Administration Hospital.

Minnesota lass Miss U.S.A.

Barbara Elaine Peterson, 22-year-old daughter of a Minnesota supreme court judge, was named Miss U.S.A. of 1976 on Saturday night in Niagara Falls. The 5-foot-8, brown-haired Miss Peterson lives in Edina, Minn., and is a student at the University of Minnesota. She plans to enter law school.

Runners-up were Miss Michigan Kevin Gale, 22; Miss Oregon Gail Atchison, 22; Miss South Carolina Virginia Murray, 22; and Miss Louisiana Robyn Sanders, 24.

Just clowning

James O. Stephan stood out in his graduating class at Southern Illinois University. He wore a pink wig, floppy pink shoes and a ruffled collar with his navy blue gown.

"I thought it was fitting that I graduate this way," said Stephan, 25, of Carbondale, Ill. "I've been clowning since I was 10 years old and paid for my entire undergraduate education with money I earned as a clown."

Anarchist buried

Ulrike Meinhof, a cofounder of the anarchist Baader-Meinhof gang, was buried Saturday in West Berlin amid heavy police security precautions and an outpouring of sympathy from young followers.

Miss Meinhof, 41, whose death by hanging in her prison cell a week ago has been officially ruled a suicide, was buried in a Protestant cemetery in the Tempelhof district without a religious service.

Police said some 4,500 people gathered at Holy Trinity cemetery and then marched to demonstrate their solidarity with the onetime ideologist of the radical German student movement. The marchers, many of them carrying red banners and Maoist emblems, were mostly silent at the cemetery. But on the march they burst into chanted slogans.

Adventure ends

A Japanese adventurer went for days without food and long hours in total darkness, through broken ice and a confrontation with a polar bear to complete the longest one-man sled dog trip in history.

"It was just my dream," said 115-pound Naomi Uemura, 35, after an 18-month, 7,500-mile journey from Jakobshavn, Greenland, to Kotzebue, Alaska. He arrived on May 7.

Uemura's trip was sponsored partly by Mainichi Shimbun, a Toyko newspaper which described him as the first man ever to have climbed the major peaks of five continents — Mt. Everest in Asia, Mt. Kilimanjaro in Africa, Mt. Aconcagua in South America, Mt. Blanc in Europe and Mt. McKinley in North America.

Mayor Richard Daley, who says retirement is a word that "ought to be stricken from the English language," celebrated his 74th birthday Saturday.

He has been mayor of Chicago since 1955, a reign longer than any of his predecessors. At the city's 139th birthday party in March, he said he will be mayor "as long as I'm alive."

Master political prankster

Dick Tuck 'just along for ride' on Ford train

By RICHARD E. MEYER

DICK TUCK
'Retired' Prankster

ABOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL (AP) — He says he has retired. But one wonders.

Dick Tuck, master political prankster who rigged Richard Nixon's fortune cookies and slipped a comely spy onto Barry Goldwater's campaign train, rode President Ford's whistlestop express Saturday as it rolled across Michigan.

He promised to behave.

"Welcome aboard," the President told him as he shook his hand.

"Thank you, Mr. President. Thank you very much," Tuck replied, with a puckish grin.

Ford grinned back and said he was glad Tuck had come aboard formally instead of sneaking on.

"I'VE BEEN doing this (riding campaign trains) for 50 years," Tuck told him, "and this is the best train I've been on — this week."

Ford smiled. White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen cleared a path for passengers who had gathered around, and the President made his way down the aisle.

Dick Tuck was a campaign worker for several past Democratic presidential candidates. He is 52 now and he has a little paunch. There is some gray in his curly hair. But his light brown eyes still twinkle.

Over a cup of coffee — 20 cents on the "Presidential Express" — Tuck said he didn't really don a railroad cap and wave Richard Nixon's train out of Tulare, Calif., years ago when Nixon was seeking votes for the vice presidency.

Apocryphal. The train had pulled out in midspeech, but Tuck said he wasn't responsible.

Idly, he flipped the lapel of his black coat. Brass buttons. The words "Union Pacific" were stamped across each one. A conductor's coat.

"I get my old clothes from Averell Harriman."

The father of the former ambassador was a railroad magnate.

Tuck's eyes twinkled.

He recalled the shapely young lady he managed to sneak aboard Barry Goldwater's campaign train in 1964. She distributed a newspaper Tuck published called "The Whistlestop" which she slipped under every compartment door at night.

It cautioned against walking off the edge of the earth. And it reassured that the water abroad the train was not fluoridated.

And he recalled the fortunes he slipped into some cookies Nixon distributed in Los Angeles' Chinatown during his 1962 campaign for the governorship of California.

They said: "Richard Nixon for Mayor of Whittier; Pat Brown for Governor."

Why wasn't he doing these things now? Was he discouraged by Watergate and its dirty tricks?

"No, I came out ahead on Watergate," Tuck allowed.

"What I did wasn't illegal. Secondly, it wasn't ever malicious. I've always tried to lighten things, to touch them with humor — and that's not always easy. And thirdly, I tried, you know, in most cases, to dramatize a serious or important issue. Finally, what I did wasn't surreptitious or anonymous. Some have said that I not only claimed credit, I demanded it."

"If anything happens on this train, I'll get the blame — or the credit — for it. If Nixon had stepped on a banana peel at the Great Wall of China, I'd have gotten credit."

Did he mean it? No mischief on this trip?

"No way. I'm retired. And I'm fully accredited."

He flashed an official White House press pass accrediting him to Playboy magazine.

No tricks? Was he certain?

"I'm too old for it," he grinned. He came up with an engineer's hat and put it on.

Was it because Ford's security is too tight? Just how tight did he find security on this trip?

"WELL, you know," said Tuck, "when I got accredited, the Secret Service checked out my Social Security number to check out who I am, and all that. Now, look."

He pointed to his White House pass. It was made out to Richard Puck.

"The real reservations the White House made for me say 'Puck,' too."

His eyes twinkled.

"Did you see the sign somebody put under the name 'The Presidential Express' two stops back?

"It said 'The S.S. Titanic.' Now, I don't know who put it there.

"This couldn't be the Titanic. If it is, it is the first ship that ever ran into an iceberg in the middle of the Panama Canal."

COLLEGE STUDENT Evelyn Young gestures as she talks to prostitute about "short-lived career" in Miami.

Student tries to teach streetwalkers a lesson

MIAMI (AP) — A 27-year-old student majoring in social work at a small Christian college here has set up an organization for prostitutes and is trying to teach them that "streetwalking is a short-lived career."

Barry College student Evelyn Young, with the approval of law enforcement and college officials, began by visiting prostitutes in jails and now has taken to the streets, bars and hotels to recruit women for membership in her group, called Health and Happiness of Women.

"Our major goal is decriminalization of prostitution," said Ms. Young. "But we also want to improve the physical and psychological well-being of these women. We want them to know of their rights."

About 30 women, most of them current or former prostitutes, are members of the organization.

"We help prostitutes in any way that we can," said Ms. Young. "I teach a class Tuesdays on health and body care, and we have rape-awareness and vocational training. We try to make them realize that streetwalking is a short-lived career."

Ms. Young decided to establish Health and Happiness of Women after working in a "participant-observation study — that's where you live and mingle with those you are studying."

She said that "as a feminist, I was very involved in NOW (National Organization for Women). Abortion was already taken (as a study subject) and this was the only untouched subject."

Miami and other resort areas are favorite gathering spots for prostitutes, said Ms. Young, who has been working on her project now for two months.

"The only way you can get a prostitute to change is if she is too old, too sick or in trouble," she said. "That's why we can attract them in jail and the sick ones on the street."

Ms. Young, who graduates in two years, said she plans to continue her work.

"I'm dedicated to this job," she said. "I think that within three to five years, prostitution will be legal, but we still want to help the girls find something else."

Busing foes encouraged by report of Levi aid in court

New York Times Service

BOSTON — White anti-busing activists here were encouraged Saturday by reports that Atty. Gen. Edward Levi was considering urging the Supreme Court to reconsider busing as a solution to school segregation. But some blacks expressed fear that the move could spur more violence.

The attorney general is considering filing a friend of the court brief within the next few days in connection with the Boston school desegregation case that would support a petition filed by opponents of the court-ordered school desegregation plan here.

In effect, the brief would ask the court to reconsider its landmark, unanimous decision, written by Chief Justice Warren Burger, in 1971, in which the court held that federal district judges had the authority to order extensive busing to remedy school desegregation fostered by local authorities. The case involved schools in Charlotte, N.C.

Boston Mayor Kevin White, who has said that busing is causing white flight from the schools and the city, said Saturday that the possibility of Justice Department intervention was "welcome news to the city of Boston" which he said had been "sorely tested" by the busing order.

The city council president, Louise Day Hicks, a leading opponent of busing, hailed the possibility of Levi's intervention, saying the "people of Boston need a powerful friend in court" in order to "get better treatment."

But Thomas Atkins, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, denounced the proposed plan as "a political move." It was the NAACP which brought the suit that led to the federal court finding that the schools had been deliberately segregated.

"While we are somewhat aware of the current primary season and the effect it may be having on policy considerations, we are hopeful that the President will reflect this invitation to further contribute to the turmoil which has gripped this city from time to time," Atkins told newsmen Saturday morning.

The NAACP leader referred to the Michigan primary this Tuesday, in which the reportedly desperate Ford campaign is making an all-out effort to avoid defeat by Ronald Reagan in the President's home state. Busing has been a strong issue there in the past.

Atkins said he was confident the appeal could not succeed, but he said he was concerned about the comfort the action "might give to some who have chosen calculated violence as the means of changing a federal court order.

"The President of the United States should not be giving rocks to those who would stone buses, nor gasoline to those who would start fires, nor sticks to those who would seek to chase American citizens off a constitutionally protected ground," Atkins said.

Levi met Friday evening with Solicitor General Robert Bork, who strongly backed the proposal to support the anti-busing position before the Supreme court, and with J. Stanley Pottinger, chief of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, who was understood to strongly oppose such a move.

Ford had previously spoken out on the busing issue in the midst of one of the frequent spates of racial violence over the past two years here when, after urging citizens to be peaceful and respect the law, he declared: "I respectfully disagree with the judge's order."

At the time, Mayor White charged that the President had "fanned the flames of resistence."

U.S. man arrested in Mexican jail breakout

DALLAS (AP) — One of three men accused of staging a daring raid on a Mexican jail to free 14 U.S. citizens was arrested in Dallas shortly after Mexico said it was asking extradition of the escapees, U.S. authorities said Saturday.

The authorities also said a federal grand jury in San Antonio will investigate the raid on the Piedras Negras jail, just across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass, Tex.

William McCoy Hill, 32, a used-car dealer, was arrested by U.S. Customs special agents in his attorney's office Friday evening. He was charged with violation of the Munitions Control Act for exporting guns into a foreign country without proper authorization and was released on a $1,000 bond.

Hill was identified by Customs officials as the back-up man in the raid led by Don Fielden, an unemployed ex-Marine

Fielden surrendered to U.S. authorities in Dallas last week and was released on $5,000 bond after being charged with violating U.S. neutrality laws by taking guns into Mexico to free the Americans.

Women's military role unchanged, study finds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most women in the military are still assigned to administrative and medical specialities, a government study said Saturday.

The General Accounting Office blamed the continued concentration of women in those two traditional areas on:

—The failure of Army and Marine Corps recruiters to fully describe to women their occupational options.

—The tendency of some women to seek specialization in those areas even when other choices were offered.

—Restrictions on women's participation in combat-related activities.

GAO collected data showing that by December 1974, nearly 22,000 of the Army's 33,525 women served in administrative or medical jobs, as did nearly 9,000 of the 15,114 enlisted Navy women and nearly 14,000 of the 22,198 Air Force women.

The Navy provides medical services for the Marine Corps, but 2,000 or 72 per cent of the corps' 2,574 women were involved in administrative work.

The GAO, an auditing and investigative agency of Congress, said virtually every non-combat specialty has been opened to women in the military.

But the performance by women and men has been different in some cases where they were assigned to the same physical tasks.

The GAO said some women have been assigned to specialities in which they cannot perform effectively because of strength limitations or because of the combat-related nature of the job. Some others have not been assigned to specialities for which they were trained because of combat restrictions or because their supervisors believed they could not do the work. And others have not been required to meet the same training and performance requirements as men.

"We believe the services should develop physical and operational standards for potentially troublesome specialities as well as procedures for measuring the ability of both men and women to satisfy the standards," the GAO said.

The Air Force is the only service that has begun taking steps in this area, it said. In developing standards in 1974 for evaluating men's and women's capabilities, representatives from the Air Force Office of the Surgeon General asserted that an average woman has 60 per cent of the strength of an average man.

The standards were developed over the next year and have been applied to all new Air Force recruits since January 1976 to determine what jobs they are eligible to fill.

The armed services intensified their recruitment of women and began to diversify their job assignments because the end of the draft meant a reduction in the number of men in the services. These steps were also taken in anticipation of passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The Navy and the Air Force are limited by law to assigning women noncombat positions, but the GAO said its investigators could find no similar written prohibitions for the Army and the Marine Corps.

The Defense Department said it concurred with the GAO's findings and has set up a study group to address the issues raised by the agency.

Calley, convicted of My Lai killings, weds

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — William Calley Jr. and Penny Vick, daughter of a Columbus jeweler, were married Saturday night in a candlelight ceremony at St. Paul United Methodist Church.

Calley, 32, met his 29-year-old bride several years ago when he was a customer in one of her father's stores. She is a buyer for her father. It was the first marriage for both.

Five years ago this spring, the former Army lieutenant was convicted of the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians in the longest court-martial in U.S. history at nearby Ft. Benning.

U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott of Columbus, who reversed Calley's conviction in 1974, and former Macon Mayor Ronnie Thompson were among the several hundred wedding guests.

Calley was sentenced to life imprisonment in March 1971 for the murder of unresisting Vietnamese citizens.

President Nixon ordered him removed from the Fort Benning stockade and placed under house arrest, where he remained for three years.

Later, Calley's sentence was reduced to 10 years but a court appeal won a reversal of his conviction. However, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans reversed Elliott's ruling and reinstated the conviction.

Menace of old walls

Quake killers still poised

tures that collapse first and take the heaviest toll.

MOST OF THE 120 deaths in the 1933 disaster occurred inside or beside such buildings. Building codes enacted after 1933 prevented more such structures from being built. But in most cities the old killers have been left standing.

Renewed interest in the dangerous old buildings has resulted from the uplift known as the Palmdale Bulge on the San Andreas Fault, which scientests say may signal a great quake of 1857 or 1906 magnitude.

Caltech scientests have also predicted a moderate quake, perhaps of the 1971 variety, in the San Fernando Valley area in the next year.

On Thursday, following up on an earlier declaration of the bulge as a menace to safety in the Los Angeles Basin, the California Seismic Safety Commission asked for federal aid in getting action on unreinforced masonry buildings.

THE COMMISSION stated that there are several thousand buildings in the Los Angeles Basin that pose "a significant danger to life" and that local and state governments need help in bearing the cost of getting rid of them.

It asked federal agencies to assign high priority and "make adequate financial resources available over the next ten years" to repair or demolish the buildings.

Long Beach has been working on that for several years.

"The city is known throughout the world as being a leader in getting rid of unsafe buildings or bringing them up to standards," said Caltech's Clarence Allen, one of the nation's leading earthquake scientists.

"Long Beach suffered so much in 1933 that an earthquake hazards program has been more acceptable there."

HOWEVER, DESPITE O'Connor's vigorous earthquake hazard program, only 11 per cent of the city's 825 unreinforced masonry buildings have been reinforced or demolished since new laws were enacted in 1959.

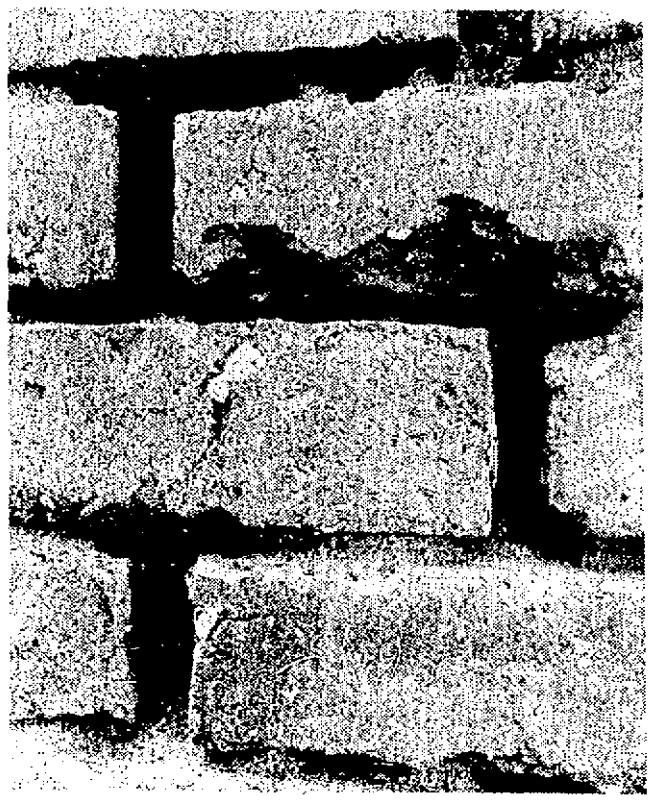

Most are located downtown. A few are further east in old districts along streets such as Fourth and Anaheim. There are a few more scattered along main streets in North Long Beach.

Los Angeles, which has the second most effective program, and where the greatest problem lies, has only just begun.

Robert J. Williams, O'Connor's Los Angeles counterpart, said that an earthquake hazard ordinance that would require public assembly buildings of unreinforced masonry to be beefed up or torn down is on its way to the City Council.

BUT THIS WOULD cover only 300 structures such as theaters, churches, libraries and restaurants. There are 14,000 more buildings—most of them hotels and apartments—of the type that Long Beach has been condemning.

"There are 75,000 to 100,000 people living in these structures," Williams said. "Depending on the time of day, thousands of these people would probably be killed if a major earthquake occurred on the San Andreas fault."

THE MORTAR ON THIS rear wall of a small business on Pine Avenue — an old brick structure — has washed and weathered out. —Staff Photo

Allen and other earthquake scientists say that such a quake is inevitable. The last big one occurred in 1857 and they seem to occur every 100 years, Allen said. The Palmdale Bulge may be a precursor of such a quake.

BUT A MUCH smaller quake, slightly larger than the 1971 temblor or centering closer to old sections of Los Angeles, could pose almost as serious a threat.

"The 1971 quake lasted 11½ seconds," Williams said. "If it had lasted another five seconds or so, a lot of these old buildings in the downtown area would have come down."

Ninety-three per cent of those buildings are in the metropolitan Los Angeles area bounded by Century Boulevard, La Cienega Avenue, Griffith Park and the eastern city limits.

Three per cent are in San Pedro and the rest are scattered in West Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley.

THERE ARE thousands more unreinforced masonry buildings in other older cities such as Glendale, Pasadena, Compton, San Gabriel and Santa Ana.

If it's been known for so long that the buildings are hazards, why hasn't concern for human life caused them to be torn down?

When hearings were held on the proposed Los Angeles ordinance, most theater owners whose buildings were involved opposed remedial action, Williams said.

Long Beach officials said that when O'Connor was trying to draft tougher laws, the Downtown Long Beach Association and the United Property Owners Association succeeded in watering them down.

IT'S USUALLY appeals by property owners—often accompanied by considerable political clout —that keeps the unsafe buildings standing and occupied, Southland building officials agree.

There's no doubt that property owners take a loss—often a major loss—if their buildings are demolished or reinforced, Williams said.

THE SOLUTION may be to arrange somehow for owners, lending agencies and government agencies to share the cost in reducing the hazards, he said. That's the direction the commission's Thursday resolution pointed.

O'Connor said that because city building officials know they're in for a fight if they try to act against earthquake hazards, many don't even try.

"Most building officials just use the ostrich approach," said the 63-year-old building official, a 30-year veteran in the department. "They don't have the guts to take on such a bucket of worms. And it is a bucket of worms."

HE SAID THAT building officials must be willing to do battle and they must have the "right environment"—support from other city officials, businessmen and the media—if they're to succeed.

That right climate has existed in Long Beach, by and large, O'Connor said.

It existed in Santa Rosa after that city's 1969 earthquake, according to Olson, of the Seismic Safety Commission.

But Santa Rosa and Long Beach are the exceptions, Olson said.

L.B.'s quake-prone buildings

By WALT MURRAY

"Old buildings are not like whisky. They don't get better with age."—Ed O'Connor

The old wall is a crazy patchwork of decaying mortar and deteriorating brick.

In some spots, the mortar just isn't there, having crumbled away almost completely around some bricks.

Some of the bricks are askew and can be wiggled out of place. Halves and quarters of other bricks are missing.

A centuries-old building in Italy? An old garden wall in New England?

Not quite. It's a side wall of a large, three-story apartment building in earthquake-prone Long Beach.

You can see where bricks toppled off the building in the city's 1933 earthquake and were replaced by cement along the roof line.

Those patches — hanging up there atop the original brick work — could prove more dangerous than the bricks that tumbled down in 1933, according to Ed O'Connor, the city's building and safety chief. They will come down in large chunks.

The apartment building and more than 800 like it were built before 1930 of brick or hollow clay tile with wooden floors, joists and roofs. They were designed to bear only the vertical load of the buildings themselves.

No one considered how well the structures would survive the sharp back-and-forth motion of a major earthquake.

A 1933 report by one of O'Connor's predecessors, C. D. Wailes Jr., describes how such buildings were put together.

"...The 1913 building code permitted a straight lime mortar (unmixed with cement) for all walls except isolated piers, foundation walls, parapets and chimenys on the roof line...

"During the period when this code was in effect much of the sand used for both mortar and concrete was a dirty, fine sand comparable to beach sand...workmanship was decidedly inferior..."

A 1933 report by Caltech's Robert A. Millikan notes that such methods were an "all too prevalent class of construction (used in Long Beach): the stores and apartment houses...were built as cheaply as the inadequate building codes would permit by those who were interested only in speculative profits."

Modern building codes call for high-quality mortar, reinforced walls and better ties of floors and ceilings to the walls.

And not all pre-1933 buildings are unsafe, O'Connor said. Most of the old wood-frame homes built in the teens and 20s throughout Long Beach pose no serious hazard. The steel-reinforced public utilities building, built before 1933, survived the quake nicely.

Many old brick buildings have been reinforced. Steel-reinforced vertical concrete ribs have been implanted in the sides of the structures.

Large sections of decaying brick have been scalloped out and replaced with cement.

"You can't blame property owners for being unhappy when you tell them they have to do that," O'Connor said. "If I came and told you to spend thousands of dollars on your building or tear it down, you'd be unhappy too.

"But on the other hand, if I took you into one of these buildings and said, 'If a moderate earthquake struck right now we'd have a slim chance of getting out alive,' you'd demand that I do something about it."

Hundreds of persons — many of them poor and elderly — still live in the old apartments. Hundreds more go in and out of small businesses in such buildings each day.

Series offers vacation tips

Columnist Sylvia Porter has prepared a five-part series designed to answer an important question facing vacationing families every year.

The question: should families take public transportation to their vacation site and rent a car there, or should they take care of those long deferred repairs on the family car and drive it?

Whichever way your family goes, you should take time to discover Ms. Porter's findings.

Her series begins Monday in the Independent, Press-Telegram. She discusses what drivers should know about rental cars—and their insurance—in the first two articles and auto repairs in the final three.

New jobs, tax cuts planned by Demos

By RICHARD D. LYONS
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The Democratic majority in the House of Representatives has proposed a massive realignment of legislative priorities for the next five years aimed at restoring national economic prosperity by creating 12 million new jobs and cutting taxes by $10 billion.

The program envisions a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress

working together starting next year to bring about a revitalized economy that would produce federal budget surpluses by 1980 that in turn would be invested in national health, educational, energy and environmental programs.

The 271-page proposal, prepared over the last nine months at the direction of the House leadership, will be offered to the meeting starting here Monday of the Democratic platform committee, which is expected to incorporate large sections as planks in the Democratic presidential platform.

In addition to the views of the Democratic leadership, the proposal includes ideas from all the Democratic committee chairmen in the House. It will be the first time that such a coordinated effort is presented to the Democratic platform committee.

The plan is expected to be the keystone of the Democrat's legislative program starting next year and was drawn up, in part, as a result of their frustration in dealing with two successive Republican Presidents who have in the last eight years vetoed 86 pieces of legislation drafted by Democratic Congresses.

The proposal has a decided new deal flavor, emphasizing that only through the creation of new jobs will budget deficits be reduced, the economy restored and the quality of life improved.

"Attainment of full employment is our primary objective," according to the proposal, a copy of which was obtained by The New York Times.

While large parts of the proposal are political in nature, several economists familiar with its content have stated that they believe it makes fiscal sense and is not, as one put it, "merely pie in the sky."

Its drafters urge on what they foresee as the future Democratic administration a detailed list of domestic proposals including:

— Passage and implementation of the Hawkins-Humphrey full employment bill now before Congress to reduce unemployment to 3 per cent of all adults by 1981.

— A $10 billion tax cut effective in July 1978, that would be structured to give the most relief to low and middle income workers.

— Stepped up antitrust action by the Justice Department as part of an effort to damp price increases and constrain inflation.

— Redrafting the tax code to simplify returns and increase federal revenues by plugging the loopholes whose costs are expected to rise to $135 billion a year by 1981.

— Improving the efficiency of local governments by encouraging through legislation the consolidation of jurisdictions, even across state lines.

— The offering of low-interest loans and tax incentives to small businesses in an effort to make them more competitive with the major corporations.

— Assisting consumers through the federal testing of products and ending price fixing in, for example, the drug industry.

— Enactment of standby wage and price controls that could be used in the event of a sharp increase in the inflation rate.

Some proposals, such as one calling for the passage of "workable handgun control legislation," are bound to run into opposition and could either be left out of the platform or ignored if a Democratic administration does come to power next year.

One of the weakest sections of the proposal is what it terms "reform in the public sector" through selective overhauls of the federal bureaucracy to improve its performance, curtail its cost and make it more responsive to the needs of the people.

"We must eliminate dead weight, outmoded, inoperative, wasteful and inefficient programs," the document states but no where does it specify which programs would be ended and who among the federal government's 2.8 million workers would be discharged.

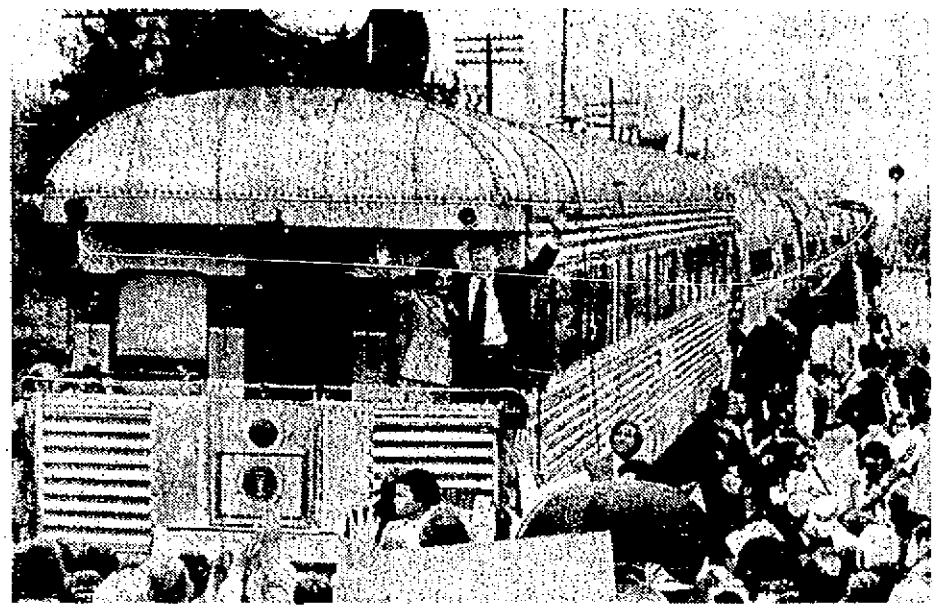

The recommendations run to 124 pages, of which 115 are devoted to domestic problems. But a section on foreign and defense policy does call for increasing efforts to control both nuclear and conventional arms, seeking the reduction in Europe of both American and Soviet armed forces and attempting to smooth out the on-again, off-again nature of detente.

Included with the proposal are three appendices that together form a partisan critique of the Nixon and Ford administrations which are accused of gross inefficiency, corruption and abuse of power.

These appendices contain scores of examples of what the Democrats consider to be Republican wrong doing and, in the language of the proposal, are "a veritable catalogue of malfeasance in office, bad policies, poor administration, improper and illegal actions, bad judgment and downright criminality."

The proposals were drafted by what has been called the "speaker's task force on the Democratic platform" which was assembled by Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., and placed under the direction of John E. Barriere, the executive director of the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee.

Yet the package will be formally presented to the Platform Committee on Tuesday by Majority Leader Thomas J. O'Neill, D-Mass., rather than Albert, another indication that Albert intends to retire at the end of this year. O'Neill is regarded as his probable successor.

Reagan gains delegate support

"Now, (Secretary of State Henry) Kissinger has just returned from his African junket, having talked fluently about the creation of 'buffer stocks' of agricultural commodities — the sort of thing we have just gotten rid of domestically to get the government out of price fixing."

It could not be learned how Reagan arrived at the $2 billion figure. Government spokesmen say the sales-loss figure cannot be determined.

Ford set out on the Michigan rails Friday — making the first whistle-stop presidential campaign tour since Harry Truman did it 28 years ago — in an effort to get his drive for election to a full term back on the track. He is trying to overtake Reagan in the race for convention delegates.

As the nine-car, bunting-festooned "Presidential Express" rolled across southern Michigan's farmland through a stubborn rain, Ford extended the same message at every station:

"I ask you to help me on Tuesday. We must win in Michigan."

The turnouts were large despite the weather, with an estimated crowd of 8,000 in Flint and 7,000 in Durand. Ford took time to jump off the train and shake hands.

Ford, who with his wife and entourage rode in a yellow-carpeted executive car, told reporters aboard the train he was optimistic about his chances Tuesday against Reagan in Michigan.

"I couldn't feel better," he said in one of the crowded press cars. "I think it's just great."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., whose flash-fire candidacy has brought him even with Carter in the race for Democratic delegates in Maryland, drew a crowd of thousands — mostly teen-agers — at a Friday night fund-raising rock concert near Baltimore. Brown, 38, pledged to bring a "new spirit" to politics."

Here is a look at other delegate-selection developments Saturday:

—In Virginia, Republicans in three congressional districts chose a total of nine national convention delegates Friday night and Saturday. Five were Reagan supporters, two were Ford supporters.

—In Louisiana, Republicans held three congressional-district caucuses to pick nine more national convention delegates. Reagan picked up eight of them and one was uncommitted.

—In Missouri, Reagan won 12 delegates and Ford took six as Republicans continued their selections.

—In New Mexico, Carter maintained an edge over Udall as Democrats chose their 18 national convention delegates. The former Georgia governor got eight delegates, while Udall got six.

—In Arizona, Udall picked up four additional delegates in his home state as Democrats completed selection of their national convention delegation. The 25 Arizona delegates consist of 19 pledged to Udall, five to Carter, and one to Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

Reagan tax data analyzed

were specifically designed for their tax-avoidance potential.

In addition to his apparent complete avoidance of both federal and state income taxes in 1970, Reagan, who is assumed to file a joint tax return with his wife, appears to have paid only about $2,200 in federal income tax in 1971. This is about the same amount that a typical married couple with an income of $16,000 would have paid. The Reagans had an income in 1971 that exceeded $87,000.

In 1973, with an income of more than $110,000, they appear to have paid around $7,800 in federal income tax, or about what a typical couple with an income of $38,000 would have paid.

In 1972 and 1974, the Reagans appear to have paid a federal income tax that was only about half as large as that paid by typical taxpayers in their over-$100,000 tax bracket.

In 1975, the only year for which Reagan has disclosed his federal income tax payments, the $65,000 he paid on an adjusted gross income of $252,000 is about $20,000 less than the average tax paid by those at his income level.

It has been known for some time that he paid no California state income tax for 1970. That fact was disclosed in 1971 by a college radio station in California and confirmed by Reagan, who was then governor.

He declined to provide any details at that time or any explanation, other than a statement that he had suffered "business reverses" in 1970.

He continued to refuse to discuss his financial and tax affairs until February this year. Then, in an apparent response to prodding by Ford, he made an abbreviated disclosure covering the years 1970-1975. Last month, he made slightly more detailed disclosures for 1975.

The information that Reagan has released for the years preceding 1975 avoids disclosure of how little federal income tax he has been paying by lumping together in a single figure for each year his "total taxes paid," a figure that he said included federal and state income taxes, local property taxes, sales taxes and miscellaneous taxes.

RONALD REAGAN
On Campaign Trail

—AP Wirephoto

Records of the property taxes that he has paid on three pieces of expensive real estate that he owns in California are, however, available for public inspection.

By subtracting the property taxes he paid from the figures provided by Reagan on his "total taxes paid" and then making certain standard calculations, it is possible to estimate about what he must have paid in federal and state income taxes.

In 1970, Reagan paid $12,201 in property taxes. His financial statement of Feb. 25 said that his total taxes paid for that year were $12,536.

Thus the difference between his property tax and his total federal, state and local taxes was only $335, a figure that almost certainly represents state and city sales taxes.

It therefore appears that Reagan paid neither federal nor state income taxes for 1970.

In 1971, he paid $14,319 in property taxes. He said that his total tax payments for that year were $17,053. That leavees a total of $2,734 for federal and state income taxes, sales and miscellaneous taxes. The amount of federal income tax almost certainly could not have exceeded $2,200 and might have been less.

Similar calculations indicate that he paid, at most, $10,000 federal income tax in 1972 on an income of more than $116,000; $7,800 in 1973 on an income of more than $110,000, and $25,000 in 1974 on an income of more than $140,000.

All of these figures might be off slightly (but in a way that would make Reagan's estimated federal income tax payments even smaller) if he followed the practice of prepaying part of his California property tax, as many citizens do.

It is possible that he had considerably more income than he has indicated.

What Reagan has disclosed is his adjusted gross income, which does not necessarily include all of his real economic income, plus other proceeds that he calls "tax-exempt" income.

It is not clear what kinds of income are and are not included under the heading "tax-exempt income."

Questions concerning this matter were among those that Reagan, through Lake, the press secretary for Citizens for Reagan, refused to answer for the New York Times.

Lake said that the income and tax data that Reagan previously had made public "is all that he cares to submit to the press."

"The information is all derived from his federal tax returns and he feels it more than meets his obligation to the public," he added.

The heading "tax-exempt income" may cover only interest from municipal bonds. Reagan reported holding $200,000 worth of such bonds in his February financial statement, and the interest in 1975 on those bonds, which is exempt from both federal and California tax, would have been $8,980.

He reported $15,704 in tax-exempt income for 1975, however, and it is not certain whether this all represented interest on tax-exempt bonds.

His statements show that he had had almost $40,000 in tax-exempt income in each of three succeeding years, 1970, 1971 and 1972. In 1973, the amount rose to $43,000.

Sued doctor wins own suit against drug company

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A 1968 medical treatment that caused brain damage to a 7-year-old girl has resulted in an unusual jury finding in favor of a doctor who blamed a drug company.

A Superior Court jury ruled Friday that Astra Pharmaceutical Products is liable for harm to Dr. Gordon Runnels, who says he was forced to give up his Sacramento medical practice because of the incident.

The family of the girl, Kimberly Gerringer, already has collected a $1.3-million malpractice settlement, with Astra's insurance company paying $550,000, Runnels' insurance company $100,000, and others the rest.

RUNNELS SAID THE girl suffered permanent brain damage after he used an Astra-recommended procedure in treating her for a severely cut leg at a Sacramento hospital in September 1968.

He said he bound her leg, as the drug company recommended, and injected Xylocaine solution, an Astra product, into her ankle vein in an attempt to anesthetize the cut.

The anesthetic seeped through the binding and Miss Gerringer went into convulsions for 26 minutes, suffering an oxygen loss to her brain and permanent mental retardation, Runnels said.

The 10-2 jury vote, sufficient for a verdict in a civil case, followed six months of testimony. The jury returns Monday to consider Runnels' request for $6.55 million from Astra in damages to him.

Hearings on new state work rules set

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 50-cent minimum wage increase, rest facilities for men and women and a four-day work week provision highlight proposed revisions of State Industrial Welfare Commission regulations.

IWC Chairman Howard A. Carver said Sunday that the proposals cover household occupations and work standards for 14 industries and occupations in effect since 1968.

Carver said the new minimum wage would affect 1.6 million workers primarily in retail trade, eating and drinking establishments, hotels and motels, amusement and recreation and the apparel industry.

Also, new standard overtime provisions would require employers to pay premium wages after eight hours work in a single day and 40 hours in a single week. These would apply for the first time to agricultural workers, including field workers.

The proposals would allow a 40-hour, four-day week with overtime required for any additional days worked in the week. But 10-hour days must be consecutive and by mutual consent of employer and employe.

Public hearings on the proposals will be held in Fresno June 7-8, Los Angeles June 9-11 and San Francisco June 15-17. Final regulations should be in force by Sept. 6.

The proposals would lift the minimum wage from $2 to $2.50 per hour, with a special rate of $2.15 an hour for "learners and minors," those under 18. The federal minimum wage, now $2.20 in some categories and $2.30 in others, will become a uniform $2.30 Jan. 1.

Employers would be required to provide rest facilities separate from toilet facilities, a provision previously only applied to women.

Men would be covered for the first time under provisions compelling employers to provide a rest period of 10 minutes for each four hours worked, a meal period of 30 minutes or more when an employe works more than five hours, seats at or adjacent to work stations, elevator or similar service for workers on the fourth floor above or below ground level, and all equipment and uniforms required for the job.

Rather than specifiying weights for lifting regulations, the commission proposed, "No employe shall be required to lift, push or carry any object which is beyond the individual employe's capability."

The proposals also disallow deductions from pay for cash shortages or breakage unless employe dishonesty or integrity is involved.

The IWC deleted a section of its 1968 work orders which permitted employers to apply workers' tips or gratuities toward the minimum wage. This was done after the Legislature declared such earnings the sole property of employes.

Carter said the proposed regulations are based to a large extent on recommendations by labor and management representatives on wage boards.

Under those covering household employes, a live-in worker would have at least 12 consecutive hours free of duty each day and and the total number of work hours could not exceed 12 hours a day. Overtime would be time-and-a-half.

Non-live-in household employes would receive time-and-a-half pay for all hours exceeding a 40-hour week or an eight-hour day.

In the agricultural orders, the commission proposes that workers get double pay for all hours worked in excess of 12 in one day.

The manufacturing order states, "If a meal period occurs on a shift beginning or ending at or between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m., facilities shall be available for securing hot food or drink or for heating food or drink," and a sheltered place must be provided for eating.

The proposals also call for a $2.50 daily payment in addition to the minimum wage if the employe works a split shift in manufacturing.

Exempted from some or all of the provisions of the proposed orders are persons employed in administrative, executive or professional capacities; federal, state or local government, student nurses; outside salespersons; personal attendants and babysitters; professional actors and actresses and regularly indentured apprentices.

Tornadoes, heavy rains hit Carolinas; four left dead

Associated Press

A violent spring storm, triggering tornadoes and torrential rains, swept across the Carolinas on Saturday, killing four persons, including three children and injuring at least eight others.

Three of the dead were children killed in Pembroke, N.C., when a tornado overturned their family's mobile home.

The children's mother, Molly Locklear, 29, was reported in critical condition at a hospital, and another child, Bobbie Gail Locklear, 7, was in satisfactory condition.

A hospital spokesman identified the dead children as Francis Locklear, 5, Mickey Locklear, 9, and Anna Locklear, 15 months.

Several twisters touched down in South Carolina where one death was reported killed. Floyd Durham, 25, of Timmonsville died of third-degree burns after he was electrocuted by a fallen power line Saturday.

The storm also forced the evacuation of people along the flood-swollen Pigeon River in the mountains in the western part of North Carolina.

Robeson County authorities in North Carolina said two other persons from the Pembroke area were admitted to the hospital shortly after the tornado struck, but no other details were available.

Six other persons were injured when a tornado hit Troy in central North Carolina.

Over new life forms

Dilemma for biologists

New York Times Service

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Biologists, who have recently discovered the potentially revolutionary technique for creating new forms of life, believe they have acquired such a fundamental power that they face ethical dilemmas comparable to those of nuclear physicists who, a generation ago, learned to manipulate the power of the atom.

The new techniques make it possible to select genes from one organism and transplant them into the chromosomes of another. Most of the researchers use bacteria as the recipient species and suggest such benefits as new bacterial strains that could be grown in vats to produce such medically needed substances as insulin or growth hormone or safer antibiotics.

The scientific debate over the wisdom of such research has been under way for three years, and the National Institutes of Health is expected to promulgate guidelines soon for the containment of such research to prevent bacterial escapes. But it appears that only one major academic research center, the University of Michigan, has considered the pros and cons at its highest administrative levels.

Over the last few months, the university's president, Robben Fleming, and its Board of Regents have conducted symposiums and hearings and appointed faculty study committees to evaluate whether the school should proceed with such research.

The controversy goes to the heart of one of the most fundamental issues confronting science in a free society — how to balance the right to free scientific inquiry with the need for scientific responsibility to humanity at large.

One key difference in the current situation is that, unlike the early atomic energy debates, the genetics questions are being discussed publicly.

"This is a significant issue and our procedures have always been to give the fullest possible airings to matters like this," Dr. Fleming said. "We have a highly articulate group here that is opposed to this research, and we feel they should be heard."

Proponents of the research also suggest that it could enable agricultural crops to generate their own fertilizer, vastly increasing the world's food supply. Some even talk of modifying the normal bacteria inhabiting the mouth so that they do not produce tooth decay.

Critics warn, however, that the research could accidentally produce new microbes that secrete dangerous toxins or that cause new disease in people, animals or plants. They say that unless stringent precautions are taken, such microbes might escape from the laboratory, causing epidemics or disrupting ecological balances.

Sex Who's Who is no guide for the layman

By LYNNE OLSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring there are too many amateurs offering sex advice, a national organization has published a consumer guide to certified sex therapists and educators.

The $3 guide, issued by the American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists — AASECT — is a state-by-state listing of persons in the United States, Canada and abroad who have been certified under AASECT guidelines.

It was published in response to a huge number of requests from the public for help in choosing qualified counselors and steering clear of quacks and amateurs, says Dr. Patricia Schiller, AASECT executive director.

"The American people seem to be suddenly plagued with sex problems," the association has stated. "As the demand grew, the supply grew to meet it. "In recent years, the qualified and unqualified alike have moved into the field, with a variety of motives ranging from human compassion to cupidity.

"Their credentials have ranged from long years of rigorous professional training to a smattering of superficial information picked up in a weekend crash course ... This is no field for the well-meaning but incompetent amateur."

Those listed in the "National Register of Certified Sex Educators and Sex Therapists" are definitely not beginners.

To be certified, educators had to have a bachelor's or master's degree, plus three years of experience in sex education — or a doctorate plus two years. At least 1,000 hours of clinical experience and a minimum of a master's degree or equivalent were mandatory for therapists.

"A good number of people, including doctors, have been turned down because they didn't meet the criteria," Dr. Schiller says.

The guide lists 184 therapists, including the Masters-Johnson team in St. Louis, and 492 sex educators, including prominent psychologist Albert Ellis of New York.

In the case of each educator, the booklet tells the population he educates (children, adolescents or adults) and the environment in which the education takes place (college, church, clinic, hospital and the like.)

For therapists, the guide gives the method of treatment used and the groups treated by each — adults, teen-agers, couples, engaged or divorced people, homosexuals, the aged or the handicapped.

Anyone looking for a little hanky panky under the guise of therapy will be disappointed. The educators and therapists listed have agreed to an ethical code which bans nudity and body contact between patient and therapist for the purpose of erotic stimulation.

"If a therapist says he has to have sexual intercourse with a patient in order to help, he's totally wrong," Dr. Schiller says. "You advise the patient's partner to do what should be done. You don't do it yourself."

The director, who is also an assistant professor at the Howard University College of Medicine, adds that there is no law to stop a person from advertising himself as a sex therapist, despite lack of credentials.

Recent best sellers on sex and "the simplistic approach used in professional journals and books" explaining how to get more enjoyment from sex, have inspired many people to go into the sex-counseling business with no special training, Dr. Schiller says.

"They think they can do it by reading a couple of books and going to a couple of workshops," she says. "But they know, or think they know, only about physical capacities. They don't understand the dynamics of interpersonal relationships, which is the most important."

World fears 'limit future of A-power'

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Nuclear power poses such a threat to safety, peace, civil liberties and sound economy that it may never develop into the worldwide energy source once envisioned, according to the assessment of a private study group.

Worldwatch Institute, a Washington-based research organization, Saturday released a study that posed a generally pessimistic picture of nuclear power.

Denis Hayes, author of the report, said worldwide sentiment against nuclear power is growing, adding, "the world is already beginning to rethink the consequences of a future based on nuclear energy."

Hayes told a news conference he was largely indifferent about nuclear power when he began the study. He said he has concluded conservation and development of such alternative energy sources as wind and solar power are the best solutions for world energy needs.

HAYES SAID the spread of nuclear power and proliferation of nuclear weapons are inseparably linked. Nuclear material for peaceful power can be diverted for bombs because of inadequate controls, he said, noting that India had done just that.

At the end of 1975, there were 158 commercial reactors in 21 countries, and many more planned or under construction, the study said.

"Widespread weapons proliferation is sure to follow on the heels of commercial nuclear power facilities," Hayes said. "With each additional finger on the nuclear trigger, the chances of an accidental or intentional nuclear war grows greater."

A shortage of uranium fuel will increase costs and push the move toward planned plutonium-powered reactors, the report said. Plutonium, a radioactive byproduct of uranium power, has been proposed as a fuel produced by so-called breeder reactor to power other reactors.

If nuclear development follows original plans, Hayes said, 440 million pounds of plutonium would be produced by the year 2020. The highly toxic substance could be used to make bombs not only by governments but also by terrorists.

"THIEVERY INSIDE plants, or external raids, could put plutonium in the hands of terrorists," Hayes said.

In order to counter terrorists, governments will have to increase police measures. Hayes said this is likely to lead to more authoritarian societies in which civil liberties are violated in the name of security.

Hayes said nuclear power costs more than most figures indicate because many true costs are hidden by so much government-sponsored research and investment.

Nuclear power will not be economical for wealthier industrial nations, he said, let alone developing countries with little capital.

Hayes said the debate over nuclear power has been dominated by technical issues, but in the future more of the debate will center on values and ethics.

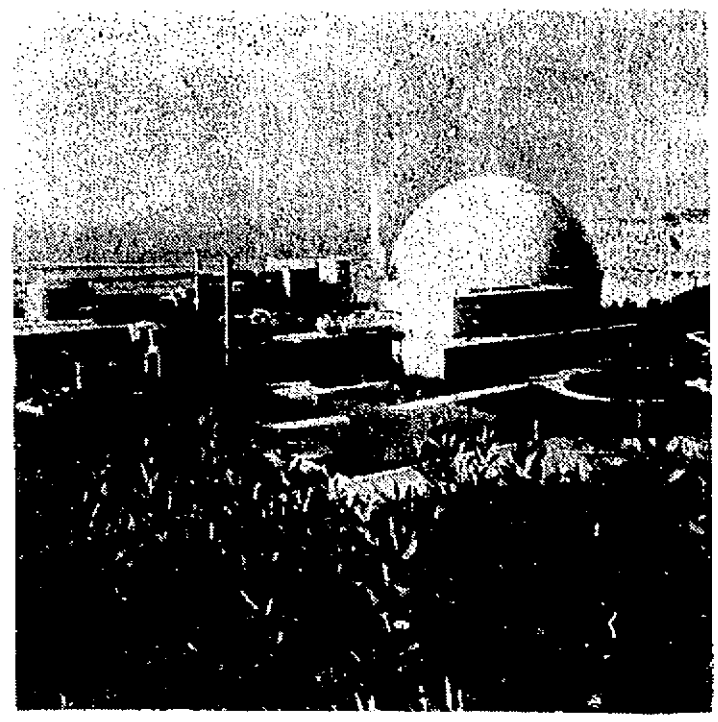

"The most important decisions to be made are political, and will be made on the basis of what kind of world people want to live in," he concluded.

The Worldwatch Institute is a private, nonprofit research organization whose aim is trying to anticipate global problems and social trends.

Orville L. Freeman, former secretary of agriculture under the late President John F. Kennedy and current president of Business International Corp., is chairman of the board.

Lester R. Brown, an author and former senior fellow of the Overseas Development Council, is president of the institute.

According to an institute booklet, its major financial support comes from the Rockefeller Brothers Fund. Other funding sources, it says, are the Federal Energy Administration, the Charles F. Kettering Foundation and the United Nations Environment Program.

SAN ONOFRE POWER STATION illustrates the best use of nuclear energy, but a private study group says the potential for conversion to weaponry poses a major threat as nuclear knowledge becomes more widespread.

U.S. 'facing bondage' over foreign oil ties

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe said Saturday that America faces "political and economic bondage" if it continues to depend on foreign oil sources.

"We are now importing between 40 and 45 per cent of our oil and this could reach 60 per cent in the 1980s," Kleppe said. "We are threatened with a political and economic bondage not unlike that which touched off the American Revolution some two centuries ago."

The secretary delivered the warning in a prepared speech at the commencement exercises of Assumption College.

Despite the worsening energy crisis, the government, industry, the academic community and the press have failed to communicate to the public the extent of its severity, Kleppe said.

With the 1973 Arab oil crisis now a fading memory, "Americans either do not believe there is an energy crisis or choose to ignore it," he added.

The secretary defended against environmentalists' complaints his decisions to lease Outer Continental Shelf — OCS — regions off the West Coast and the Gulf of Mexico and to allow federal coal easing.

"These outer continental shelf areas represent new frontiers which promise substantial supplies of gas and oil ..." Kleppe said. "We share the great concern over the environmental impact of these OCS developments.

"But we are convinced that the OCS wells are much less detrimental to the environment than the inevitable oil spills which occur when petroleum is imported by the tanker."

But all this energy planning for the future, Kleppe conceded, "is based on what might be best described as educated guesses. We have techniques for estimating the quantities of energy resources remaining in the world, but we cannot say for certain they will be found or that when found will be usable."

Alaska pipe facing costly hassle

By TAD BARTIMUS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—Completion of the $7 billion trans-Alaska pipeline could be delayed for an undetermined period because state and federal overseers disagree with pipeline builders on the quality of about 1,700 steel pipe welds already installed.

The varying interpretations of pipe welds are contained in a $4.5 million audit of the 35,600 x-rays, or radiographs, of welds made to date on the pipeline project. The audit was conducted by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the consortium formed by eight major oil companies building the pipeline.

A summary of the audit results were obtained Friday by the Associated Press.

State officials in Juneau said if the project's completion is delayed three or four months beyond its scheduled target date of July 1977, Alaska has enough money in its treasury to meet the cost of running the government "but beyond that there will be some problems."

Larry Eppenbach, deputy commissioner of revenue,said during the first year of pipeline production, at 1.2 million barrels per day, Alaska stands to receive $520 million in severance taxes and royalties. The $900 million it received from the 1969 Prudhoe Bay lease sale already has been spent.

Further, oil company officials have said in the past that 85 per cent of the money used to build the pipeline is borrowed, and debt service on that money will amount to more than $1 billion.

Effenbach said that if, for example, the pipeline were delayed for a year, it could add substantially to that interest figure.

Sources who asked not to be identified told the Associated Press Friday a delay of several months could occur on the pipeline construction portion of the project if Alyeska is ordered by the Interior Department to dig up some disputed steel pipe welds already buried at river crossings along the pipeline route.

The finished tube will stretch 800 miles from Prudhoe Bay on the Arctic Coast to Valdez on the Gulf of Alaska. The 48-inch-wide pipeline is more than one-half installed. Completion is due by December 31.

Robert Miller, a spokesman for Alyeska, said of the audit Friday that "different interpretations can be placed on the (pipeline weld) radiographs. We have our interpretations and undoubtably the federal government inspectors will have their interpretations. There will be joint discussions held as often as necessary to resolve whatever interpretive differences may result."

Miller emphasized that in Alyeska's opinion, "we do not anticipate any delay in our schedule for completion of the pipeline ... the radiograph audit did not reveal any deficiencies which cannot be corrected without affecting the schedule. The final decision, however, is up to the federal government."

Vietnam war history begun

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—The Pentagon has begun a study, coordinated by former South Vietnamese generals, of the final two years of the Vietnam war.

The purpose of the study, according to U.S. Army Col. Paul Palmer, deputy commander of the Pentagon's Center for Military History, is to view the war through Vietnamese eyes and to look at the American effort from a Vietnamese perspective.

He denied that the study was an attempt to determine what forces led to the U.S. defeat in Vietnam. However, a U.S. Army officer familiar with the project said that the study could serve such a purpose.

The study will draw on knowledge of Vietnamese refugees who have settled in the United States. "We feel it is very important to know their feelings on things," said Palmer. "And knowing them will be good for our historians."

According to Palmer, the Pentagon has contracted with a defense research group called General Research Corp. to carry out the project. General Research of Sterling, Va., has a "roughly $250,000 contract" for the first year of the study, which began in March, said Palmer.

Palmer says the study could run three or more years. He said it would initially cover strictly military aspects of the war, but it could be expanded into other areas such as the U.S. pacification program.

He said that when the project is completed future American military officers can benefit from it by studying in military service schools the way in which American and Vietnamese military units worked together in battle.

In all, according to Palmer, the Pentagon plans to study 14 topics. They include logistics, the U.S. adviser system and pacification among others.

For Moslem-unity talks

Arafat invited to Syria

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The Islamic foreign ministers conference called Saturday for the expulsion of Israel from the United Nations. It also announced the creation of a $60 million fund to counter Israeli rule in occupied Arab territory. The 42-nation conference passed a resolution condemning Zionism as a "colonialist, expansionist, racist and imperialist doctrine," according to a communique issued at the end of the meeting.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian President Hafez Assad Saturday invited Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat to travel to Damascus for talks to try to avert a conflict between Syria and Lebanon's Moslem alliance.

The split between Syrian forces on one side and Moslem leftists and most Palestinian guerrillas on the other threatened to add another front to Lebanon's continuing Christian-Moslem civil war. However, one Palestinian unit, the Syrian-controlled Saiqa group, continued trying to stop attacks on Christian positions by the leftist alliance.

A spokesman for Arafat said he had not yet answered Assad's invitation.

Fighters on all sides ignored a new cease-fire call. A police spokesman said 68 persons were killed in the fighting Saturday.

"Skirmishes are continuing along all front lines. No one is respecting the cease-fire agreement," said a spokesman for the right-wing Phalange Party, which fields the largest Christian private army.

Christians were battling Moslem leftist forces along the front line dividing Beirut and around the edges of the 800-square mile Christian-held enclave north of the capital.

The latest of some three-dozen cease-fires in the 13-month war which has taken more than 18,500 lives was called by Premier Rashid Karami for midnight Friday.

A spokesman for the military coordination committee of Lebanese, Palestinian and Syrian officers which had arranged the cease-fire said it "hardly lasted 15 minutes."

Tension escalated as Syrian forces tried to control the military activities of the coalition of Moslem leftists and Palestinian guerrillas.

SAIQA issued a statement attacking the Lebanese Moslem fighters and those Palestinians supporting them as "terrorists."

In the Moslem-controlled sector of Beirut the leftists clashed several times with Saiqa forces, reportedly including Syrian troops in Saiqa uniforms.

But an immediate major confrontation appeared to have been averted in the northern port of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, when Palestinian troops of the Palestine Liberation Army obeyed an Arafat order to pull out of a Syrian-ordered crackdown on Lebanese Moslem leftists.

THE Palestine Liberation Army is nominally under the command of Arafat in his role as chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization, but its units are armed and equipped largely in Syria.

Arafat and other Palestinian leaders in Lebanon fear coming under the thumb of Syria and losing the freedom of action they have enjoyed in Lebanon.

At a rally supporting the Palestinian statehood movement, Moslem leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt delivered a thinly disguised attack on the Syrian president. He said a plot being carried out against leftist and Palestinian forces in Lebanon "was dressed as an Arab revolutionary but has an American-Zionist personality."

Soviet secret police arrest watchdog leader

New York Times Service

MOSCOW — Soviet authorities began cracking down Saturday on a dissident watchdog group formed three days ago to monitor the Soviet Union's compliance with the human rights provisions of the Helsinki declaration.

Yuri Orlov, the leader of the group, was picked up by three plainclothesmen and driven off for questioning as he walked along a street in southwest Moscow Saturday with another group member, Mikhail Bernshtam. Orlov, a physicist unemployed because of his dissident activities, was released after an hour of interrogation.

A few hours later, Tass, the official press agency, took the unusual step of confirming that Orlov had been picked up by the police and "officially warned of the inadmissibility of his anti-law actions" in connection with the new group.

Tass, which rarely acknowledges dissident activities, said that the warning was intended "to cut short Orlov's provocative activity as well as to prevent the perpetration by Orlov and persons connected with him of actions punishable by law."

The speed of the reaction by authorities underscored the Soviet Union's continuing sensitivity on the human rights issue, Particularly following criticism in the West that it has not lived up to the minimum standards set on humanitarian issues by the 35-nation European Security Conference that would up last summer at Helsinki.

The Kremlin has denounced Western efforts to monitor Soviet compliance as interference in Soviet internal affairs. It has also responded by accusing the West in turn of violating the human rights of its citizens.

However, the prospect of having Soviet citizens, even dissidents, watch its actions in a formal manner poses a more awkward problem for Moscow. Saturday's incident suggested that authorities planned to head off such a threat by treating it purely as anti-Soviet activity, which is a criminal offense under Soviet law.

Orlov told reporters after his release that security officers had called the new group illegal and warned that legal action would be brought if its "crude activities" continued.

Tass asserted that "it is difficult to qualify Orlov's actions in any other way than an attempt to question in the eyes of the international public the sincerity of the Soviet Union's efforts to undeviatingly implement the international obligations.

Meatless days hit cafes in Moscow

New York Times Service

MOSCOW — A campaign launched this month to save meat by having "meatless Thursdays" in Moscow cafes is pushed by authorities as intended to improve the variety of the Russian diet.

The program replaced meat with fish and other dishes on the local menus. The campaign does not include restaurants serving foreign tourists, who have been unaware of the lack of meat elsewhere.

"This will help improve the food pattern of Muscovites," Nikolai Zavyalov, who heads the city's board of public catering enterprises, was quoted as saying by the official Tass news agency Friday. Zavyalov said nutritional experts had approved the idea.

Though Soviet authorities have refused to admit it, the program seems aimed at conserving meat inventories, which have been running low in Moscow shops as well as in some provincial cities.

The extent of the shortage is not known. But it was reported earlier that Soviet meat production had dropped 11 per cent in the first three months of 1976.

Expected violence fails to break out on West Bank

NABLUS, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Scattered Palestinian unrest tested a mass Israeli security force on the West Bank Saturday, but serious violence failed to materialize on the anniversary of Israeli statehood.

The military command said troops in Jenin shot a 16-year-old Arab boy in the leg after he failed to obey orders to return home under a curfew.

No major rioting was reported in the West Bank or Israel. The statehood anniversary date recognized by non-Israelis has been a favorite target for past Arab violence. Israelis themselves observe the anniversary according to the Hebrew calender, which this year put it on May 5.

The military government put a curfew on East Jenin and the old quarter of Nablus after morning skirmishes with youths throwing stones. The curfew on Jenin was lifted by noon.

ARMORED cars rumbled through the streets of West Bank trouble centers and Israeli soldiers patrolled in groups, armed with assault guns, riot batons and teargas.

Troops pried open Arab shop doors in at least four West Bank towns, preempting a planned merchant strike against Israeli rule.

Units of Israel's paramilitary border police were pulled off their frontier outposts as an added security measure.

Troops also guarded the old city of Jerusalem, the site of frequent Arab outbreaks, from rooftop vantage points overlooking throngs of tourists.

The heavy precautions coincided with the continuing United Nations Security Council debate over the West Bank, where Palestinian demonstrations have left seven Arabs dead, and Israeli settlement policies are in dispute.

Cuban troops suffer heavy losses in Angola

LONDON (AP) — Cuban troops are suffering heavy casualties from guerrilla warfare in Angola three months after the Soviet-backed Popular Movement proclaimed victory over two pro-Western factions, the Sunday Telegraph claims.

The paper, without naming sources for its report, said some 1,500 Cuban soldiers have been killed in the "secret war" in the past few weeks.

The corpses are in a refrigerated ship anchored off Pointe Noire in the neighboring Congo, "presumably awaiting shipment back to Cuba for burial," the Telegram said.

Tons of detergents dumped on oil spill

MERA, Spain (AP) — Some 200 tons of detergent have been used to try to clean up an oil spill along 60 miles of the northwest Spanish coast, but fishermen say any shellfish that survive will probably taste of petroleum.

Oil continued to wash ashore Saturday, blackening the clam, mussel and oyster boats. It was the second time in six years that this area, famous for its seafood, has been hit by a large oil spill.

Officials said they have stopped the oil leaking from the wreck of the Spanish tanker Urquiola, half-sunk on a reef at the mouth of the La Coruna harbor 10 miles away. Estimates of the amount of oil poured into the sea since the ship went down Wednesday range from 35,000 barrels to more than 200,000.

A government tourism official told newsmen the situation was not as serious as first feared. The official said that if the estimated 520,000 barrels of oil believed still inside the tanker could be kept out of the sea, the beaches around La Coruna would be clean within one month.

Biologists fear the oil spill and the detergents may have destroyed much of the sea life in the area. They said fish could swim ahead of the oil as it spread, but that crustaceans and small marine life would be contaminated and killed.

Oceanography experts said the oil could be carried by gulf currents as far as the Caribbean in the next few months.

In 1970, a Norwegian tanker spilled oil at the La Coruna port entrance. It took four years for the clams to come back.

"If Mera is cleaned up, it will be God that does it," said one of the village's 50 fishermen. "We will need tides and tides and tides."

La Coruna Mayor Lieano Flores asked the government Friday to declare the spill a disaster and provide aid to the 5,000 fishermen in the area.

Officials Friday began questioning the 37 crewmen of the Urquiola, which was carrying Persian Gulf crude to a local refinery, to find out why it strayed from the safe channel and onto the reef.

The captain, Francisco Eduardo Rodriquez, died in the accident. The last to leave the ship, his oil-covered body was washed ashore Friday.

La Coruna port authorities said the ship was registered to the firm Naviera Artola S.A. of Bilbao, Spain. The oil belonged to the government-owned Petroliber Oil Co., and the cleanup effort was being paid for by the Spanish government, the authorities said.

Historian Samuel Eliot Morison dies at 88

By GUY DARST
Associated Press

BOSTON — Samuel Eliot Morison, chronicler of his state, his Navy, his country and his college, in histories characterized by elegant prose, died Saturday. He was 88.

Morison died at Massachusetts General Hospital of a stroke he suffered May 1 at his home on Beacon Hill, the house where he was born.

Twice winner of the Bancroft Prize in history and the Pulitzer Prize for biography, Morison two years ago completed — to rave reviews — the two-volume work he yearned all his life to do: "The European Discovery of America."

HIS textbook, "The Growth of the American Republic," written with Prof. Henry Steele Commager of Amherst College, was read by generations of high school and college students and was in print 40 years after the first edition. In the 1950s, it sold 50,000 copies a year.

A writer of great productivity who produced more than 50 books, Morison wrote the 15-volume official and monumental "History of U.S. Naval Operations in World War II" and the four-volume "Tercentennial History of Harvard University."

He still held the Harvard title "historian on the 300th anniversary of Harvard College." He retired as a Harvard professor in 1955, but he still had an office there.

He won the Bancroft Prize for the third volume of his war history and for the first volume, "The Northern Voyages," of the European discovery work.

Pulitzer Prizes were awarded to him for "Admiral of the Ocean Sea," a biography of Christopher Columbus, and "John Paul Jones: A Sailor's Biography."

Sailing and the sea were his lifelong passion and often were reflected in Morison's choice of subject — Columbus, Jones, Matthew Perry, Samuel de Champlain, the Navy, the maritime history of Massachusetts.

A NO-NONSENSE son of one of Boston's famous families, Morison was a historian who had to see for himself. He served on 11 ships in World War II, seeing combat several times.

For his Columbus and European discovery works, he retraced the sea routes of his subjects. Though sometimes in later years he flew part of the way, he was always careful to duplicate his subject's departures and landfalls.

His second wife, the former Priscilla Barton, accompanied him on many voyages, even on the 40,000-mile round-the-world retracing of Magellan's voyage while she was dying.

Mrs. Morison, who died in 1973, was the subject of the dedication that always appeared in Morison's later books: "To the lady from Baltimore." In recent years, they had lived in Northeast Harbor, Maine, as well as in Boston.

His first wife died in 1945.

Another historian of America, Bernard Bailyn of Harvard, remarked recently on Morison's insistence on literally covering the ground — or water.

"For my judgment, he was the greatest narrative historian this country ever produced," Bailyn said.

"His personalization of his work made him a better writer than the great 19th century historians such as MacCaulay, Treveleyan, Parkman and Bancroft."

At Oxford University Press in New York, Executive Editor Sheldon Meyer recalled Morison: "He was the ultimate professional."

Morison, he said, drafted his manuscripts four or five times in longhand before getting them typed and setting to work on them with his editors.

"He had no truck for nonsense of any kind. He is the natural heir to Parkman and the greatest historian of that kind since Parkman," Meyer said.

Francis Parkman, historian of the settling of the American West, died in 1893.

Morison himself asked a rhetorical question of great explorers in a 1974 interview with Boston Magazine.

"Why did they do it? Why did they risk it? Why did they keep going back?"

And he answered his own question after drawing a long breath: "I wish I knew."

A friend, poet Archibald Macleish, wrote in the city of Boston's official 1975 Bicentennial poem:

"... AND YOU, our Yankee Admiral of the Ocean Sea,

"come too, come walk with me.

"You know, none better how the Bay wind blows

"fierce in the soul as in the streets its ocean snow ..."

Macleish said in a recent interview, "I think he was a great man. If any New Englander ever knew the depth of the New England soul, he did."

Funeral services are scheduled for 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Church of the Advent in Boston.

Morison is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Edward Spingarn of Washington, D.C., Mrs. H. Brooks Beck of Canton, Mass., and Catharine Cooper-Morison of London, England, and eight grandchildren.

A son, Peter G. Morison, died in March 1969.

Groom killed in car crash

ALEXANDRIA, Neb. (AP) — A bridegroom and two members of the wedding party were among those killed in a two-car head-on crash early Saturday as they returned from a bachelor party near here.

Dead were Dennis Cerle, 21, of Daykin, the groom; Lloyd Willis Niederklein, 23, of Lincoln, brother of the bride; Larry W. Meeske, 28, of Lincoln, brother-in-law of the bride, and James D. Strain, 22, of Alexandria, driver of the second car.

Four other persons were injured.

Six solons hit for consumer apathy

WASHINGTON (AP) Three senators and three congressmen "failed to cast a single vote in the interest of consumers" during a recent 1½-year period, a lobbying group affiliated with Ralph Nader said Saturday.

Missing

My brothers and I are trying to learn the whereabouts of another brother. We think he was arrested about 16 to 18 months ago. We don't know the charge. He has a history of drug abuse and isn't completely mentally competent. Last December we heard he was in prison in Chino, but when my brothers went there they found someone else with a similar name. We want to know where he is, regardless of his legal status. He's our brother, and we care for him. Please help us. N.M., Long Beach.

Your brother has been in prison at the California Men's Colony at San Luis Obispo since last September and has a pending parole date of Oct. 26. We have given you his prison number and mailing address. Anyone seeking addresses of any inmate in the California state prison system can contact the Information Office, State Department of Corrections, 714 P St., Sacramento, Calif. 95814, (916) 445-4950. Give them the inmate's full name and date of birth. Most prisoners in a jail in Los Angeles County are listed with the sheriff's Inmate Location and Booking Information Office at 680-9600. Inmates in federal prisons are listed with the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, 320 First St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20534, Attention Inmate Locator. A person who writes them should give his full name, address, phone number, association with the prisoner, the prisoner's full name, possible aliases, date of birth and possible offenses. The prisoner's address and number will be mailed to the letter writer.

Co-op

We are a group of senior citizens on fixed incomes, and we'd like to know if there are any food-buying clubs in Long Beach. J.C., Long Beach.

The Alternative Market, 702 Cedar Ave., is a food-buying cooperative whose members save on the cost of food by buying it in large quantities at wholesale prices. The food is purchased at wholesale outlets in Los Angeles and sold to members Thursdays from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m., Fridays from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from noon to 5 p.m. The variety of food is limited, but includes fresh produce, dairy products, bread, chicken and fish. To join, you can attend one of the distribution sessions. A $10 membership fee per family is required, and members must donate at least three hours a week to the co-op because all responsibilities are shared on a rotating basis. For more information, you can call 432-9502.

Thrifty

I'm interested in investing my money in the certificates of deposit offered by certain thrift and loan associations. How safe are such investments? M.C., Paramount.

Unlike virtually all bank and savings and loan accounts, deposits with thrift and loan associations, which basically are finance companies, are not federally insured, although they are insured by a private company. By state law thrift and loan companies must belong to the Thrift Guaranty Corp. of California, a private, nongovernment association. This corporation collects a fee from each member company to insure its accounts up to $10,000 each, according to a spokesman for the California Department of Corporations, which regulates such firms. Because the thrift and loan industry is self-insured, the spokesman said some investors believe there may be more risk involved than with banks and savings and loan associations. For this reason, state law prohibits such firms from using the term "savings" in their advertisements; they must refer to depositors' accounts as investments. Generally, thrift and loans pay slightly higher interest.

Unsnarl

A year ago you helped me straighten out a problem with my Medi-Cal stickers. I need your help again. The stickers for my daughter and me are supposed to be mailed to us each month, but for a long time I have had to go down to the Department of Public Social Services office monthly to pick them up. I don't have a car, and it is a hardship for me to go there. My daughter is 10 and has a heart condition, and I need the stickers for her, especially in case of an emergency. C.S., Los Angeles.

The problem should be straightened out now. We contacted DPSS' public relations office for you, and hours later we were informed that your Medi-Cal stickers had been mailed to the prepaid health plan group you joined some time ago and the ones you picked up each month weren't supposed to be given to you. Your social worker has contacted you and explained the mixup, and, according to the public relations office, the social worker will help you cancel your unwanted membership in the health plan group. Then, in about four to six weeks, you should start getting your stickers in the mail.

Rockefeller sees victory for Ford

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, completing a Bicentennial visit under tight security, reaffirmed his support Saturday for President Ford and said he was confident that Ford would win the Republican presidential nomination.

"I think he will be nominated and will go on to victory," Rockefeller told reporters before boarding Air Force II for the return to New York.

Earlier, hundreds of German police sealed off St. Paul's Church in downtown Frankfurt, where Rockefeller and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt addressed 1,000 guests at the German celebration of the American Bicentennial.

Authorities feared that leftists would attempt to disrupt the event, which coincided with the funeral in West Berlin of anarchist leader Ulrike Meinhof.

Demonstrations were banned in Frankfurt, and only a few nonviolent protesters were seen outside the church.

In a 35-minute speech, Rockefeller appealed to the Western allies to beef up naval power because of Soviet naval threats.

"We are being challenged by the worldwide growth of the Soviet Union's naval power — in ships, submarines, in missiles and in technology," the vice president warned.

He said the time was at hand "to greatly accelerate the rebuilding of the free-world naval power" to counter the Soviets.

Concorde due as bid for ban opens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversial Concorde supersonic passenger jet will make its first trip in two years to the United States on Monday when French President Giscard d'Estaing begins a six-day visit.

The flight will come only two days before a federal appeals court begins hearing arguments aimed at banning the fast but noisy aircraft from landing in scheduled service at two U.S. airports. It will come only seven days before the Concorde is to begin regularly scheduled flights into Washington's Dulles International Airport.

Giscard d'Estaing is to travel on the Concorde to Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, the same airport that President Ford uses for his travels aboard Air Force One.

THE PLANE, which can fly at nearly 1,400 miles per hour, also will be used for the French president's trip from Washington to Houston and from New Orleans to the Caribbean Island of Guadeloupe and to Paris, the State Department said.

Giscard d'Estaing will use conventional subsonic jets from President Ford's fleet for trips from Washington to Philadelphia and to Yorktown, Va., and for the trip from Houston to Lafayette, La. and New Orleans.

Although the Concorde wil be operated above the speed of sound during the Atlantic crossings, the plane will be flown subsonically across the United States. Federal law prohibits supersonic flights by commercial aireraft over the 48 contiguous states.

The Concorde has been certified as airworthy and already is operating commercially between London and the Persian Gulf nation of Bahrain and between Paris and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

The high temperature at Long Beach Airport Saturday was 70, while the low Saturday morning was 61.

Bomb kills three Irish policemen

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A booby-trap bomb believed set by Irish Republican Army guerrillas killed three police officers and badly wounded a fourth Saturday, authorities reported.

They said it was the highest police casualty toll in a single incident since sectarian warfare erupted in this British province in 1969.

Another policeman and five civilians were killed in Saturdan night bombings and gunfire.

Portugal shuts doors on journalist's trial

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The trial of a journalist accused of slandering Portugal's president has been closed to spectators, even though Portugal's new constitution calls for public trials.

Judge Herminio Moreira Romas refused Saturday to say why he ordered spectators out of the courtroom at the beginning of the trial of Mrs. Vera Lagoa on Friday.

Peru's interior struck by quake registering 6

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The Geophysical Institute reported an earthquake registering six on the Richter scale struck a central Peruvian jungle Saturday.

It pinpointed the location as near the village of Satipo some 280 miles east of Lima and said the tremor was recorded at 2:55 p.m. PDT.

The institute said that because of lack of communications with the area it was not known if there were any casuaties or damage.

On the Richter scale, every increase of one number, say from magnitude 5.5 to magnitude 6.5, means the ground motion is 10 times greater. Some experts say the actual amount of energy released may be 30 times greater.

In populated areas, an earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 can cause moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 can be severe. A 7 reading is a "major earthquake, capable of heavy damage; 8 is a "great" earthquake, capable of tremendous damage. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 registered 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Wild parties led to Mayer

and Jack remembered the conversation about Mayer.

"Mr. O'Neil asked Mr. Mansell 'Didn't you tell him to tell the District Attorney about that?' and Mr. Mansell answered 'Yes,' " Lt. Henry said. "Mr. Mansell very often tells me to tell the District attorney something and when I do I log it—either a phone call or a letter or whatever."

However, Henry said Saturday, "I just re-checked my records and I find no such notation. Which means I apparently did not relay that information by phone. I may very well have relayed the information in any number of conversations that I have with the DA's office but I honestly cannot remember whether I did or not.

Thus, he concluded, "Mr. Mansell obviously believed that his statement Friday about being 'aware of suspicions involving Mr. Mayer's activities last December at which time the Long Beach Police Department brought these concerns to our attention' was correct."

The request for an investigation of Mayer's alleged solicitation of more than $50,000 in bribes since 1971 came from Long Beach architects James Coppedge and Claflin A. Ballance, according to the District Attorney's office. Bruce Campbell, head of the DA's Special Investigations unit, said the two men came to his office last Jan. 21 with that request. Both will be immune from prosecution, the DA's office says.

Subsequent investigations, detailed in a 36-page affadavit by DA investigator William R. Burnett, revealed details of the alleged bribes in connection with six multimillion dollar construction and development projects which the firm handled. These ranged from $200 to the $25,141 in Mexican 50-peso gold coins which police say the architects turned over to Mayer Friday morning.

The information which came to Lt. Henry about the swinging Marina Pacifica parties is borne out in Burnett's affadavit. In that statement, Coppedge says Mayer once described the "rendezvous and party" condominium at Marina Pacifica and "parties tending to be ribald." Mayer told the architects, "We keep things of a very private nature at Marina Pacifica," according to the affadavit.

Meanwhile, neither Coppedge nor Ballance were available for comment, both reportedly having gone out of town for the weekend.

Before he left for Capistrano with his girl friend, Christine Hastings, Mayer reportedly retained a Los Angeles attorney to handle his case. His arraignment is scheduled for next Friday morning in Long Beach Municipal Court.

Energy official blasts Prop. 15 nuclear cutbacks

Associated Press

A federal energy official told a congressional subcommittee Saturday that California "cannot forego the nuclear energy option."

Robert D. Thorne, chief of the Energy Research and Development Administration's (ERDA) San Francisco office, cautioned against nuclear cutbacks implied in Proposition 15.

He told the House subcommittee on Energy Research and Development and Demonstration: "If Proposition 15 passes, the utilization of nuclear power as a viable energy option will be deferred 20 to 30 years.

Considering our precarious energy position, I feel quite strongly that California cannot forego the nuclear energy option."

ERDA Regional Administrator William Arntz told the five committee members meeting in Los Angeles that California can't expect to fill its energy needs with oil and gas from other areas if it rejects nuclear power.

"Unfortunately, California cannot rely on resources such as Alaskan oil, Northwest power, or the coal, water or land resources of the Southwest. All of these resources are already committed to meet increasing national or local energy needs," Arntz said.

Arntz refuted the findings of a University of Texas study which concluded that restrictions in Proposition 15 would have minimal effects if California could secure adequate supplies of alternate energy sources.

Israel bid to sell Austria jets told

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — An Austrian newspaper said Sunday that Israel has offered to sell Austria jet fighter planes for nearly 20 per cent less than U.S., French and Swedish manufacturers.

Austria plans to buy 20 fighters at an estimated total cost of about $100 million to replace its old Swedish-built Saab aircraft.

The newspaper Kronenzeitung said that the Israeli plane offered was the Kfir, which is similar to the French Mirage.

Marina Pacifica plans to fix cracking floors

determine what was causing the cracks in the floor, confirmed Carpenter's statements, but cautioned, "There is absolutely no danger."

Curtis said the building supports were erected to specifications required by the code in 1972, when the construction plans received final approval, but that in 1973, the code was revised to increase the weight support requirements.

He said the project will consist of adding reinforced concrete supports and masonry walls to about half of the existing pilings and that the additional support will prevent further cracking of the floors.

Plans for the repairs have been submitted to the city Building and Safety Department, but the staff hasn't had a chance to review them yet, according to Cyril Blesener, superintendant of building inspection.

Blesener also said that the building was built to code, "or it never would have passed the final inspection."

The condominium complex was designed in 1970 by Long Beach architects James Coppedge and Claflin A. Ballance.

On Friday, city Planning Director Ernest Mayer Jr. was arrested on charges of soliciting and accepting $50,000 in bribes from the architects.

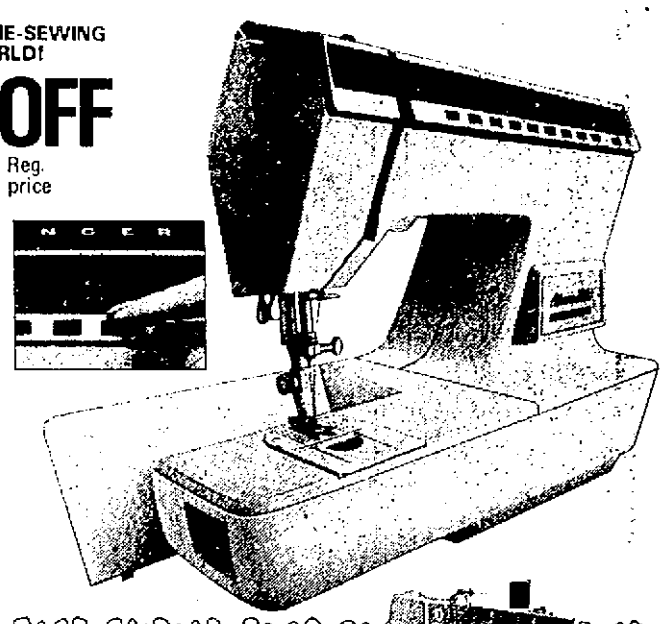

Coppedge and Ballance, who were granted immunity by the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office, told investigators they paid bribes to Mayer for his help in pushing through six multimillion-dollar real estate developments in Long Beach — including Marina Pacifica.

Little-known court order ties up Hughes' assets

In the New York case, the judgment entered against Hughes was for more than $145 million; TWA claimed it was entitled to a half-billion dollars.

The importance attached to the control of the stock certificates was underscored by Hughes executives themselves in a little-noticed lawsuit filed in New Castle County Chancery Court in Wilmington, Del., earlier this month.

In a nine-page complaint signed by William E. Rankin, described as "a duly authorized officer" of Summa Corp., the company acknowledged that its stock had been seized as a result of a court order issued April 18, 1962, and that the "sequestration order and seizure remain in effect."

The Summa Corp. complaint asked the court to:

—Recognize Houston attorney William Rice Lummis as Summa's sole stockholder. Lummis was a first cousin of Hughes and a member of the Houston law firm that has long represented Hughes business interests.

—Cancel the outstanding Summa stock certificates and "issue new certificates in the name of the person determined by (the) court to be the owner of (Summa's) stock."

Summa contended the court action was necessitated by conflicting demands and claims on the estate and because the company needed "to have someone who can effectively act as its stockholder for the orderly conduct of those aspects of its business which require stockholder action."

At the same time Summa executives filed that lawsuit, aimed at maintaining control of the Hughes empire, a companion legal proceeding was initiated in the office of the New Castle County Register of Wills by Mrs. Anette Gano Lummis, the mother of William Rice Lummis, who, as Hughes' aunt, is his closest known surviving relative.

SERVING NOTICE on Hughes-happy public is John Kutosky, placing sign in window of downtown Los Angeles stationery store as purported Hughes wills proliferated.

—AP Wirephoto

The legal papers were filed on Mrs. Lummis' behalf by the same Wilmington law firm that is representing Summa and has represented Hughes in his TWA case, Morris, Nichols, Arsht and Tunnell.

In her petition, Mrs. Lummis, who is 85 and lives in Houston, asked that her son be appointed to administer the Hughes estate in Delaware. He was so appointed.

The Hughes estate in Delaware, of course, consists of the stock certificates of Summa, which was organized in that state.

When Lummis was appointed administrator, a $100 million bond was posted on his behalf by Summa, with William E. Rankin, the Summa executive, signing the bond.

At the same time, William Marvel, vice chancellor of the New Castle County Chancery Court, authorized Summa to temporarily recognize Lummis as the company's "sole stockholder" pending a final determination.

A hearing on the Summa petition, the first in what is expected to be a long series of court hearings, probably will be scheduled early this summer.

The legal actions indicate that Summa executives and members of one side of the Hughes family have banded together in an effort to control the late billionaire's business organization.

That group includes long-time Hughes aides and the relatives of Hughes' mother, Allene Gano Hughes. (Mrs. Lummis was a sister of Mrs. Hughes.)

It does not include the relatives of Hughes' father or the public administrator in Los Angeles County, which is seeking to administer the estate publicly to avoid even the appearance of any impropriety.

As an attorney representing relatives on the paternal side of the Hughes family told a Los Angeles County judge at a hearing on April 27, in support of a move to have the public administrator administer the Hughes estate:

"This will be like the Kennedy assassination. We have a very fundamental interest in obtaining credibility. We want the public to know."

But as matters now stand, there will be no distribution of the assets of Summa as long as the Delaware court order sequestering the company's stock remains in effect.

There is no indication the court order will be lifted in the near future, and attorneys familiar with the case say TWA probably would vigorously oppose any such action.

They reason that for TWA the court order sequestering the stock represents the airline's only assurance that it would be able to collect any judgment that might be rendered in the case.

As has been the case over the years with many business dealings of the eccentric Hughes, the story underlying the origins of the court order tying up the Summa stock is buried in a maze of legal documents found in courthouses in two states.

It is a story that grows out of:

—Hughes' long-standing refusal to appear in court proceedings in which he was named as a defendant, whether the action was brought by an agency of the federal government, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission, or by a large corporation, such as TWA.

—One of the longest, costliest and most bitter legal battles in American business history, which TWA and Hughes have waged against each other for 15 years now, a battle which—barring an unforeseen settlement—will go on for some years to come.

—A subtle legal maneuver initiated in 1962 by the architect of TWA's legal action against Hughes, John F. Sonnett, a prestigious Wall Street lawyer and onetime Justice Department antitrust chief, who since has died.

It all started back in the mid-1950s, when the nation's airlines were getting ready to enter the jet age and Howard Hughes, through Hughes Tool, owned 78 per cent of the stock of TWA.

After Pan American World Airways placed the first order for jets in 1955, one airline after another began entering into contracts for the manufacture and delivery of the new equipment. The planes were scheduled to be put into service in 1959 and 1960.

The one major exception in the scramble to order the jet aircraft was TWA. Hughes, as was his custom, procrastinated.

When he finally decided the following year to place an order—a decision that represented a substantial financial commitment for any airline—Hughes devised a financial plan peculiar to his personal business empire.

The planes were to be purchased not by TWA but by Hughes Tool Co., which in turn would then lease the planes to the airline.

The plan, as outlined in court records, had two purposes:

—To allow Hughes to use the tool company's investment in the jets to offset the company's soaring profits, thereby sharply reducing Hughes' federal income-tax payments.

—To allow Hughes to maintain firm control of the airline—a long-cherished Hughes business practice. If he were to borrow money in the traditional money markets, the lending institutions might impose restriction on the way he ran TWA.

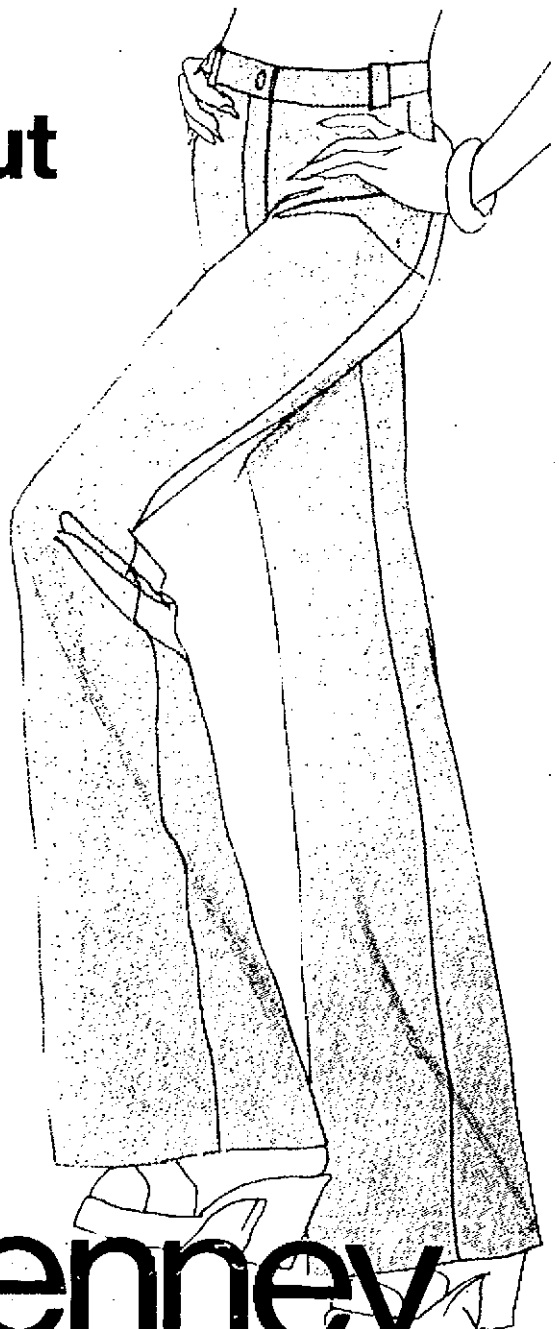

So it was that in 1961 TWA went into U.S. District Court in New York City and filed a damage suit against Hughes and Hughes Tool Co.

But Hughes remained in seclusion, beyond the reach of process-servers. And even when the reclusive billionaire's attorney finally accepted the subpoena on his behalf, Hughes refused to appear in court.

Huge productive capacity handicaps manufacturers

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press

If you wanted to buy a Lockheed L1011 TriStar jetliner, you certainly wouldn't have to wait for delivery — the scandal-wracked aerospace giant has five of the jumbo jets sitting out on a desert runway. Of course, you could also buy one from Trans World Airlines or Eastern.

"We don't like being in competition with our customers, but we have to face reality," says Chuck de Bedts, vice president of commercial marketing for Lockheed-California Co., the division that builds the L1011.

Production far ahead of sales

The reality is that all three U.S. manufacturers of commercial airliners can produce far more planes than they can sell. Lockheed, for example, sold only one TriStar in 1975, but it could have manufactured 120.

This overcapacity, partially a result of rapid expansion by the industry during the boom years of the late '60s, fed the intensely competitive climate of the early '70s. Payments to foreign agents became a common practice as the domestic market contracted and a scramble developed for sales abroad.

At least $270 million in legal and illegal payments to promote sales abroad have been made by Lockheed, Boeing and McDonnell Douglas, according to recent public statements and the published results of a congressional investigation. Lockheed has acknowledged paying $25 million abroad in bribes to "foreign officials and political parties." More than $7 million was paid in Japan alone for the sale of TriStars.

Lockheed pushed not only the sale of commercial planes, but of warplanes as well, although the company has not broken down which payments applied to which type of plane. It was reported last month that Lockheed paid $2 million to high Italian officials to arrange the sale of C130 military transports.

McDonnell Douglas has said that its payments were made only for the sale of commercial airliners. Boeing has not provided a breakdown but most of the planes it manufactures are commercial airliners.

All the commercial planes used by the world's airlines are produced by Lockheed, Boeing and McDonnell Douglas in the United States, and by a consortium of European companies known as the Airbus Industries.

BOEING, which makes about 58 per cent of the commercial airliners sold worldwide, estimates it is using about 15 per cent of its manufacturing capacity for these planes. It produced 171 commercial airliners last year. McDonnell, with 20 per cent to 30 per cent of the market today, manufactured 302 commercial planes in 1968 and 85 last year. Lockheed, which shares the rest of the market with Airbus, could turn out 10 TriStars a month, but plans to produce only about 18 in the next two years.

Sales of both military and commercial aircraft peaked around 1968. Since then, Defense Department procurements and orders from commercial airlines have steadily declined, industry sources agree.

More than a half-dozen American companies produced 4,481 military planes in 1967 and 4,440 in 1968, according to the Washington-based Aerospace Industry Association. By 1973, the figure had slipped to 1,243. The latest AIA statistic available, for 1974, is 1,000 planes. Figures on 1975 military aircraft production have not been compiled.

The AIA does not provide yearly breakdowns of the number of commercial airliners sold worldwide. But the jetliner market "is our darkest cloud at the moment," said Carlyle Jones, AIA vice president.

"THE VALUE of transports on order in 1968 was about $9.5 billion. At the end of September, 1975, the figure was $6.25 billion," representing a considerable drop in production because the cost of making each plane had risen so much.

Airline travel heyday in '60s

The heyday of airline travel occurred in the late 1960s, when the number of air miles traveled by paying passengers was growing at a 15 per cent annual rate. Then, in short order, airlines were hit by a number of damaging developments:

— Business turned down worldwide, sharply reducing executive and vacation travel spending.

— The price of aircraft fuel skyrocketed, cutting deeply into revenues in a regulated industry where cost increases cannot be automatically passed along to customers.

— New federal and state regulations on noise and air pollution forced airlines into expensive plane modifications.

These developments cut into airline profits — the five biggest domestic carriers all lost money last year — and choked off orders for new planes.

As orders from domestic carriers began to dry up in 1969 and 1970, aircraft manufacturers stepped up their efforts abroad. Boeing and McDonnell estimate that about two-thirds of their sales in recent years have been to foreign airlines. Lockheed puts the figure at 60 per cent.

"Our current sales are primarily foreign sales because the U.S. lines are hurting, and they don't have the money to invest in equipment that they used to," said E.H. "Tex" Boullioun, president of the Boeing Commercial Airplane Co. of Seattle.

To promote these foreign sales, McDonnell Douglas says about $2.5 million in "foreign fees, commissions and consultant payments" were paid between 1970 and June 30, 1975 "under circumstances which indicate payments were, or might have been, received by individuals who might legally be considered officials of foreign governments."

L1011 suffered serious reverses

Boeing estimates it has paid about $70 million in commissions to foreign representatives since 1970, including employes of foreign governments in four or five instances.

McDONNELL'S statement notes that the company's payments amounted to less than one-twentieth of 1 per cent of the value of its foreign sales from 1970 to 1975. Boeing points out that its commissions were about 1.3 per cent of the $5.5 billion worth of commercial jetliners it sold abroad during the period.

By contrast, Lockheed's acknowledged $200 million in bribes and in legal commissions, fees and consultant payments constituted a little more than 5 per cent of its $3.8 billion in foreign plane sales since 1970.

The company entered into a consent decree April 13 concerning charges by the Securities and Exchange Commission that it made more than $25 million in secret payments to officials of foreign governments. In the decree, Lockheed admitted for the first time that payments had been made directly to foreign officials. Previously, the company had maintained that the money was paid to agents who then passed it on.

IN CONSENTING to an injunction sought by the SEC, the company agreed to form a seven-member committee to investigate all its illegal activities and payments, with the findings to be made public.

Lockheed got out of the commercial airliner business in 1961 after losing a considerable amount of money on the Electra, which was outsold by Boeing's 707 and McDonnell's DC7. The company's decision to re-enter the market came in 1968, with airline travel at its height.

The move was a major gamble and Lockheed went into it with disadvantages. For one thing, the company's long absence meant that it had to build a sales and support staff from scratch. It also was offering a single product — the TriStar — while both Boeing and McDonnell had "families" of airplanes — different models to meet varying needs of airlines around the world.

"Our general policy has always been to blanket the airlines' needs as best we can with short, intermediate and long-range airplanes," explained Boullioun. Robert Hage, marketing vice president for Douglas Aircraft Co., the McDonnell division that builds jetliners, agrees that the "family" policy of Boeing and McDonnell has given them a substantial advantage over Lockheed.

Even so, Lockheed's L1011, which competes against Boeing's 747 and McDonnell's DC10, might have done better had the program not suffered serious reverses before the first plane ever came off the assembly line. Costs soared. The British firm of Rolls Royce, which was to build the engines for the L1011, declared bankruptcy. Lockheed's main plant in Burbank was damaged slightly by an earthquake.

A government-guaranteed loan of $250 million averted a Lockheed bankruptcy in 1971, a year after the firm had borrowed $400 million from 24 banks, and the company finally got its L1011 into the marketplace — late.

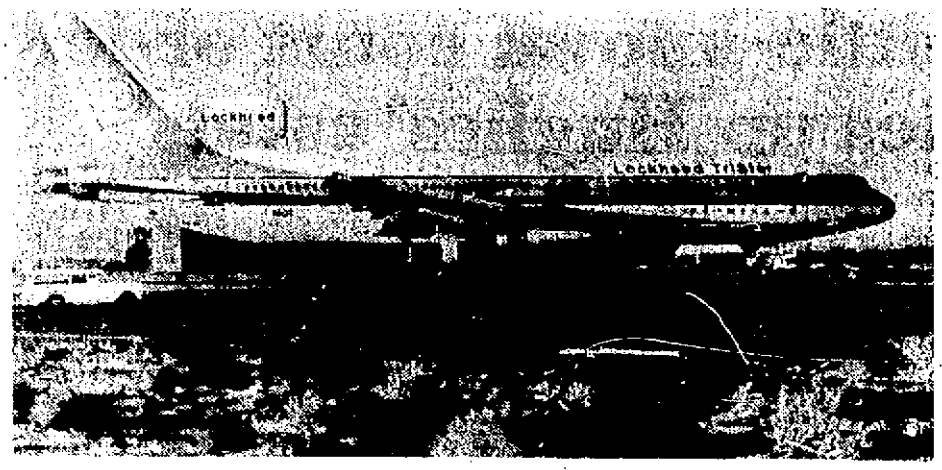

A. C. Kotchian, who resigned in February as Lockheed's vice chairman and chief operating officer in the wake of the payoff disclosures, told Senate investigators that the company spread money around in Japan to "get more time" for the L1011 to come to market.

Ironically, Lockheed makes money in almost every area except the L1011. These include missiles, shipbuilding and military aircraft. But the L1011 program could mean losses of up to $500 million if the company is forced to write off its development and production-line costs.

Lockheed's new chairman, Robert Haack says the consent decree involving the SEC will allow the company to "move forward with discussions on financial restructuring with our banks." Lockheed owes its various creditors $821 million.

Whatever the fate of Lockheed, aerospace executives agree that no manufacturer is going to set any sales records in the near future.

"People are just going to have to accept the fact that air transportation is a maturing industry," says Boullioun. "Whereas we used to grow 12 to 14 per cent a year, we're now predicting a 5 to 5.5 per cent growth rate until 1985."

LOCKHEED'S L1011—PLENTY AROUND, JUST BEGGING FOR BUYERS

General Tire a unique SEC bribe probe case

By RICHARD PHALON
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The three O'Neil brothers — Thomas F., Michael G. and John — like to say they run the General Tire and Rubber Co. as a troika, with no particular dedication to such conventional trappings of the executive suite as organization tables, flow charts and management concepts.

That free-form style has made General Tire, founded by the late William O'Neil 60 years ago, one of the industry's most profitable companies.

At the same time, in the opinion of some securities analysts, General Tire is still so much of a family-run business that the company was particularly vulnerable to the kind of charges the Securities and Exchange Commission made against it last Monday.

"THE O'NEILS EACH run their own show in their own separate areas of responsibility," one securities analyst said. "You have to accept the possibility that some things happened underneath them that they didn't know anything about. On the other hand, General tends to take its tone from the top."

The SEC's allegations included contentions that General, the industry's fifth-largest tire producer, had made illegal political contributions at home, bribed foreign government officials in an effort to get an edge on some of its American competitors abroad, breached foreign currency laws and filed financial reports that overlooked the existence of illegal slush funds.

General Tire consented to an injunction in which it neither denied nor admitted the validity of the SEC's allegations. As part of the settlement, General Tire agreed to assign a five-man committee of outside directors to make their investigation of the charges.

Many of the charges were similar to allegations the SEC had filed against other major corporations such as the Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the Gulf Oil Corp. and the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co.

There are some distinct differences in the General Tire case, however. Some of the SEC's allegations about bribery of foreign officials in Chile, Morocco and Rumania repeat charges that have been made before the Federal Communications Commission. They were voiced by a group that is competing for the television-station license that a General Tire subsidiary, RKO General Inc., holds on WNAC-TV in Boston.

The record in that case is still open. A judgment against RKO, based on the bribery allegations against the parent company, could cost General Tire its prosperous Boston TV outlet. An adverse ruling by the FCC could also conceivably lead to challenges of RKO's operation of its three other television stations (in New York, Los Angeles and Memphis) and nine radio stations.

Coast Guard moving to new quarters

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

The Coast Guard is going to make a move next weekend and hopefully it will go so smoothly nobody will notice.

After 12 years in the Heartwell Building at 19 Pine Avenue in downtown Long Beach, the 11th Coast Guard District plans to move into more modern and spacious quarters in the new Union Bank Building, at Magnolia Avenue and Ocean Boulevard.

Capt. Walter F. Guy, chief of staff, said the move to the bank building at 400 Oceangate, will start promptly following "Retreat" Friday afternoon. Unless the commercial movers run into a distress situation, the move is expected to be completed by "Taps" Saturday evening.

MAKING THE move will be the district's 175 civilian and military personnel, excepting those manning the Rescue Coordination Center and the Communications Center. Those critical nerve centers will move in about two weeks after new centers are set up, tested, and manned. With a flip of a switch the move will be made electronically without a break in search and rescue operations or in communications.

Telephone numbers will not change nor will radio procedures to reach "Coast Guard Radio Long Beach."

In the bank building the Coast Guard will occupy half of the fifth floor and all of the sixth, seventh, eighth, and nineth floors.

Two factors taken into consideration by the General Services Administration in arranging the proposed move were that the lease with the owners of the Heartwell Building expired in September and that the building might be razed if redevelopment plans to convert the downtown area into a six-square block shopping center reach fruition.

Honored

Joseph M. Costello, 78, one of the best-known Southland waterfront personalities, will be saluted Memorial Day during a day-long party to which sponsors have limited attendance to 1,000.

The testimonial affair will begin at noon in the San Pedro Elks Club followed by a barbecue steak dinner starting at 3 p.m.

Costello started a ship supply and chandler business in Wilmington in 1938 after a sea-going career that began when he was 18. He has held a chief engineer's ticket for 50 years.

He is being honored for his long-time service to the Los Angeles-Long Beach maritime community.

Sponsors are Bethlehem Steel, Cavanaugh Machine Co, and Todd Shipyards. Cosponsors are the organizations to which Costello belongs and include; Bilge Club, Binnacle Club, Catholic Maritime Club, Mariners of Land and Sea, Los Angeles-Long Beach Propeller Club, San Pedro Elks Club, and Port Engineers.

Accused

Latest incident in the long and continuing feud between Los Angeles Harbor Department's top management and the department's director of planning and research, Donald Walsh, is a deputy general manager's memo sent to Walsh accusing him of plagiarism.

William Clockson, the department's second in command, chastised the planning director for using a chart in the recently-published Comprehensve Master Plan which Walsh had prepared. The chart showed the size and number of ships which could and could not enter the relatively shallow port channels.

CLOCKSON said the chart originally had been published by Clarkson Registery, a company that certifies and registers ships. Walsh admitted the chart had been published previously by the company but said he had permission to reprint it. He said it was unfortunate that during the make-up and printing of the master plan a line of type crediting the company was inadvertently omitted.

"The memo is just another act of harassment," Walsh claimed.

"Had Clockson asked me about it, I would have told him I had permission to reprint the chart before charging me with stealing someone else's work," he said.

WALSH WAS in another hot-seat recently after he sent a confidential letter to the Board of Harbor Commissioners. In the letter he charged Fred B. Crawford, harbor department general manager, of conducting a "Watergate to coverup his lying." Several days later, after the commission failed to take any action, and accusing the commission of "sweeping the matter under the rug," he sent copies to the press.

He was called before the commission and chastised for leaking the matter to the news media.

The commission has failed—at least in open meetings—to consider any of Walsh's accusations.

Walsh has pending a lawsuit against the harbor commission and its individual members for $9,600 which he claimns he should have been paid but was not during three months he served as acting general manager during the first three months of 1974. The suit was to have been heard in April but was postponed until August.

Rumors originating in Washington, D.C. hint that the Howard Hughes—CIA multimillion-dollar spy ship will be bought by the Los Angeles Harbor Department, moved to the port, and converted into a hotel, maritime museum, and convention center.

Health plan would enrich doctors, Tunney claims

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., told a Long Beach-area rally Friday that a national health insurance program this year would enrich doctors and threaten runaway inflation and bankruptcy.

The $145 billion program implemented among the nation's short supply of doctors would only "make doctors billionaires instead of millionaires."

He blamed the doctor shortage on the American Medical Association "which decided 35 years ago to limit the number of doctors produced and the kinds of services nurses and paramedics could provide in order to increase the incomes of doctors. They succeeded. Those incomes have been going up smartly, faster than in any other profession.

"We've not had the guts, for 40 years, to break up the AMA cartel."

SPEAKING at Local 148, UAW Hall, 3971 Pixie Ave., Lakewood, Tunney said he supports the concept of national health care but that it must be done in a step-by-step, rational manner.

"We need to substantially increase the number of slots available in medical schools and increase the kinds of services nurses and paramedics may be licensed by the state to perform," he said.

He charged that the Nixon administration failed to "spend a dime" of some $50 million authorized for medical school construction.

Tunney acknowledged to a questioner the sensitivity of Prop. 15, the nuclear power plants initiative on the June 8 primary ballot, but said he would vote "No."

Noting that he was the only statewide officeholder to have taken a public position on Prop. 15, Tunney said there was no question that the elimination of nuclear technology would mean an inadequate supply of electricity to the end of the century.

He conceded the risks of nuclear waste storage cited by proponents of the measure but suggested that a nation which knows how to split the atom "might be able to devise techniques to store wastes."

TUNNEY SAID he was proud of his record in the Senate, "important in benefits to the average citizen but also in what I kept government from doing to you."

He said he was among a handful who took on attorney general nominee Richard Kleindienst over the ITT scandal of a few years ago and "who took on Pat Gray," acting FBI director, blocking his appointment.

"I was the first senator on the floor to call for Richard Nixon's resignation one year before he resigned," he said.

It was his amendment, he said, which prevented the administration's "trying to sneak a new secret war on us in Angola."

The senator defended his support of the B1 bomber as "a valid weapons system to deter the Soviet Union for years to come...I think we've got real problems with the Soviet Union. I don't underestimate them. They are aggressive and expansionist."

Free community forum on Prop. 15

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Proposition 15, the Nuclear Power Plants initiative on the June 8 primary ballot, will be debated at a free community forum at 7:30 p.m. Monday in St. Luke's Church, Seventh Street at Atlantic Avenue, Long Beach, sponsored by the League of Women Voters and the Long Beach Area Council of Churches.

Speaking for the proposition will be Robert V. Adams, vice president of the Computer Printing Division, Xerox Corp., representing Californians for Nuclear Safeguards.

Speaking against the proposition will be Norman L. Buehring, civil engineer with the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power.

Speakers will have 20 minutes each to state their cases, then time for rebuttal and audience participation.

Endorsed

The Long Beach Police Officers Association has endorsed Los Angeles County Dist. Atty. John Van de Kamp for a full four-year term, according to Sgt. Ralph Abraham, president.

Abraham said reasons for the endorsement include Van de Kamp's "good administrative background, his concern for police officers and his new programs of two-way communication between his office and the working policeman, not just liaison with chiefs."

The association has 700 members, representing the second largest municipal police department in the county.

Van de Kamp said he was delighted by the show of confidence in his administration, adding, "I am dedicated to improving our criminal-justice system and reducing crime, and that will never happen without the cooperation of the street policeman."

Ward at forum

County Supervisor Baxter Ward will discuss his controversial rapid-transit plan at the Friday noon luncheon meeting of the Third Friday Forum in the Edgewater Hyatt House Loft Room, 6400 E. Pacific Coast Highway, Long Beach.

A social period is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Reservations may be made through Wednesday with Helen Potepan at 425-3637 or JoHana Blado at 428-1130.

Hayden-Tunney

U.S. Senate candidate Tom Hayden, Democrat, and Richard Bronner, a spokesman for incumbent Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., will speak at 1:30 p.m. today at a town-hall meeting in the Long Beach Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave.

The meeting is free and public.

Lungren aides

Ted Furlow, chairman of the Dan Lungren for Congress Committee, announced the appointment of Mary Lu Hauser and Joe Pickett as cochairpersons for precinct operations in Lungren's bid for the Republican nomination in the 34th District of East Long Beach and West Orange County.

Evening GOP

Republican candidates for Assembly and Congress will speak at the 7:30 p.m. Thursday meeting of the Long Beach Evening Division, Republican Women Federated, at the Mercury Savings & Loan Building, 4140 Long Beach Blvd.

Speakers will include Jack Bentley, Dale Dykema and James L. Wright, candidates in the 58th Assembly District; Edd Tuttle, write-in candidate in the 57th Assembly District, and Clifford Young, candidate in the 32nd Congressional District.

The meeting is open to the public.

Lakewood-L.B.

Lakewood-Long Beach Republican Women Federated will host Republican candidates at their Friday luncheon meeting in the Laguna Room of Bullock's Lakewood.

Candidates will include those listed above, as well as Bill Bond, Art Jacobson and Dan Lungren, seeking nomination in the 34th Congressional District, and State Sen. George Deukmejian, 31st District.

On the program are a 10:30 a.m. study session on ballot propositions, social hour, noon luncheon and 1 p.m. program. Reservations may be made with Vivian Langemo at 425-0172 or Frances Landreth at 421-6207.

Carter campaign

The Jimmy Carter presidential campaign headquarters for the Long Beach area will open at 10 a.m. Monday at 3918 Atlantic Ave., Long Beach.

It will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays. Carter spokesmen said campaign queries are welcomed at the headquarters telephone, 424-2218.

33rd Senate race

Democratic candidates for the open 33rd Senate District seat will speak at the 7:30 p.m. Tuesday meeting of the Norwalk Democratic Club at 12820 Pioneer Blvd., Norwalk.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: You consolidate properly and progress in countless small but infinitely satisfying moments of self-fulfillment this year. It isn't as good a period for expansive moves, but if circumstances are such that you must spread out, strive to do so in orderly sequence. Today's natives attract public attention for their earnest, obviously honest nature, whether their ideas are practical or not.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Seek experts' advice and help on technical jobs. Your sympathy greatly affects someone nearby. Romance touches almost everything that happens.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Urge for pleasure dominates today's action. Many things can be had for the asking. Professional advice blends into work patterns. New contacts bloom.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Solving mysteries is fun: dig out little-known information. Search for prospective silent partners. Gardening promises well, especially for herbs.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You must supply most of the energy. Cooperation is available if, despite recent setback, you ask for it. Romance is in the air, offers a memorable moment.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Extra effort is needed to keep everyone on the job as pleasant distractions abound. Personal plans take priority in too many cases. Established romance thrives.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Social considerations override most commercial concerns. Nobody is in a mood to work. Take a once-over-lightly approach; don't rush serious projects.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Everybody is in a fairly good humor. Work is skimped a bit; if you attempt too much, it must be repeated, corrected. Simply let well enough alone.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You're better off going along with the crowd instead of exerting definite leadership. Ask if you need a favor. Emotional impulses are lively.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Increased earning capacity, success in personal connections encourage saying for the future. Temptations toward excess and speculation are strong.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A personal touch eases delicate negotiations. Your persuasive powers are deft enough, you needn't force issues. Garden, or sponsor civic planting.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Build a team for future work. Discussions drift from business to social topics. Deal with institutions of society to renew your credentials again.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Buy clothing, accessories, decorative items you budgeted for. Work stops while everybody catches up on the latest joke, social conquests, romancing.

Summary of Secret Witness cases, rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 66 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $43,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Roland King, of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst, of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith, of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5096 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the torch slayer of Alice Olay, 52, of Downey, whose charred body was found in a blazing auto in a lot at Pioneer Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue in Norwalk early on the morning of Sept. 19, 1975.

—A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Myrtle Taylor, 88, of Gardena, as she was crossing Vermont Avenue at 149th Street in Gardena at 7:15 p.m. on Oct. 24, 1975. The driver was described by witnesses as a tall, thin black man about 30 years old, driving a 1969 Chevrolet Impala or Caprice, blue with a matching vinyl top.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the holdup slayer of Benjamin Wallace, 48-year-old San Pedro taxi driver who was found shot to death and slumped over the wheel of his cab parked at Seaside Avenue and Terminal Way on Terminal Island at 3 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 3, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of James Hamilton Macgenn, 50-year-old employe of King's Imperial Restaurant in Lynwood at 1004 Atlantic Ave., stabbed to death in the restaurant parking lot as he was leaving work at 3:30 a.m. on June 1, 1975.

—Rewards totaling $3,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $1,500 pledged by store owner Christopher Saunders — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Duane Fettig, 29-year-old clerk shot to death during a holdup at the Melody Liquor Store, 20716 S. Normandie Ave. in the Torrance area, on the morning of Feb. 5, 1975.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

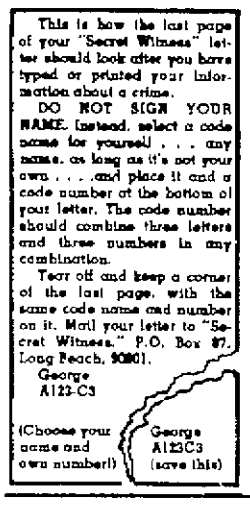

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column.

Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

POLICE BEAT

Man shot dead by deputies

A 51-year-old East Compton man was shot to death by two Carson sheriff's deputies early Saturday after he allegedly fired three shots at them when they arrived at his home to answer a family disturbance call.

A sheriff's spokesman said Maurice Tizano of 5408 E. McMillan St. fired at the deputies as they approached the house at about 3:30 a.m.

Tizano was killed instantly by the deputies return fire, the spokesman said. Neither of the deputies was injured.

Vendor wounded, robbed

A Los Angeles ice cream vendor, the father of 14, was shot and seriously wounded by one of three youths who robbed him of $60 while he was on his neighborhood rounds, sheriff's deputies reported Saturday.

Investigators said Arnulfo Flores of 701½ S. Central Ave. was shot in the stomach and chest Friday evening as he stood beside his truck at Blanchard Street and Geraghty Avenue in East Los Angeles.

Flores' partner, who was not identified, said three youths, one carrying a rifle, approached the truck and demanded money. The gunman opened fire when Flores refused to hand over the cash, the partner said.

Deputies said a 19-year-old neighborhood youth, identified as Robert Rodriguez of 715 N. Herbert Ave. later was arrested and booked on suspicion of armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon.

The deputies said they were searching for two more youths for questioning.

Murder ruled in L.B. death

The death of a Long Beach man, whose body was found floating in the water near the beach at the foot of Junipero Avenue more than two months ago, has been classified as a murder, homicide investigators said Saturday.

The investigators said the body of Alfred Fowler, 40, of 4746 Pepperwood Ave., was discovered floating in the surf March 5. He died from a fracture around the right eye, a coroner's deputy said.

The last known person to see the victim alive, a friend who was not identified, told investigators he saw Fowler Feb. 25 at the corner of Anaheim Street and Pine Avenue.

Drunk-driving team nets 15

A team of seven motorcycle officers and their sergeant arrested 15 persons Friday night and Saturday morning for suspicion of drunken driving in the region between downtown Los Angeles and Hollywood.

A Los Angeles Police Department spokesman said the arrests were made as part of the team's assignment to crack down on drunken drivers in the city. The so-called 502 team, formed in February, concentrates on a different area of the city each night.

The Friday-Saturday arrests were made between 8 p.m. and 3 a.m. in the Rampart Division, the spokesman said.

Vallerga slated to be sentenced

Jack P. Vallerga, 53, former Orange County assessor who has pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to commit embezzlement, is scheduled to be sentenced Tuesday at Kern County Superior Court.

The court will receive a probation report on Vallerga that day, and sentencing is expected to follow.

His case had been moved to Kern County after he complained that he could not get a fair trial in Orange County.

The other counts of a multiple-count indictment returned by the Orange County grand jury May 7, 1975, were dropped after Vallerga pleaded guilty to the embezzlement charge.

The charges alleged that Vallerga and his predecessor as assessor, Rep. Andrew J. Hinshaw, R-Santa Ana, had conspired to use county office employes to work for Hinshaw in his bid for election to Congress in 1972.

Hinshaw also was convicted and sentenced to prison but is appealing the conviction.

Vallerga also was tried and convicted in Ventura County on charges that he embezzled county funds in connection with sale of an computerized appraisal system to Spartanburg County, S.C.

That conviction brought his removal from office, a $1,000 fine and a 60-day jail sentence.

The sentence was suspended when he gave notice of appeal. The appeal was filed Friday with the Second District Court of Appeal at Fresno.

Crackdown on speed set

A speed compliance task force to crack down on violators of the 55 mile-per-hour limit has been organized by the Southeast Los Angeles County area office of the California Highway Patrol, according to Capt. W.J. Schilling, station commander.

The teams of officers will patrol the San Gabriel River (605), Santa Ana, Artesia and Pomona freeways on a continual basis.

Dancer calls it 'dreadful life'

NEW YORK — Barbara Luna stepped, or danced, into a major role in "A Chorus Line" and sings the hit song, "What I Did for Love." But according to Barbara, who's been a pro since she was 6, being a dancer "is a dreadful life," and you get small money for it, but lots of tired bones.

"I asked Donna McKechnie," said Barbara, referring to the Tony Award winner who left the Broadway company for the pleasures of California, "what she did when she wasn't on stage.

"She told me she had to go to see a list of doctors and specialists treating her back and her knees. You see, the dancers are just regarded as dancers, as the gypsies, as 'the kids.' If they want the dancers, they don't say, 'Send in Barbara and Ann and Donna.' They say, 'Send in the kids.'

"And," said Barbara, "being in the company that replaced the first company, when it went to California, doesn't help. It's like all the glory is gone, it's like we're the second string."

Nevertheless, it's pleasant being in a show everybody wants to see, and besides, "maybe one of the TV pilots will come through." Although she feels competent dancing as a chorus girl, she doesn't ever want to be a premiere ballerina, devoting her whole day to dance drill, and she's glad those auditions for the job replacing Priscilla Lopez are over.

"The first night I was so sore I couldn't walk," she remembered. "Still, it wasn't as bad as I thought. I expected there would be a lot of 'point work' — dancing on your toes." To her surprise, director Michael Bennett told her in Los Angeles that she had "95 per cent of the part."

What about the other 5 per cent? She read it in a newspaper that she had it. She had difficulty catching up with Bennett.

Producer-genius Joseph Papp said, "Oh, Michael is not here. He's being fitted for a Napoleon suit."

Bennett thought Papp was getting his wings measured for the Pearly Gates.

Barbara revealed a couple of secrets of the success of the show. "As a chorus, we're robots. Everything is done to a count. We're numbers. I am No. 8. I have to count five sets of eight before I can move. That's precision! That's perfection!"

BARBARA LUNA

Did the chorus kids ever lose count?

"Of course, in the beginning. I felt like an accountant, not a dancer."

"And I was never good at numbers. But if it's not past eight, I can do it."

Barbara's first audition, for "South Pacific" at 6, led her into "The King and I" and "Teahouse of the August Moon." Even then she resented the anonymity forced upon "the kids."

"It was always 'the second one from the right,' never my name." She went into movies and TV. She went into "The Devil at 4 O'Clock" with Spencer Tracy and Frank Sinatra. She played Indian squaws and Mexican she-devils.

Is there competitiveness between Barbara Luna and Ann Reinking, who took the Donna McKechnie part?

"Yeah. But nothing serious! I'm the only one who does two songs.

"But we don't compete. We're not supposed to, anyway. On the front of each of our scripts are the words, 'I am at an audition.' We are not supposed to think we are entertaining an audience. We are at an audition trying to please only the choreographer who is in charge of the audition."

Barbara has a Los Angeles lover who flies in to see her each weekend. She was married to actor Doug McClure. "He was my second husband," she said. "I was his second, and now he's on his fourth or fifth."

Barbara Luna picked up her gear. "And now I am off to my vocal lesson," she said. "I take dancing lessons, too. I told you it can be a dreadful life."

TODAY'S BEST laugh: A fellow living in a trailer says that when they have a flat his wife fixes it: "I figure it's a woman's job to take care of the home."

WISH I'D said that: Someone described Las Vegas as "the place where some entertainers make $100,000 a week, and some lose that much."

REMEMBERED quote: "Middle age is when actions creak louder than words."

Leonard Nimoy, outsider

By LYNN VAN MATRE
Knight News Service

His life style, as he puts it with a dry little laugh, is "really quite bourgeois." The same wife for more than 20 years, a "lovely home," two "terrific kids" now in college.

There are four people in Leonard Nimoy's family, "and each of us," he said, "has our own car. Yeah, pretty bourgeois."

Well, what did you expect? Of course Nimoy made his reputation playing less all-American types, notably the angular-eared, part-extraterrestial Mr. Spock on television's "Star Trek" series. A real alien. Now Nimoy's on tour playing another character he considers just as much an alien as Spock—Sherlock Holmes. Nimoy has the title role in William Gillette's turn-of-the-century treatment of the sagacious sleuth, "Sherlock Holmes," currently at Chicago's Shubert Theater.

"I've always felt I should do Holmes someday," said Nimoy, now 45. "I think my chemistry, my looks, my image all are helpful in playing that role. Besides, I understand Holmes.

"I guess the reason I relate so strongly to characters like that has to do with my feelings about myself, the way I perceive things. I've really always considered myself an outsider, ever since I can remember. It wasn't by choice; it just happened. I don't follow trends the way a lot of people do. I'm not gregarious. I don't strike up conversations with people easily. I love my family, of course, and I have some dear friends, but I don't enjoy being around a lot of people, and I've never enjoyed social chatter.

"In some ways, it would be a lot easier for me as far as my career goes if I could go the small-talk, cocktail-party route. But that's just not how I am."

Someday Nimoy hopes to portray Cyrano on stage. "There are a couple of Shakespearean characters I should tackle, too," he said. "Henry V, for instance, because of the beauty of his speeches and the romance. The style of that character is sensational. But I'm not really obsessed with playing any particular role the way some actors are. I feel pretty good about what I'm doing now—some television, some theater and some writing."

His published writings include two books of poetry, illustrated with photographs he took and developed himself. His third book, called "I Am Not Spock," was published last year. In it Nimoy writes about himself, his craft, and the character he played for three years on "Star Trek."

"Between the writing, the photography, the acting and the occasional college lectures I do," Nimoy said with a sigh, "I've been going pretty constantly for the last couple of years. When I finish up the Holmes role, I'm scheduled for a two-week vacation. I plan to do absolutely nothing. What I need now is time to recharge my batteries and find out if there are some new values to explore in my life."

This fall, he's scheduled to host a new show called "In Search of," a prime-time series of half-hour documentaries on unexplained phenomena. Topics include voodoo, haunted houses, UFOs and the search for Atlantis.

"I'm fascinated by things like that," said Nimoy. "I don't know if I've ever had any genuine psychic experiences myself, but I've read quite a bit on the subject, and it intrigues me.

"We're in a time when people are finding out things we once thought were so weird, like acupuncture, aren't so bizarre after all. There are a lot of phenomena we need to explore, and maybe find new kinds of knowledge."

Nimoy's search for knowledge in general prompted him to enroll recently in a graduate program at Antioch College, where he's in education.

"Maybe," he said, "I'll find out what I should be when I grow up."

That was entertainment

Fred Astaire, Nanette Fabray, Jack Buchanan, from left, do "Triplets" number in "That's Entertainment, Part 2," encore presentation of memorable moments from past movies. Film's gala West Coast premiere will be Wednesday night at Cinerama Dome Theater in Hollywood, with 200-piece Long Beach Junior Concert Marching Band playing for the event.

Action filmmaker AIP seeks 'class' image—with action

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Long the Woolworth's of the movie business, American International Pictures is showing signs of wanting to be Tiffany's.

Samuel Z. Arkoff denies it. "We're still delivering the same old staples," says the AIP chief, "but we're adding to our wares and making the packages more attractive."

It was typical understatement from the film tycoon, who describes himself as "just an old Iowa farm boy." Yet there can be no doubt that AIP, the company that has given the world "I Was a Teen-age Werewolf," "How to Stuff a Wild Bikini" and 356 other films in its 22-year history, is stepping up in class.

Here are some of its future releases:

—"A Matter of Time," with Liza Minnelli, Ingrid Bergman and Charles Boyer, and Vincente Minnelli directing in Rome and Venice.

—"Shout at the Devil," filmed in Africa with Lee Marvin, Roger Moore and Barbara Parkins. The reported cost: $9.5 million.

LEE MARVIN

LIZA MINNELLI

PETER FONDA

'Making the Packages More Attractive for Old Staples'

—"The Great Scout and Cathouse Thursday," western foolery with Lee Marvin, Oliver Reed and Robert Culp.

—"Futureworld," sequel to "Westworld," with Peter Fonda and Yul Brynner, who is back as the robot.

—"Crime and Passion," with Omar Sharif, Karen Black and Joseph Bottoms.

Arkoff, who is president and board chairman of AIP and its founder with the late James Nicholson, said the company is swinging with the times. Nothing new about that, since AIP has always been the trendiest of the movie firms. But this time it is following an economic trend.

"Since below-the-line costs (charges for labor, film, etc.) have gone up so much, we have decided to add to the costs above the line (stars, directors, stories), with the result that we will have a bigger and hopefully better product to sell."

He cited how filming costs have risen:

"In 1957 we made 'I Was a Teen-age Werewolf' in black-and-white with a young, unknown actor named Michael Landon. Studios were on a six-day week then, and we shot it in two weeks for $100,000. That picture would cost between $500,000 and $600,000 today.

"The trouble with our business is that there have been no technological advances to speed up production. Movies are made pretty much the way they have been for 50 years, and the cost of making them has risen tremendously. The amount of theater attendance doesn't change much from year to year, and ticket prices won't be rising wildly. That leaves the film company in a bind."

"The public eats up special effects," he commented, citing such successes as "The Towering Inferno," "The Poseidon Adventure," "Earthquake" and "The Hindenburg."

"Our first big success in 1955 was a picture called, 'The Day the World Ended.'" he remarked. "Now Irwin Allen is going to spend $15 million making a picture called 'The Day the World Ended.' So what's new?

"What the studios are doing now are super-versions of the same formulas. That's necessary because there is tremendous entertainment on television today. Television can't present anything too big; you rarely see longshots on TV shows. Nor is there much action, outside of fistfights and car chases. Movies have to give the public something more."

Pal shoots them just once

Hidder News Service

Filmmaking hard? Not for the winner of eight Academy Awards for special effects.

Hollywood's George Pal said he has never shot a special-effects scene more than once. But when he made the statement, the 68-year-old native Hungarian knocked on the wooden cocktail table.

To avoid costly retakes, Pal sketches every scene and key movement in the production. The pictures are lined up in sequence and fill the walls of a room, creating an outline of the movie.

By the time he enters the sound stage the film is theoretically completed. On this system he quotes Alfred Hitchcock in a thick Hungarian accent: "Shooting the picture is a bore."

But that's not quite true for himself, says the man who directed Charlton Heston in his second starring role in "The Naked Jungle," Yvette Mimieux in her first starring role in "The Time Machine" and Peter Sellers in his first American picture in "Tom Thumb."

The man who came from an acting family said he has no trouble working with actors. He attributes this to granting them as much freedom as possible.

"I always encourage them to come 15 minutes before I do and rehearse the scene the way they think it should be done," said the Beverly Hills resident.

He does the same thing with assistants in special effects and writers.

"'How are we going to do it?' I ask.

"They tell me and very often it's better than my idea."

He recently finished producing and writing "Doc Savage, the Man of Bronze."

Leaders in Crisis

Polk and the Mexican War

By SID MOODY
Associated Press

Bugs. Heat. Boredom. Things, in fact were so dull in no man's land along the Rio Grande that Gen. Zachary Taylor's troops decided to stage a play — Shakespeare's "Othello."

Only there weren't any women. So a young West Point officer was picked to play Desdemona. But the male lead was damned if he'd nuzzle with Lt. Ulysses Simpson Grant.

Tenth of a series

Therefore, they sent all the way to New Orleans for an unmistakable actress.

They'd have had to send all the way to Washington, D.C., to find out why they were there in the first place. President James Knox Polk might have told them. He was escalating a non-war, even then an old American tradition.

Polk had been elected in 1844 on a campaign to reannex Texas and reoccupy the Oregon Territory. Reannex because Polk and others insisted it was part of the original Louisiana Purchase, an 1819 treaty between Spain and the United States to the contrary notwithstanding. Reoccupy Oregon because Americans once had. Actually, a few coastal settlements aside, Oregon had been solely occupied throughout by beaver and grizzlies and the men of various nationalities who coveted their fur.

IT DIDN'T much matter anyway. What Polk really wanted was California.

Polk was proceeding cautiously because of opponents, foreign and domestic, and because he thought he could settle the matter with cash and a show of force instead of blood.

Texas had been in the smokehouse of American politics for some time, curing. Stephen Austin, a St. Louis land speculator, had begun bringing in American settlers in the 1820s. More followed. Alarmed, Mexico prohibited further settlement in 1830. Then came the Alamo and the Battle of San Jacinto in 1836, where, defeated, but still devious, Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna agreed, at all but bayonet-point, to see what he could do about Texan independence. Since no one believed Santa Anna but at his peril, the Texans went ahead and declared independence, and the Lone Star Republic was promptly recognized by the United States, Britain and France.

Texas wanted to join the United States. Early on, John Quincy Adams had tried to buy the territory for $1 million. Jackson upped it to $5 million. Mexico said no. The issue was not pressed further because of its domestic political ramifications. Neither North nor South wanted a showdown over admission of another slave state. Yet many Southerners, among them John Calhoun, saw Texas as a safe haven for runaway slaves, particularly if abolitionist Great Britain gained influence there.

THE DEMOCRATIC convention in Baltimore in 1844 figured to nominate Martin Van Buren. But Van Buren had said annexation was divisive. Southern delegates vetoed him and, after smoking a forest of stogies, nominated Polk, former speaker of the House, governor of Tennessee and now America's first dark horse. He ran against the biggest Whig, Henry Clay, who had waffled on annexation and lost the crucial abolitionist vote in New York. Polk was president.

There were all kinds of arguments to push Manifest Destiny along. Sen. Robert J. Walker of Mississippi tried to assure Northerners by telling them that slaves would indeed go into Texas, but that once the cotton fields there were exhausted they'd cross the border into Mexico and mingle with the halfbreeds, solving the whole problem. Young Hickory, as fellow Tennesseans called Polk, was not concerned with slavery so much as he was the British getting to San Francisco and Monterey before the Americans did.

First he tried money, sending John Slidell to Mexico City to negotiate. Bidding was to start at $15 million for Texas, New Mexico (which included Arizona) and California.

PRESIDENT Jose Joaquin Herrera, who had succeeded Santa Anna, was not deaf to money. He knew his nation of 8 million people was no match for the United States, more than twice the size, even if Mexico's army of 30,000 men was four times America's. War was absurd. But he had his honor. He had asked to negotiate with a commissioner, not a ful-fledged minister. Slidell said he was a minister. Herrera would not talk with him. His laureate was more than matched by leaders and generals of his countrymen who preferred a war they all knew Mexico would lose to the disgrace of annexation.

But if Polk could somehow save Mexican sensitivities, he could save some lives. Instead, Polk ordered Taylor to move his 4,000 men, more than half the regular Army, into the disputed border country along the Rio Grande. Polk was escalating, hoping this would force negotiations. Taylor, "Old Rough and Ready," was not to fire unless fired on or war was declared. In early 1846, Taylor faced a Mexican army across the river, guns loaded, aimed but not yet fired. Polk's critics were to argue that the president, 120 years before Tonkin Gulf, had already involved his nation in an undeclared war.

REINFORCEMENTS came in from both sides. There were scattered killings. On April 24, 1846, Maj. Gen. Mariano Arista, a onetime resident of Cincinnati, took command of the Mexican army on the border. He informed Taylor war had begun. Taylor said this was unfortunate and hoped negotiations could continue in Mexico City.

But at the capital, the belligerent Gen. Mariano Paredes y Arillaga had succeeded Herrera. The government miscalculated. It imagined America would stop short of war because of British threats in Oregon or intervention in Texas. Or that the Northern states would secede. It was just that — imaginary.

To overcome considerable resistance to the war, Polk called a mousetrap play not unfamiliar more than a century later. He coupled the war declaration in the same measure appropriating funds for Taylor's army. Opponents had to go along with Polk or vote against aid for American boys along the Rio Grande. Polk got his war.

He also, eventually, got New Mexico, Arizona and California. It cost $58 million for the war, $15 million paid Mexico and $64 million in veterans' pensions. Or 48 cents an acre for 529,017 square miles.

Slidell had been secretly authorized to go to $40 million in the negotiations. The escalation on the border had also escalated the price.

Next: Zachary Taylor.

Ellis Island to be open to public

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ellis Island, the first stop for at least 12 million immigrants en route to a new life in America, will be open to the public May 29 for the first time in 22 years.

The Interior Department says the island in New York Harbor will be open daily for limited visits and tours.

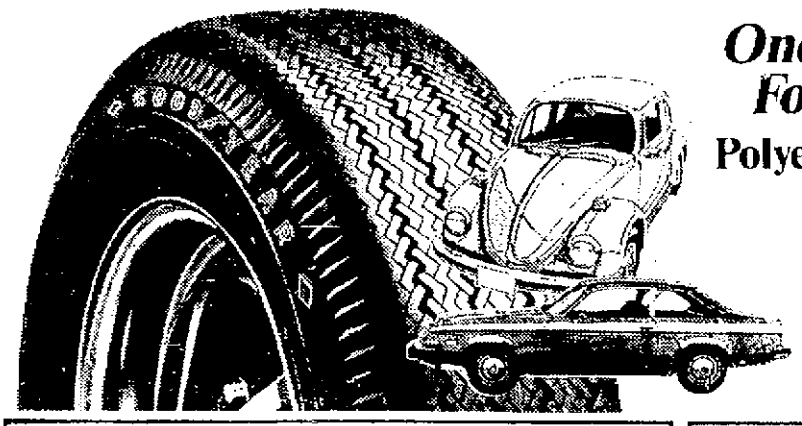

Ellis Island served as the country's main immigration reception area from 1892 until 1954. It was proclaimed a part of the Statue of Liberty National Monument by President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1965.

Gary Everhardt, director of the National Park Service, said the island and its structures had deteriorated since it was closed in 1954. But he added the Park Service was able to open the island because of a recent $1 million congressional appropriation for partial rehabilitation and cleanup of facilities.

Wrigley area proud of its new Pacific Avenue 'face-lifting'

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

Long Beach's most beautiful thoroughfare today just might be an eight-block stretch of Pacific Avenue crossing the Wrigley District between Willow Street and Pacific Coast Highway.

Widened and resurfaced, with the addition of a new center divider and rebuilt, tree-dotted sidewalks, Pacific's appearance pleases business people and residents alike.

Many of the numerous shops lining Pacific have been painted and polished. Few storefront windows stare out vacantly.

According to area entrepreneurs, business is good, and getting better.

It wasn't always so. Business folk along those eight blocks agonize even now over an Independent, Press-Telegram article in January, 1974 that questioned whether their green and pleasant neighborhood could survive an onslaught of urban blight then dimming Pacific Avenue.

"The author exaggerated considerably in his description of us," jeweler Arthur Noda said recently. "Things were never as bad as he said.

"But still, he woke people up, and, yes, I would say the renaissance of the Wrigley District results from that article."

His is a view shared by many of his fellow merchants along Pacific.

As Noda talked, motor traffic flowed smoothly along the avenue, refurbished by the city during the past year for about $700,000. Palms and other greenery grow in a median strip dividing what now is a four-lane street.

One of the district's numerous optimists is Bob R.M. Stone, a former police officer who now operates an accounting-business service agency and edits the "Wrigley Bulletin and News." That monthly publication circulates to about 10,000 residents and businesses, serving as their bulletin board and rallying point.

From Stone's vantage point, "Business is good and, no, I can't think of any real problems."

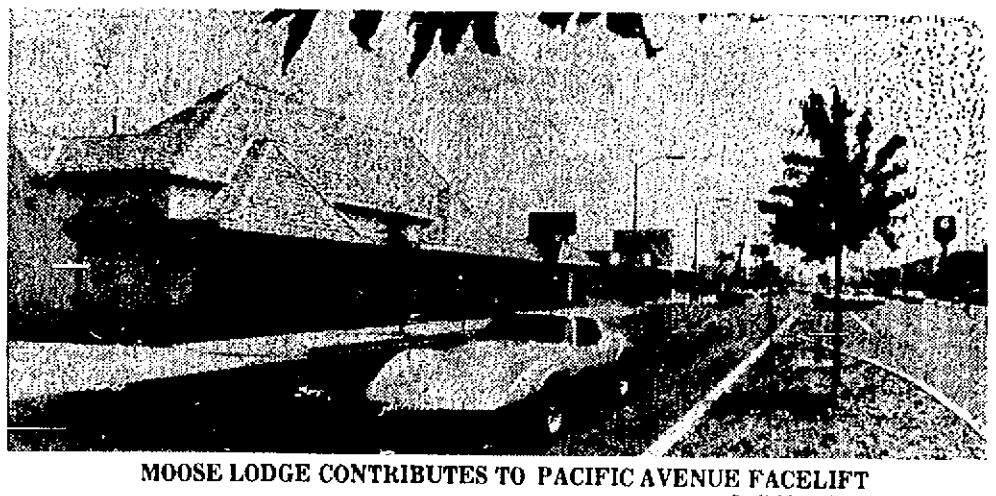

To Stone, as to others, part of this vigorous rebirth of spirit stems from a declining crime rate, brought about in part by the Wrigley Patrol.

This little group of CB-band radio-equipped volunteers keeps eyes and ears open for lawbreakers while driving through the community at all hours, summoning police when needed. Neither policemen nor vigilantes, they represent, he said, the community's determination "to make this a better place to live and work."

The patrol is but one community-building activity begun since the ebb of early 1974.

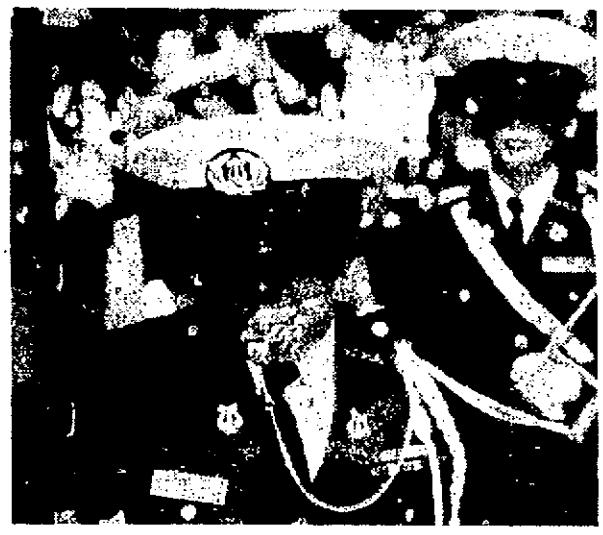

Recorded in the newsletter are details of other comparable projects such as the recent "Wrigley Spring Fling" parade across the district, successful sidewalk sales, social gatherings, coordinated beautification projects and the conversion of a closed restaurant into a Moose Lodge. And, chorus and verse, "Don't forget the I.P.-T article — it could still be right ..."

Would rather fight than flee

Residents form anticrime co-ops in N. Long Beach

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Even in its barest outline, the story carries a dull edge of terror to it.

It happened on a weekend afternoon at Coolidge Park in North Long Beach. A baseball game was in progress on the park's only diamond when a group of young men came onto the field in long overcoats and threatened the players if they didn't break up the game and leave.

This is the first of a three-part series.

There was something palpably menacing about the coats, not to mention the weapons they possibly concealed; and the players wisely decided that the better part of valor lay in quiet retreat.

If they didn't know it then, they learned it later. The interlopers were members of the Crips, a gang of Compton-area toughs whose long coats are their trademark.

MORE recently, members of the Crips intimidated a number of youngsters at Hamilton Junior High School, according to Sgt. Melvin Bailey, head of the Long Beach Police Department's diversion unit, which deals with youthful offenders.

Gang intimidation is not a frequent occurrence at North Long Beach recreational facilities, but it has taken place often enough, says Stan Penland, a district supervisor of the City Park Department, that many residents are fearful of sending their youngsters alone to the parks.

"There's no pattern to their showing up," says Penland of the young hoodlums, not all of whom, of course, are members of the Crips. "They drop in occasionally here and there."

A month ago, they assaulted a park director. At other times they've bullied park-goers. "It's been going on in North Long Beach for about three years."

YOUTH GANGS are hardly an extraordinary phenomenon these days. Nor are Americans generally surprised by the news — issued periodically by the FBI — that crime is on the rise throughout the country. What may be surprising, though, is their response to it — at least in selected communities across the land, where neighborhood organizations and block clubs are springing up in surprising numbers. North Long Beach is one of those communities.

Crime is by no means the only reason for the formation of the groups.

The compelling issue varies from community to community. In some cases it's racial cooperation, in others a desire to improve the physical condition of a neighborhood. Sometimes it's simply a need to "get to know each other," says Ann Schreuder, who has done a study of neighborhood groups for the Calvin College Social Research Center in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Still, crime is so prevalent that, in most cases, a sense of mutual protection either accompanies or underlines the other goals and strategies. And it's that underlying concern that was responsible for the formation of two North Long Beach groups: Concerned Citizens of North Long Beach and the College Square Neighborhood Association.

Six months ago, Concerned Citizens of North Long Beach rose like a phoenix out of the smoldering anger of a community that felt threatened at once by crime and pornography. But there was an accompanying anxiety to the anger — an anxiety born of the fear that increasing numbers of blacks were moving into the area and bringing crime along with them.

Whatever the explanation for the crime, whatever the social and economic roots of it, many North Long Beachers could only see what, to them, seemed like an inescapable correlation— as the area's black population grew, so did the incidence of burglaries, robberies and assaults.

L.B. millionaire, 40, breaking new ground

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

When Ron Cannady landed in Long Beach eight years ago, his total assets consisted of a tool chest and a small amount of cash.

Today, at age 40, he's a millionaire ("at least, that's what the government says"), owns a 707 jet airliner ("that's the wildest story of all") and is president of a multimillion-dollar firm which does business around the world.

Last week, another impossible dream came true when one of his subsidiaries, Cal-Aerotron, broke ground for a $1.5 million Westwings Center, which, according to Cannady, "will be unlike any hangar ever built before."

The two-story steel, concrete and glass structure will be constructed on a seven-acre site adjacent to the traffic-control tower at Long Beach Airport, 3521 E. Spring St.

It will be the largest facility of its kind in the western United States, Cannady says.

Even more unusual is the nature of the businesses to be housed there, according to Cannady. He's billing it as "the world's most modern and complete jet-support facility."

In addition to tenants who will help establish it as a one-stop aircraft-service center, the 52,000-square-foot structure will be headquarters for all of Cannady's corporate offices.

The parent Aerotron company, which started out doing a $100,000 business the first year, has grown to include a fleet of subsidiaries with names like Aerotron, Ltd.

Poverty war funds approved

The Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunity has received authorization for two overdue federal poverty war grants totaling nearly $800,000, director Bud Weisbart announced Saturday.

The $549,562 Head Start grant, due in March, and $250,000 for other programs due April 1, have been approved and await signatures of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and others. The money should be in the hands of the commission by the end of the month, Weisbart said.

The authorization means that the commission's current cash flow problems will ease and the fears of some delegate agencies that they might not be able to meet current payrolls are at an end, he added.

The delay came about, Weisbart said, because of an impasse in the Head Start operation which stalled signoff agreements. That impasse was resolved by a compromise in February, but the funding was delayed.

The other funds had been delayed because a necessary form had not been signed by a commission staff member.

Model T cars in annual race today

Antique cars from throughout the state were scheduled to converge on Signal Hill today for the Long Beach Model T Club's 17th annual Model T Hill Climb.

A club spokesman said more than 80 cars and trucks were to participate in the event, which tests the durability of the vintage vehicles on a 22 per cent grade up a one-tenth mile stretch of Hill Street from Temple Avenue.

He said all entries must have a Model T frame and engine.

Time trials begin at about 8:30 a.m., and actual competition, with a trophy awarded to the driver with the fastest time up the hill, is scheduled from 10 a.m. until about 2:30 p.m., the spokesman said.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

CHARITY COMES in all sizes. It can be as small as the word "love" or as big as the 12-foot-by-5-foot therapeutic pool under construction in Nell Meckna's backyard in College Park Estates.

But let Mrs. Meckna tell you the story as she told it to me a few days ago:

"I have multiple sclerosis, and my doctor suggested we put in a therapeutic pool for exercising.

"We contacted Hy Pesner of Hy Pesner Pools in Orange, and after working with several designers, decided on a 12-foot-by-5-foot pool with jets, seats, hand rails, etc.

"Now comes the unbelievable part: The entire pool is being given to me. Many workmen are donating their time, effort and materials at no cost to me. My total expense is $1, and that only to meet a legal requirement.

"NO ONE ASKED me to write this letter, but you can surely understand that in some way, I'd like these people publicly thanked and recognized. This kind of thing doesn't happen very often any more."

I went out to see Mrs. Meckna, who lives on Vermont Street with her husband, Paul, a teacher at Millikan High School, and two sons, Steven, 14, and Brian, 8. I found a living room filled with sunshine and a happy woman just bursting to tell the world "how kind people are."

"The pool is going to be more than a pool to me. It will be a daily reminder that this old world isn't so bad after all."

Mrs. Meckna, a former teacher of physical education, has always been a giver. She's been involved with her community, active in youth projects, particularly the Cub Scouts. She's the kind of person who always makes time for others. This may explain the benefaction of the therapeutic pool. Providence decided that this time Nell Meckna, noncomplainer and doer of good works, would be on the receiving end.

THE MEN WHO are donating their time, materials and labor haven't broadcast their charity. It was just a spontaneous expression of goodwill, no strings attached.

I think recognition is in order, that attention should be paid to a good work that otherwise might pass unnoticed by the community at large. So let's hear it for Hy Pesner of Orange and these good neighbors:

Jack E. Elms, Tustin, Hy Pesner Pools; Walter John Carney Jr., Long Beach, Gene F. Holle, La Palma, and John J. Moore, Buena Park, the excavators; Steve Baumgardner, Huntington Beach, and Joe Parsley, Anaheim, plumbers; Gene Hargis, Woodcrest, and Robert Feeney, Orange, who contributed the steel and their labors.

Walt Shook, Costa Mesa, put in the tile; Demar Barons, Orange, donated the plastering. The gunite work has been done by Frank Swingruber, Norco; Ross Rupp, Long Beach; Bill Mecey, Huntington Beach; Vernon Richmond, Riverside, and George Baris, Cucamonga. The electricians include Robert Bruce, Steve Paine and Clinton Richelieu, all of Garden Grove, and Dennis Hurley, Westminster.

THE HEATER IS from Ray-Pak Manufacturing Co., and the filter and pump from Sta-Rit Manufacturers. Hy Pesner donated the plumbing, decking and tile.

Mrs. Meckna reckons the value of the pool at $5,000 or more. When she looks out her picture window, she doesn't see a commercial for the swimming pool dealers but a human-bestowed blessing by tradesmen who really care about their neighbors.

Nell can't look for a cure for multiple sclerosis, but she can look for some relief, some needed exercises to restore tone to her diminished right leg, some balm from the warm waters. Come early June she can start using the pool twice a day and no longer have to make the drive to Community Hospital for therapy.

Having the pool in her backyard will be a big help, and Nell Meckna is grateful, ecstatically so. It means more to her than finding another Howard Hughes will. As a matter of fact, a billion dollars or so couldn't begin to buy her joy.

NELL'S HOUSE IS immaculate. She does most of the housework herself and superintends husband Paul and the boys, each a willing pitcher-in. One of her prides is the way Steven has solicited for multiple sclerosis fund campaigns. "He's covered the tract like a blanket."

In a way, Nell isn't looking forward to the completion of the pool. "I'll miss the workmen so much. They're more than workmen; they've become my friends through the weeks they've been here."

You really can't assess the value of the pool at $5,000 or more, for to Nell Meckna it's as priceless as the hearts that made it hers.

Keep debate sensible

A few weeks back, Hubert Humphrey told us that candidates' attacks on Washington are "a disguised new form of racism."

This is a variant on the old charge that opponents of busing as the way to school integration are racists.

THE RATIONALE in the old case was that busing was the only way to achieve school integration; therefore, the reasoning went, anyone who was against busing must be against integration. In Humphrey's case, the reasoning was that government aids blacks and other minorities and that attacks on those who have been in power are therefore attacks on blacks and others who have been helped by government programs.

Since nobody runs as an out-and-out racist, it is true that racists have to find other ways to get their message across. But it does not follow that all, or even most, opponents of busing programs or of welfare chiselers or of big government are racists. Some may be unconscious racists, but many are consciously opposed to racism, favor integrated neighborhoods, and favor government programs to help the poor and to ease unemployment. They simply also favor neighborhood schools, feel that present welfare programs are badly thought out, and see — or think they see — that government is insanely bloated and unresponsive.

THE QUALITY of public debate is not helped by analyses such as Humphrey's. Legislative debate is not helped by such talk, either. It was pleasant, consequently, to discover that in British Columbia the provincial legislature has decided to try to eliminate certain kinds of language from official debate. The list of proscribed language bars legislators from calling each other guttersnipe or buffoon or similar things. It also forbids the lawmakers to describe each other as paranoid or senile or cowardly.

In the United States, the problem is rather different. That kind of personal attack is not much in evidence here. But it would be wholesome, we think, for our politicians to abandon all talk of "code words" or "hidden meanings" or "secret racism" or "covert sexism." It would be better, we think, if politicians stuck to debating the merit of what opponents said without undertaking lay psychoanalysis in an attempt to find unconscious meanings.

Priority attention, etc.

Gus Edwards was a New York grade school dropout who worked in a cigar factory and sang at night in lodge halls and on excursion boats. He made his way into vaudeville, and in 1906 wrote a musical comedy: School Days.

"School days, school days, dear old golden rule days," its title song began. "Readin' and 'ritin' and 'rithmetic, taught to the tune of a hick'ry stick."

Later, Edwards became an educator of sorts. His proteges in the fine arts of vaudeville included Eddie Cantor and George Jessel.

Vernon A. Hinze made it all the way through Custer High School in Milwaukee and Wisconsin State College in the same city. Later he received a master's degree from the University of Wisconsin and the doctor of education degree from USC. Seventy years after Edwards defined the role of education, Hinze presented a "Statement of Philosophy" to the Long Beach Unified School District Board, which had just named him superintendent.

"We must," Dr. Hinze declared, "give priority attention to the basic skills — reading, writing, communicating, and the mathematical processes — in all grades."

The more things stay the same, the more educators look for new and longer ways to say them.

When the experts can't help

SACRAMENTO — One of the stranger aspects of the debate over nuclear energy prompted by Proposition 15 is the disagreement about whether the California Legislature should have review authority over nuclear power plant decisions of the State Energy Commission.

Strange after what we've learned and are still learning about the dangers of allowing government agencies — such as the CIA and FBI — to function without legislative review.

BUT STRANGE ALSO because the illogic of the arguments against legislative review of nuclear energy matters seems so obvious.

Both the initiative and the legislative package introduced as an alternative to the initiative provide for legislative review, and opponents of that provision make two arguments.

First, they say, the Legislature lacks the expertise to deal with what is an incredibly complex technical subject, and the Energy Commission possesses, or can acquire, that expertise.

And second, since the Legislature is a political body, what should be a purely technical subject is certain to become mired in politics.

There is one response to both arguments, and that is that there are sociological as well as technological aspects of nuclear energy. The two cannot be separated, and a political evaluation and consensus is as necessary and as valid as a purely scientific evaluation and consensus.

AS AN ANALOGY, virtually every scientific study made validates the contention that children who drink fluoridated water generally have better teeth than children who do not.

If scientific considerations were the only considerations to have weight, then state and local health departments would long since have ordered that fluorides be added to drinking water.

But the citizenry has determined that there are other considerations to be weighed, and so it is elected entities which are directly responsible to the people who have the next-to-final say. The final say, of course, is reserved to the people.

Nuclear energy is no less a subject for political consideration.

For openers, all the "experts" have brought to the debate is a balance of scientific jargon on both sides of the issue.

A SECTION OF the excellent analysis of the pro and con arguments heard by the Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

Assembly Committee on Resources, Land Use and Energy during 15 days of hearings illustrates the point.

"To any lay observer, the claims and counterclaims that are made about the safety and wisdom of the nuclear power program in this country are bewildering," the section states.

"Scientists themselves are unable to agree on where virtue lies. In a display of at least some levity, the public has been treated to the battle of the Nobel laureates, a game of escalating numbers.

"First, two Nobelists, Linus Pauling and Harold Urey, indicated their reservations about the continued development of nuclear power. Then, under the prodding of Hans Bethe, another Nobel prize winner, 32 scientists signed a statement indicating that in their view nuclear power was safe and a necessary energy option for this country; 11 were Nobel laureates.

"The Union of Concerned Scientists next circulated a petition indicating the need for caution and the need for more safety testing prior to rapid expansion of the use of nuclear power and obtained the supporting signatures of 2,300 scientists, a large proportion of whom were specialists in nuclear energy or nuclear physics."

ANOTHER GROUP of 2,000 members expressed concern for "potentially serious problems" with nuclear energy and the environment, and then the American Nuclear Society gatthered 32,000 signatures on a declaration that both coal and uranium are needed as power sources and "there are no technical problems incapable of being effectively solved" in using either.

All of that aside, there is another, grave, social question.

The potential for harm from nuclear fuels and devices because of human irrationality and/or criminality is obvious. Because of that potential, the security involved with the mining, refining, transporting and using of nuclear fuels, and the subsequent reprocessing and disposal, is intense, pervasive and expensive.

AS THE NUMBER of nuclear energy plants increase, the opportunity for irrationality and criminality increases, and the use of security and the consequent impinging of our freedoms, including our privacy, increases. Whether or not we want that is a purely political question.

The University of Washington's Kai N. Lee, co-chairperson of the Federal Energy Administration's oversight committee for a federally funded investigation of the socio-economic impact of Proposition 15, said in his conclusion that "the choice embodied in the referendum is, I think, one of the rare occasions in modern life in which experts can tell the general public precious little about how it should vote."

It is appropriate here to substitute "the Legislature" for "general public."

The question, Lee said later in his statement, is "Can we live well without nuclear power? It is a question which democracy seems uniquely qualified to answer."

And a little grits on the side

WASHINGTON — The Northerner who ventures into Dixie soon discovers grits. Metaphorically speaking, that's mostly what we're getting in the campaign of Jimmy Carter.

For the unenlightened, it should be explained that grits, or hominy grits, are what you get when you take the husk off kernels of corn and grind the stuff to a nice white meal. You can mix grits with any leftover that's handy; you can fry grits like potato cakes; you can use grits to thicken a soup. Ordinarily, grits are encountered most often at breakfast, where you get them with salt, pepper and butter, or, if you're lucky, swimming in red-eye gravy.

Grits are a Southern institution. They reflect what might be termed the softer side of Southern life. They have no particular character of their own; they do not offend; they go down easy. Not counting the red-eye gravy, grits are wholly forgettable. They are something on the side; take 'em or leave 'em.

What Jimmy Carter's program amounts to is about one spoonful of gravy on a platterful of grits.

James J. Kilpatrick

The gentleman does advance one mildly novel proposal. To enhance better public understanding of executive policy, he says, "Cabinet members representing the President should meet in scheduled and televised public interrogation sessions with the full bodies of Congress." The idea is probably impractical; traditionalists in Congress would oppose it; but however feeble, it is an idea, and it provides the red-eye gravy.

Otherwise: mush. Carter is in favor of government that is trustworthy, honest, and open. Carter believes that the activities of lobbyists must be more thoroughly revealed and controlled. Carter says that minimum secrecy in government should be matched with maximum personal privacy for citizens. The candidate wants judges and ambassadors chosen on merit only.

"As important as honesty and openness are," says the gentleman, "they are not enough. There must also be substance and logical direction in government." Could anyone disagree?

Carter gives us his "specific steps." For one, "we must abolish and consolidate hundreds of obsolete and unnecessary federal programs and agencies." An "agency," in federal parlance, is something more than a mere advisory committee or a paper council. A federal "program" ordinarily involves a service mandated by Congress. Carter would abolish or consolidate "hundreds" of agencies and programs. He would?

He wants a "practical and comprehensive national health program." If he would give us a little more gravy, or even some salt, pepper and butter, he would inform us what this program would cost, how it would be financed, and how it would work. He would similarly fortify his "comprehensive education program." He would give us something to chew on.

Carter is against loopholes; he is against gross tax inequities, porkbarrel projects, political corruption, and the waste of energy resources. He is in favor of good health, fair profits for farmers, fair prices for consumers, and high ethical standards. "The time for American intervention in all the problems of the world is over," he says. "But we cannot retreat into isolationism."

And so on. Carter's account of his early years contains much that is impressive, much that commands respect: Good honest pork chops, if you please. Fried chicken. Turnip greens. Solid stuff. But when he gets to the main course — when he gets to presidential substance — what we get is something on the side. What we get is grits.

The Class of 1976

In the next couple of weeks, we will be launching a new class of high school and college graduates into the third century of the republic.

What does the older generation have to say to the young at a time like this? At this year's baccalaureate ceremonies, Yale President Kingman Brewster revived the recently neglected subject of personal responsibility and the Good Society.

James Reston

New York Times News Service

Maybe, Brewster said, as we move into the third century of our independence, we should also be moving into a third stage of what we are all about, as persons, individually, and as a people.

The first stage of our history, Brewster suggested, was concerned with political freedom. The second was concerned with economic freedom, freedom from scarcity, freedom from want.

Perhaps in 1976, he suggested, there was a chance to reach out to a more positive ideal, to achieve a society of mutual helpfulness "whose greatest aspiration is to give all its members a chance to make a constructive difference in each other's lives."

"Power and wealth," he said, "can both be achieved by sheer acquisitive manipulation. But success, even to the powerful and to the wealthy, is measured by the extent to which they feel that, by what they have done, they have added something to the fulfillment of others."

These are the themes of the old baccalaureate addresses of the religious colleges of New England, the South, and the Middle West a generation or so ago.

"If I am right," Brewster told the graduates, "that the goodness of a society should be measured in part by the extent to which it encourages its citizens to be useful to each other, then the vitality of the independent, nonprofit, voluntary sector is a major index of its success.

"When I become discouraged," he added, "about the seeming inadequacies of 'business can do no wrong' or 'laissez faire' on the one hand, or the prescriptions of the monolithic mobilized state on the other, it gives me some solace to think that perhaps both rampant social Darwinism and rampant Marxian collectivism start with too mean, too narrow a concept of human motivation. . . ." Therefore, he concluded, there was a place for satisfaction in usefulness to others. President Brewster would probably not have ventured to make such a speech at Yale even a year ago.

But now the country is groping for its roots. Compared to any other country or system, it is spectacularly successful, but lately it hasn't been very happy.

No wonder, then, that the Class of '76, looking for jobs when we already have over seven million out of work, is looking for new leadership. For years they have been taught that it was their destiny to have all the material things they needed. That was the ideal placed before them, to be acquisitive and to be ever richer and richer.

Now even the politicians are promising less and the president of Yale is praising "usefulness." Maybe the third century of the Republic won't be so bad after all.

Letters to the editor

Mansell deserves confidence

On the verge of retirement, I would like to make this statement.

I am a 25-year city employe, a fact of some personal pride to me. It is far more difficult to pass the mental, written, physical and oral tests necessary to achieve classified employment than it is to win a popularity contest to public office.

As a city employe, I have been an active participant in both employe and civic projects and affairs. That is why I feel qualified to comment on the many unwarranted attacks that have been made in letters to the editor against a fellow city employe, John R. Mansell.

John is the first — and only — city employe to have started at the bottom and worked his way to the top job in city government. He began as a clerk in the public service department over 30 years ago. By sheer ability and hard work, he advanced through positions as accountant, office manager, administrative assistant to the department head of public service, and then was appointed by the City Council to the office of city auditor in 1951, replacing the retiring official. Two months later, in a regular municipal election, he won a majority of the votes against the opposition of nine other candidates. He was re-elected to the office of city auditor for four successive terms.

In 1961, Mr. Mansell was appointed city manager to replace Sam Vickers, who had resigned. John was selected following a nationwide screening of top municipal administrators, receiving the unanimous vote of the nine-man City Council. His over-all record since then has more than justified that confidence. In view of what has been accomplished by the city under his leadership in the past 15 years, I find the carping criticism by the uninformed to be nauseating.

What are the accomplishments? How about the development of the offshore oil fields, a gigantic industrial project accomplished just off our recreational beaches and achieved without the slightest disturbance to those beaches. And this was achieved under a contract that provided both city and state with returns from that field that are unmatched anywhere. Or take bridges: the old Pontoon Bridge replaced by the Gerald Desmond Bridge, the award-winning Queensway Bridge connecting harbor and downtown, new bridges at Wardlow Road, Studebaker Road and the Alamitos Bay areas. Remember the construction of Belmont Pier, the Sea Scouts and Camp Fire Girls buildings on the bay, redevelopment of Marine Stadium, Marine Park, shoreline parking lots, Belmont Olympic Pool and Plaza, the widening, beautification and increased safety provided by installation of planted dividing islands on Ocean Boulevard, Long Beach Boulevard, Pacific Avenue and the other principal streets and highways in town.

El Dorado Park, plus nine new parks, were developed during his tenure and a city-wide street-lighting program has been initiated and continued under his direction. The renovation of our street bus system has developed under John's guidance, and further improvements in service, schedules and rates have started with him. His was the idea for service through special buses to the handicapped, and reduced rates for senior citizens. His leadership led to the elimination of the shoreline ghetto, the "Jungle," and its replacement through urban redevelopment of the Oceangate Project resulting in the soaring new buildings of Wells Fargo and Union Bank. This has led to selection of the site by Norris Industries for its planned international headquarters building.

John Mansell supported acquisition of the Queen Mary, and despite the army of second-guessers, it was an excellent move fulfilling his instructions to obtain an internationally known tourist attraction for Long Beach. Not only was the vessel bought and delivered without cost to the taxpayer, not only did she grant Long Beach instant worldwide recognition, but she created some 800 new jobs, gave employment to hundreds more during conversion (while neighboring areas were racked by recession), all accomplished without cost to the taxpayer. And she is a constant contributor of sales tax revenue to both city and state. The ship has been a catalyst in the city's rejuvenation: she brought us the Queensway Hilton Hotel, and inspired the Sasaki-Walker report and the proposed Downtown Mall development by Ernest Hahn Corporation.

I do not maintain that John Mansell never makes mistakes; he is as human as the rest of us, with the same human failings we all have. But his successes far outnumber his failings. A .350 batting average would make you a star in professional baseball. John's batting average as a professional city manager is unmatched anywhere in the country.

If John Mansell is guilty of anything, it is of taking too seriously hs role of "public servant." Because he has tried to serve all the people of Long Beach, he has stepped on toes and hurt feelings of one group or another along the way. Perhaps that accounts for the sudden and recent orchestration of unwarranted hate mail.

John Mansell knows me on sight, just as he does hundreds of other city employes. But he would have to think hard once or twice to remember my name or to recall what I do. Nonetheless, on the basis of his outstanding and extended accomplishments, I firmly believe that John R. Mansell is the best city manager that Long Beach has had in its 55 years of experience with the system of government. I also believe that his record will stand unchallenged and untarnished long after his petty critics are gone and forgotten.

Where's George?

I used to look at the television column to see who Johnny Carson's guests would be. In recent years I look to see who his guest host will be.

George Robeson has become the Johnny Carson of journalism in this respect. If he's not recuperating from a fall off a camel or off because of an undisclosed illness, he's on vacation. Friday's paper tell us he's "taking some time off."

I look forward to his column each morning. Sometimes he's as interesting as Sydney Harris; sometimes as humorous as Erma Bombeck. Perhaps if you offered him more money it would give him the incentive to write a few extra columns to be available at the times he wasn't. If this isn't feasible, then you should emulate the Tonight show and always have a guest writer waiting in the wings. I'm sure there's local talent available (are Bob Wells or Dixon Gayer still around?). Or Arthur Hoppe would be a satisfactory substitution.

Flawed proposal

I have searched vainly in both the proposal itself and in arguments supporting Proposition 15 to find something constructive. No alternative power source is called for or even acknowledged to be needed in this measure, which purports to be directed toward safety and would stop expansion of fission-generated power. We may be unable in five or ten years, for want of energy, to provide the goods and services needed to sustain life, but at least we shall die safely.

Let Proposition 15 require that money earmarked for nuclear expansion be put into tapping the geothermal resources in Imperial Valley, and I'll be able to vote for it.

Keep our canal

Our canal is in danger — our canal and the land around it known as the Panama Canal Zone.

I've heard that certain politicians are being called irresponsible for stating that "we bought the Panama Canal, so we shall keep it." Can someone explain to me why we do not own it when we paid the Panamanian government for the privilege of building a canal and paid the individual land owners for the land itself?

Retain sovereignty

We must retain our residual sovereignty in the Panama Canal Zone until a United States of South America evolves to share this responsibility with us.

For a reasonable time, we should reserve the next star in our flag for Puerto Rico. Then we can decide whether to consider accepting a petition from Panama.

Some great moments for clothing salesmen

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — This shoe store sold me a pair of yellow shoes. I didn't want yellow shoes. Nobody wants yellow shoes. This store sold them to me anyhow.

It was because I went into the store wearing an electric green tweed sports jacket which a men's shop sold me seven years ago. I hadn't wanted a green sports jacket at the time, especially in tweed or electric green, but the shop had sold it to me anyhow. I wore it in public a few times and several people died laughing, so I put it away for a long time.

AFTER A while I decided I had to have a jacket, so I went to a haberdasher and bought a blue blazer. I didn't want this particular blue blazer. It was one of those loose basket weaves. Even in the shop I could see the threads breaking. Dangling blue strings hung in festoons from cuffs and lapels. I knew immediately that this blazer was going to be a disaster, but the haberdasher sold it to me anyhow.

After several weeks the blazer had unraveled so extensively that when I went out in the evening women would stop everything, bring scissors and spend the night cutting off loose threads. No shedding mastodon ever dropped as much wool as that blazer.

The only solution was to buy a suit. At an elegant men's store, the salesman studied the hazé of blue lint through which I approached and quickly sized up his man. "I have just the suit for you," he said, departing triumphantly.

HE RETURNED with a gray suit of absolutely no distinction whatever, except that the store had been waiting for years for the perfect customer to sell it to.

The other salesmen clustered at a discreet distance, sensing that they were about to witness a historic moment — to wit, the unloading of this monstrous suit which had been the curse of the salesroom for decades. I put it on, trousers and jacket. It hung like potato sacks on a scarecrow on a windless day.

"Doesn't fit very well," I observed.

"Nothing to worry about," said the salesman. "It's a material that will stretch with wear. Look." He grabbed a handful of fabric and pulled, and indeed it stretched to twice its previous size. I didn't want this suit, but his attitude was take-it-or-leave-it since there was nothing else in the store suitable for my figure.

THE SUIT started growing as soon as it left the store. Within six months, both trouser legs were big enough to conceal watermelons and the jacket had grown downwards and was rapidly approaching the kneecaps. People began to have trouble finding me inside this suit, and I entered a psychic depression.

Let me confess here that it has always been my dream to be as smartly dressed as Cary Grant, my sartorial ideal. Yet, though I was perfectly willing to dress like Cary, the men's clothing salesmen of America seemed determined to treat me like the last chance to clean out the attic.

They had sold me neckties combining lavender, brown and pink in designs that made me look like an Easter egg. Once, when I was only 11 years old, they had sold me a green double-breasted pin-striped suit with a vest, which was the laugh riot of J.H.S. No. 1 in Baltimore.

A psychiatric men's wardrobe specialist studied the case. The problem, he said, was simple. Shoes. I needed a dynamic looking pair of shoes which would immediately proclaim to all clothing salesmen that I was not a man to be victimized with impunity.

THE PROBLEM, of course, was what to wear when I went to buy this magic footwear that would lead up the ladder to elegance. The blue blazer was out of the question. The threads now dangled so densely from the cuffs that they often got knotted around the fingers. My suit had stretched to such dimensions that policemen had taken to arresting it for appearing in public without a visible occupant.

The only thing left was my old electric green tweed sports jacket. Its appearance on the street must have been sensed immediately by every shop on Madison Avenue, for as I strolled toward the shoe store every doorway was filled with salesmen displaying the merchandise that had afflicted their attics for years.

WHAT A different selection they will produce when I am shed in my dynamic new shoes, I mused as I strode into the shoe store. The shoe salesmen were all pretending to notice nothing. Only one of them deigned to serve me. "Something in a nice yellow, I think," he murmured.

Cary Grant, tell me. What must a man do?

Bicentennial terror planned

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — A terrorist group has rebuilt a common tanker truck into a modern Trojan horse to infiltrate America's Bicentennial celebration and Canada's Olympic games. Confidential law enforcement reports show many terrorists have now fixed on these two events as their next battleground.

The terrorists have transformed the tanker truck into a rolling headquarters.

On the outside, the truck looks perfectly normal. It even has spigots which can drip oil.

BUT INSTEAD of petroleum products, the tank holds a terrorist office, dormitory and arsenal. It can accommodate 15 to 20 raiders from the hellish side of politics. American agents know about this mobile terrorist command post, but they haven't caught up with it yet.

Modern terrorists come from all sides of the political spectrum, but they share the concept that their cause will profit from disruption, disorder and bloodshed. Some are highly trained commandos, skilled in the nightmarish uses of our modern technology. The government reports warn ominously that terrorists might even use "nuclear materials" as radioactive poisons or to build bombs.

The United States and Canada are working together to prevent the terrorists from spoiling the Bicentennial and Olympic spectacles. Both the FBI and Royal Canadian Mounted Police are redoubling their efforts to stop the terriorists before they strike. The customs services of both countries are watching for smuggled weapons. The State Department has appointed a "coordinator for combating terrorism." An informal White House task force and the Canadian Ministry of External Affairs are also working on the counterterrorist campaign.

THE CLASSIFIED working papers of the two governments read like grim textbooks on insurgency warfare. The official documents show how the terrorists plan to follow classic guerrilla warfare strategems, mixing with the local populace between hit-and-run attacks. The terrorists also employ smuggling techniques from the worlds of international crime and espionage to move their weapons across borders.

The official reports discuss a variety of disguise and diversionary tactics the terrorists are known to use. They convert the ordinary into a camouflaged weapon. For example, camera-laden tourists are a standard sight at such events as Bicentennial pageants and Olympic games. But the official reports warn some "tourists" may be disguised terrorists and their cameras may be deadly weapons.

Lawmen have discovered, for example, that the new Polaroid cameras with large film packs can conceal small pistols whose grips have been removed. The ordinary Kodak film box, one intelligence report says, may be used by terrorists to hide tiny lethal devices known as "Dutch minigrenades."

GOVERNMENT AGENTS have also learned that terrorists may conceal small machine guns in attache cases. Trigger extensions protrude from the case. What appears to be an ordinary briefcase can be held "under the arm (to) fire into a crowded area," according to one document.

Intelligence reports suggest the terrorists are most likely to strike in July, the month that the Bicentennial celebrations reach their climax and the Olympic games open. Enormous numbers of tourists are expected at these events.

U.S. and Canadian officials have pinpointed some of the terrorist organizations which are expected to cause trouble. The Japanese Red Army, as a prime example, is described in the confidential reports as a group of no more than 30 anarchists. Yet they have succeeded in shocking the world by massacring 28 people at the Tel Aviv airport in 1972, hijacking a Japan Air Lines plane in 1973, bombing Shell Oil tanks in Singapore in 1974 and seizing the U.S. Embassy in Kuala Lumpur in 1975.

There is also the Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional Puertorriquena, which ostensibly seeks Puerto Rican independence from the United States. According to the official documents, this terrorist group blatantly claims credit for 10 U.S. bombings in October 1975. The official reports warn this group may work with the Puerto Rican Socialist Party, controlled by Fidel Castro, to disrupt the Bicentennial.

AN ANTI-CASTRO terrorist group, the Frente de Liberacion Nacional de Cuba, may "cause problems" at the Olympics because of Cuba's participation in the games. This group, according to the documents, "is known to possess a large amount of C-4 explosives, which it may use against pro-Castro and Soviet targets."

Perhaps the strangest group of terrorists, identified as a Bicentennial and Olympic threat, is the "Rastafarian Movement." The intelligence data says the group is also known as "the Niyabingi Order, the Miyamen, the Beardsmen, the Locksmen, the Rude Boys and the Dreads."

The Rastafarians, one of the oldest of the terrorist groups, is an all-black cult originating in Jamaica in 1930. They believe "that the past Emperor of Ethiopia, Haile Selassie, was the living God . . . and that the ways of the white man are evil."

The documents say that the Rastafarians advocate the liberal use of marijuana and have been associated increasingly with violent rebellion and terrorism. In New York City alone, they have an estimated 3,000 members of varying levels of activity.

LAW ENFORCEMENT agencies on both sides of the border are beefing up their antiterrorist campaign. But the key to defeating the terrorists lies with the populace. Terrorists need confusion, chaos and a submissive populace to operate successfully in any country. They describe themselves as the "fish" who will hide this summer in the sea of tourists.

If the people of the United States and Canada deny the terrorists the strategic hospitality they need, the fanatics among us will have more trouble and less success.

Residents form anticrime co-ops

There's little doubt now that the correlation brought a lot of hate to the surface and that more than a few who signed the group's petitions for police action were venting deep-seated hostilities. Yet it also seems true that the large majority of signers were honestly frightened by the threats to their safety.

"You have to distinguish between racism and legitimate fear," said a North Long Beach social worker, "and many people in North Long Beach are legitimately fearful of crime."

If Concerned Citizens struck a powerful chord in its anticrime pleas, it also found a response among those who felt strongly about the presence of sex book shops and theaters in the area (especially along Atlantic Avenue near South Street).

In recent weeks, in fact, the group appears to have channeled its frustration and energies almost exclusively into the fight against pornography. In doing so, however, it seems to have created a gulf between itself and the smaller, more tightly knit College Square Neighborhood Association.

The College Square group, whose members live in a rectangular tract at the northwest extremity of the city, where Long Beach spills over into Compton, was started last December, according to its co-chairman, Tim Closs. It became "fully organized" in February.

Until recently, though, few outsiders were even aware of its existence. Its leaders did little to attract public attention, preferring not only to keep a low profile, but to direct their energies toward a neighborhood solution of the problem.

Where Concerned Citizens made it a point to demand municipal and police action to rid the area of crime and pornography, the College Square people shunned the pornography issue and set themselves the task of encouraging home security measures while trying to establish a sense of community in the area.

It was not a new strategy, but it made sense to a lot of people, including leaders of Concerned Citizens. The theory behind it is that by knowing their neighbors and watching out for one another, residents of an area can discourage criminals — especially burglars — from operating in the neighborhood.

In integrated areas like College Square, where there are four blacks to every six whites, the promotion of neighborliness inevitably lends itself to improved race relations — a side effect that's hard to ignore in the face of what seems to be an uneasy peace in many northern cities. In more than a few neighborhood groups, the promotion of integration is a deliberate strategy — or what Ann Schreuder calls "a positive orientation."

"It's as though people are saying 'Look, before things get worse, let's get together and do something about it. Let's make integration work. Let's stop waiting for City Hall to act, and let's do something about crime ourselves.'

"What we're really seeing," says Miss Schreuder, "is a save-the-city movement." What we're also seeing, say other observers, is a realization on the part of whites that they can't keep running. In a sense, it's an acknowledgement of the fact that the suburbs are becoming too remote and too expensive to make continued flight a realistic alternative — especially for those whose resources have been outstripped by the price of housing.

Terry McKeag and her husband, for example, are a working class couple who have lived in North Long Beach for the past six years. They have four children. And even if they were of a mind to flee, which they're not, they'd have nowhere to go, says Mrs. McKeag.

In addition to their house, which they bought for $20,000, they put an additional $7,000 into a pool, a wooden fence, an extra bath and a couple of additional bedrooms.

"We did a lot of the work ourselves," she says. "I can't afford to move now. I don't want to lose the investment we have in this house, and we can't afford to make the $300 or $400 monthly payments on a new house."

In the view of Mrs. Jean Gregg Milgram, executive director of National Neighbors, a Philadelphia-based federation of 83 interracial neighborhood groups, the widespread efforts to make integration work on a neighborhood basis represent an incipient grass roots movement in the country. The movement may in fact be spawning "a (new-found) sense of community in the cities," she says.

There's little doubt that the College Square association, even though it is not a member of National Neighbors, is part of that larger movement. Yet, hopeful as it sounds, the movement is not without its pains and problems, as the College Square people have discovered.

Two and-a-half decades of racial turmoil may have given the black man a healthier image of himself and knocked the underpinnings out from the system of white supremacy. But it has also left white city dwellers with a confused mixture of fear and anxiety — and, in the case of many, a hostility toward blacks that is only faintly disguised by polite deference.

The meeting room of the Starr King Presbyterian Church in North Long Beach is painted a pleasant pastel green. For some reason — perhaps because the weather was nice, perhaps because it was Sunday — the 40 to 50 persons attending the monthly meeting of the College Square Neighborhood Association seemed to reflect the mood of their surroundings. For there was an air of subdued friendliness in the room.

After the minutes of the last meeting were read and a number of other items taken up — including a membership report and the announcement of a yard sale — a short film was shown to demonstrate the various safeguards against burglary in the home.

The film concluded with the statement that crime is a community problem, and that only a community can solve it. "Keep an eye on your neighbor's house," it advised. "Be your neighbor's keeper."

"That's what we're all about," said Tim Closs, adding his own epilogue to the film. "Neighbors can do more for each other than the police. . . ." But then he smiled and interrupted himself. "Okay, that's the end of my sermon for today. It's time for the guest speaker."

Herbert Levi, assistant affirmative action officer for the City of Long Beach, had been invited to discuss redlining — the practice of denying home loans in so-called high-risk areas regardless of a borrower's credit rating. The high-risk areas are usually black or integrated neighborhoods.

As Levi conceded the next day, though, redlining wasn't the best subject to discuss before a group more interested in crime prevention than lending practices. "After I saw the movie," he said, "I thought to myself: 'how do I tie in redlining to crime'?"

But he took a crack at it in a talk that ranged from housing discrimination and racial prejudice to job discrimination, poor schooling and upward mobility among blacks. Approaching the conclusion of his talk, he posed a rhetorical question: what happens when members of a minority move into an otherwise all-white neighborhood?

But before he had a chance to say any more, a man in one of the middle rows interrupted him. The man, in his mid-fifties perhaps, was obviously agitated. He had sat through Levi's talk, quietly shaking his head; and now, unable to contain himself any longer, he blurted out his own response.

"I'll tell you what happens," he said. "The crime rate goes up. We get ripped off. So what's a civil rights lecture got to do with it?" he demanded.

Levi was taken aback, but he kept his composure. A couple of persons chided the man for interrupting, saying he could have a chance to speak later. But it was too late. The man's anger had risen to the point where there was nothing left to do but let it run its course.

"We don't like getting robbed and raped," he shouted. "The only reason I'm here is to keep my wife from being raped." With that, he rose and slammed the door behind him.

Levi, meanwhile, was urging him to stay. "I'm getting to that. . . ." he said. But the rest was anticlimactic, and a little embarrassing.

Later, however, Closs reasserted his optimism. "We're going to make it," he said. "We're going to have a good community."

Closs, who is black, also disclosed what he had just learned—that a friend of the man's wife had recently been raped by a young black man just outside the church they were meeting in.

"I can understand his anger," Closs said sympathetically.

Scouting around

These young girls — photographed at the foot of Junipero Avenue — were just a small part of the picture Saturday. There were more than 1,000 Brownie Girl Scouts gathered on the beach for a day of fun dubbed by its organizors as Footprints in the Sand Day. The girls, 6 to 9, participated in games and relay races in the morning and staged a kite flying contest in the afternoon.

Mexican rodeo debut

Charreria, the national sport of Mexico, will be making its debut in Long Beach today when three teams from as far away at Tijuana compete in a series of rodeo events at the Long Beach Mounted Guard arena at Wardlow Road and Golden Avenue.

The charreada will begin at 2 p.m. Officials of the Los Angeles Charros have leased the arena for the summer and will be hosting other competitions.

The group has added bleachers to seat about 500 spectators around the arena, and refreshments will be available at the arena cafe. Admission is $3 per person.

In addition to the Los Angeles Charros team, squads from Tijuana and La Puente will compete in today's charreada.

The events in a charreada are a true test of a charro's horsemanship, demanding strength, speed and most of all agility.

While most of the events are similar to those in an American rodeo, they are much more difficult.

In the bareback bronco and Brahma bull riding events, the charros must ride the animal until he stops bucking. In the American versions, a rider must stay in the saddle for only eight seconds.

The most exciting and dangerous charreada event is "paso de la muerte," or the pass of death. The charro is literally gambling his life when he springs from his own horse onto the bare back of a wild horse as they run full speed across the arena.

Other events include "colear," or tailing, where a rider wraps the tail of a steer around his leg and then manuevers his horse sharply to the side to down the steer, and "manganas" and "piales," which are roping tricks.

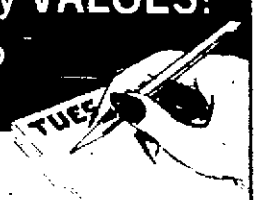

There also is a team roping competition, where one of the charros attempts to rope the steer's head and his partner tries to rope the animal's heels.

The scoring in charreada roping events is based on style and not time, as it is in American rodeos.

Future charreadas planned for the arena include a competition featuring some of the top charros from Mexico City on May 30 and the California state championships, which will be held in August.

The team that wins the state championship will qualify for the U.S. national finals in Colorado, and the U.S. champion will earn a birth in the overall Mexico championship.

SENIORS PUT ON SHOW TRACING U.S. HISTORY

A celebration of "200 Years of a Great Idea" will be held by Long Beach senior citizens Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Bixby Park, Cherry Avenue and First Street, and the public is invited.

More than 100 costumed seniors will take part in a state presentation of music and tableaux, tracing the history of the United States "from the first Thanksgiving to the walk on the moon," according to the Senior Bicentennial Committee.

Special recognition will be given to Long Beach residents who are 100 years of age or older.

'Old-time' circus coming

An attempt to revive the old-time circus hoopla, complete with big-top, midway rides and side shows, will come to Carson Wednesday when Circus Vargas opens a six-day run.

Billed as "resplendent with the rich tradition of the circus as it once was in America" the new show will be presented at a site just off the San Diego Freeway at Avalon Boulevard.

Put together by Clifford E. Vargas, the circus features more than 180 performers and animals in a 5,000-seat tent. Vargas calls it "the world's largest 'under canvaas' circus".

I,P-T article spurred beautification project

A growing number of area businessmen are buying the property they occupy, said groceryman Ray Coffman, operator since 1950 of Ray & Roy's Market and owner for the past several years of the building he rented for a long time.

When Coffman set up shop a quarter-century ago, he said, "The Wrigley was an upper-middle-class neighborhood that ranked with the best in Long Beach."

And it's still good. There are many two-paycheck families living here," and the number of patrons for his self-described "carriage trade market" continues to grow.

New businesses continue to open. Former Londoner Don Seyes closed a downtown shop and consolidated another facility into a single, central Wrigley British Imports shop. Not the least of his reasons is the ease of parking along non-metered (although closely policed) district streets.

There are those who, like Noda, say "The Wrigley" is a microcosm of America.

A growing black population — Coffman estimates 10 per cent of his customers are black — is an observable trend even though formal figures are unavailable. This is not new, however.

"When I went to school here 30 years ago, there were black students, Orientals, kids from the island, attending with me," recalled community leader John Ward. "District schools — Birney and Lafayette Elementary, George Washington Junior High — were and are microcosms of a large (ethnically diverse) city.

"We always were integrated — and I think we're more so than ever now!"

Ward's reaction to the 1974 I,P-T article — "one of anger and frustration" — helped spark the so-visible renaissance. His initial letter the following day brought 100 people to a meeting in which a new and vital Wrigley Association was formed.

From the first, the record shows, people of many races and colors moved into a desirable real estate development. Its sturdy roots were planted well before World War I amidst willow clumps then dotting a tidal-flood plain.

As people arrived, and houses — many of them California Spanish bungalows — arose, the willows disappeared while an occasionally rampaging Los Angeles River was brought under permanent, concrete control.

Today there seemingly are no extremes of wealth or poverty, although the district, until about 1950, ranked with Bixby Knolls as two of Long Beach's "better" neighborhoods.

"No one is starving here," dryly commented a veteran Wrigley watcher.

"Here" is a nearly rectangular area bounded on the east and west, respectively, by Long Beach Boulevard and the Los Angeles River flood control channel. The southerly limit — depending on who's talking — either is Anaheim Street or, more often, Coast Highway.

Wardlow Road marks the district's north edge — except to those who would extend it to include an irregularly-shaped area between the San Diego Freeway and Wardlow.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of mature trees shade the district's handsome streets. Neat, well-kept homes, many in the classic "Southern California Spanish" architecture of the 1920s, line those thoroughfares.

Except for apartment houses concentrated chiefly toward the south end, these primarily fall in the R-1 single-family category. Pacific, to many the Wrigley's "Main Street," is but one of four important business streets serving the region. The others are Willow Street, Pacific Coast Highway and Long Beach Boulevard.

The 1974 I,P-T article, describing this "small but significant stretch of Pacific Avenue" as "neglected," with "decay apparent in many spots," questioned whether "a stiff broom and a new coat of paint" alone could resolve its difficulties.

It was a most disturbing question to area merchants. After all, clean up-paint up-fix up is a traditional American panacea for all ills afflicting society.

Despite the death some months earlier of a Wrigley Association, it was immediately apparent at the time to neighborhood leaders that an action- and goal-oriented organization to work for neighborhood betterment was urgently needed.

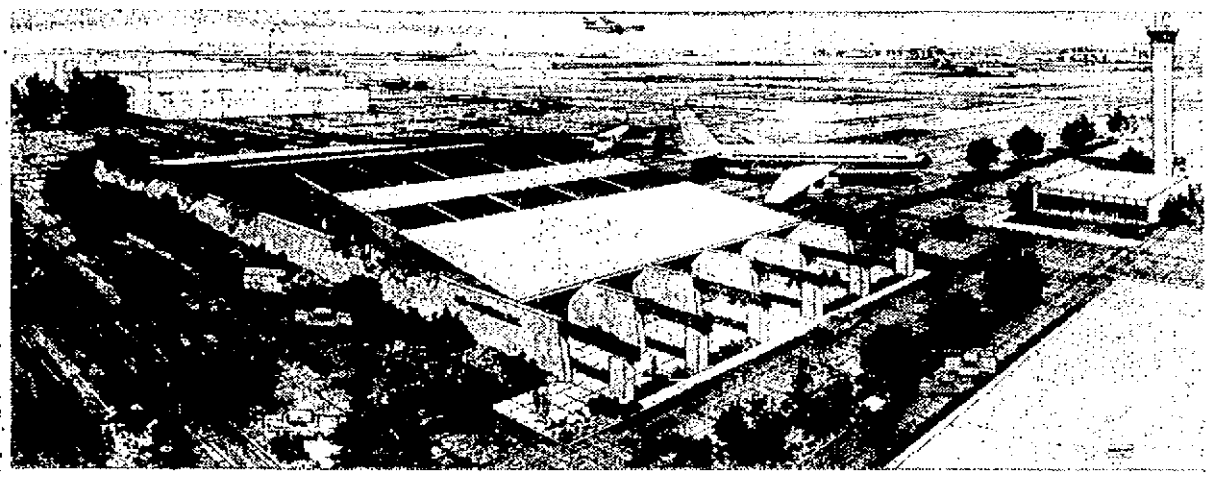

"We're grateful for the article — now," says Ward, president of a family-owned furniture, appliance and carpet company. "Then, we were angered ..."

Letters he sent out in the first angry flush to rally other Wrigleyites resulted in the formation of a new association to spearhead the counterattack. Strong and enduring foundations were laid for what would become the Wrigley Business and Professional Association.

His biggest fear today — and one shared by other area activitists — is that "we may get complacent, stop fighting for improvement.

"Why, you know? the next project we should take on is to do for Willow Street what's been done for Pacific!"

ARCHITECT'S CONCEPT OF WESTWINGS CENTER AT LONG BEACH AIRPORT

Cannady building Westwings Center

(London-based to conduct avionics operations throughout the United Kingdom, Europe, the Middle East and Africa), Airpower Accessory Overhaul Divison, Restock International and Meditron, Inc.

These companies provide about every kind of service an airplane could need to keep it in the air. For instance:

— They handle direct sales of electronic equipment and spares to all major airlines and to the military departments of allied nations.

— They overhaul, modify and install electronic and navigation systems for all types of jet aircraft.

— They design and engineer sophisticated aerial survey and flight-inspection systems for various allied governments.

And the list goes on.

Growth has been such that the new facility will be the fourth plant relocation since 1968, when Cannady started rewiring World War II DC3 parts on an eight-foot workbench in an attic at 2611 Spring St.

"We're spending $350,000 to make Westwings Center physically and aesthetically pleasing," Cannady said. "Spring Street needs all the help it can get."

He's been that kind of Long Beach booster since he first arrived here in 1968 after moving from hometown Miami because "I wanted to get as far away from there as possible."

His new project is pure Long Beach from blueprint to wallpaper.

The contractor (Carl Brooks, Inc.) is local. The financing agent (Bank of America) is local. And the wallpaper? That's another dream he had.

"I fell asleep on a flight to New York and dreamed about the wallpaper for the foyer-lounge," he said. "And would you believe I found it at a supply house right here in Long Beach?"

Which is something for a man who has made a dozen trips around the world in the past five years, plus eight trips to Europe and several to South America. "That was to get the company internationally accepted," he said.

His big coup came last December, though, when he made international headlines by flying off with an Air Vietnam Boeing 707 which he bought in Hong Kong from Pan American World Airways.

Reputedly carrying some top government officials and several million dollars in gold bullion, it was one of the last commercial flights to leave South Vietnam before the government fell in April 1975.

Cannady's part in the incident was loaded with mystery, international intrigue and a touch of humor. He still will not reveal how much he paid for the aircraft.

It all started as a straightforward business deal similar to a bid he made in New Jersey on the plush 707 formerly owned by fugitive financier Robert Vesco.

While attempting to negotiate that transaction, he heard about the Air Vietnam aircraft, which had been seized when it landed in Hong Kong from Saigon.

The British crown colony's government seized it because of liens, including some placed over unpaid service and storage fees owed by the South Vietnamese government, which had just gone out of business.

The former owner, Pan Am, which held a mortgage on the plane, asked the Hong Kong government for a court order to allow it to sell the plane and settle a $4,869,933.80 claim. The court agreed.

While the countries involved feuded about "air piracy" and international law and the new South Vietnamese government demanded return of the craft, Cannady went about his business of buying the plane and preparing to bring it back to Long Beach.

That wasn't easy. By international treaty, no country can register an airplane until the previous country issues a certificate of deregistry. But the previous government didn't exist.

So Cannady took his case to the U.S. State Department.

"We used a little trick called the Cuban Procedure," he said. "It was the same procedure applied when an aircraft was flown out of Cuba when Castro took over."

RON CANNADY

The humor came when Cannady took five Chinese out to Kai Tak Airport in Hong Kong one dark night and painted "Signal Hill Airlines" on the sides of his new purchase. It landed in Long Beach a couple days later.

"Since Signal Hill doesn't have an airplane or an airport, and we could name the airplane anything we wanted to, we just decided to call it Signal Hill Airlines," he joked at the time.

When owned by Pan Am, the craft was dubbed Clipper Defiance. Air Vietnam named it Wings of Peace.

And where is Defiance-Peace-Signal Hill now?

Sans wheels, the craft is propped up on cradles just outside Cannady's temporary quarters, an old 1920s hangar behind his new building site on Spring Street.

There had been some talk that a Mideast or Persian Gulf sheik might buy it for a playboy-type airplane. Or that it might be used for pilgrimage trips to Mecca.

Those didn't materialize.

"We're dismantling it for spare parts," Cannady said. "We can never get enough of those. In fact, our company keeps track of virtually every U.S.-manufactured jet airliner in the world. We know who buys them, who leases them and who sells them to whom."

Cannady said he hopes to have the new Westwing Center open for business by next January. He anticipates that it will generate $25 million annually for the local economy in sales and service volume.

He lauded the Long Beach Economic Development Corp., a nonprofit unit comprised of local civic leaders, for help with site development. "Their help has been invaluable," he said, adding:

"To put a single-purpose building on municipal-leased land is something like landing on the moon. It's been hard work — but it's been a hell of a lot of fun."

International festival slated at park today

A festival featuring music, dance and food from around the world is scheduled at Long Beach Recreation Park from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. today.

The event, sponsored by the Women's Council of the Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce, is free to the public.

There will, however, be a charge for food sold at booths around the park, according to a spokeswoman.

She said groups representing Austria, Cambodia, Chile, Germany, Greece, Japan, Korea, Lithuania, Mexico, the Middle East, Nigeria, the Philippines, Poland, Spain, the United States and Vietnam will entertain.

A parade of nations, featuring young people in native costume, is to begin at 1 p.m.

Millions made eligible for federal loans

Revised Veterans Housing Act provisions clarified

By DOROTHY WEDDELL
Knight News Service

Many provisions of the revised Veterans Housing Act, which went into effect a year ago, still seem to be unknown to a vast number of eligible U.S. service veterans.

The act now allows millions of veterans to obtain federally guaranteed home mortgages, who were formerly ineligible, either because they had previously used up their benefits or because they were not covered under the old law.

Significantly, a recent survey of older veterans and widows revealed that a staggering 35 per cent reported having problems obtaining or maintaining adequate housing.

The first major construction arising directly from the act appears to be Veterans Village, a subdivision being built in New Port Richey, Fla., about 30 miles northwest of Tampa.

Although Veterans Village is open to anyone, veterans are entitled to federally guranteed mortgages which include no down payment and no closing costs.

According to the developers, this allows veterans to purchase a retirement home without putting too much of their savings nest egg in their new home. Plans for the development in Florida call for about 2,000 homes to be built, with a current price range of $14,000 to $25,000.

The builders have put up five models, and report that a full-page ad which ran in the American Legion magazine drew more than 12,000 requests for information.

The major changes in the new law include: Renewed eligibility for veterans who already have utilized their original GI mortgage; an increased maximum home loan guarantee from $12,500 to $17,500 (raised to $25,000 for certain seriously service-connected disabled veterans); and an extension of the eligibilty for insured loans to veterans whose service in the Armed Forces occurred after Jan. 31, 1955.

The eligibility requirements of the Veterans Housing Act, as taken from VA pamphlet 26-4, revised March 1975, are as follows:

1. Veteran must have served at any time between Sept. 16, 1940, and July 25, 1947, and must have been discharged under conditions other than dishonorable after at least 90 days active service (or for service-incurred disability in less than 90 days).

2. Or veterans whose entitlements are derived from active service between June 27, 1950, and Jan. 31, 1955, inclusive. The minimum term of active service for the Korean conflict is the same as that for World War II vets.

3. Surviving spouses of persons who served during either of the periods and who died as a result of service.

4. Any member of the Women's Auxiliary Corps who served for at least 90 days and was honorably discharged for disability incurred in the line of duty.

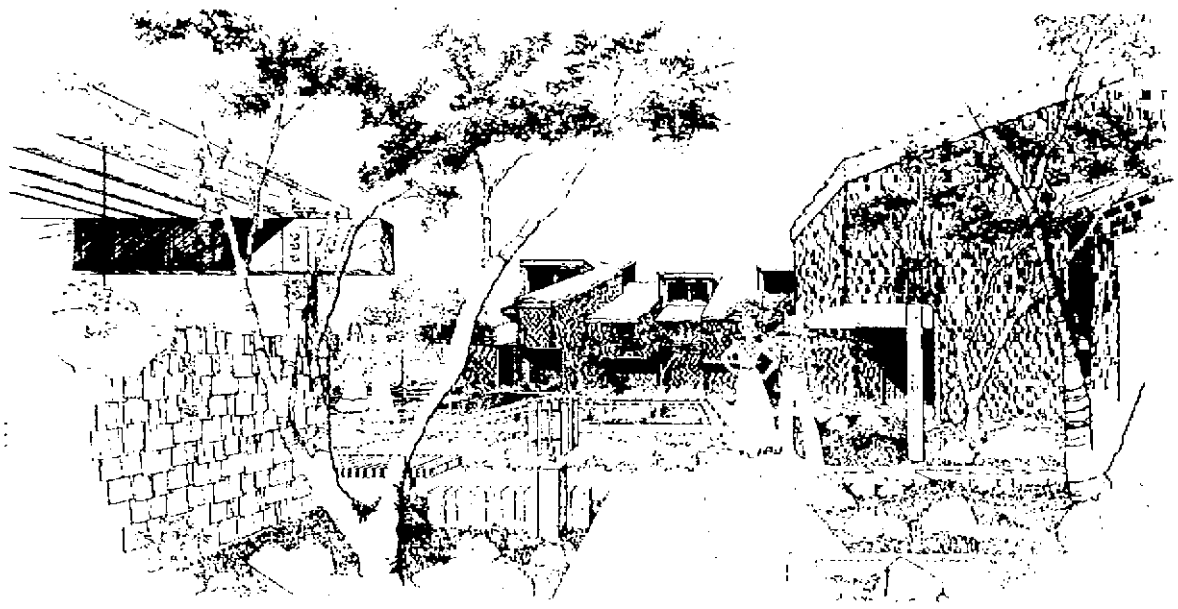

5. Certain U.S. citizens who served in the armed forces of a government allied with the United States in World War II.

6. Veterans who served on active duty for 181 days or more, any part of which occurred after Jan. 31, 1955, and were discharged or released for other than dishonorable conditions, or for a service-connected disability.

7. Service personnel who have served at least 181 days in active duty status, even though not discharged, while their service continues without a break.

8. Surviving spouses of the above eligible persons who died as a result of service.

9. The spouse of any member of the armed forces serving on active duty who is listed as missing in action or is a prisoner of war and has been so listed for at least 91 days.

PUBLIC INVITED

Open house at Dana Terrace

A "Champagne Open House" this weekend will mark the completion of recreation facilities and the furnished models at Dana Terrace, an exclusive new townhome development at Dana Point.

The public is invited to attend the festivities from 1 to 5 p.m. on today. Dana Terrace is located at Del Obispo and Stonehill in Dana Point, less than a mile from Dana Point Yacht Harbor.

The new recreational amenities amid the community's three open acres of landscaped grounds include a large swimming pool and jacuzzi.

Prices range from $55,500 to $57,500 for the spacious and dramatically-styled Dana Terrace townhomes. For a limited time, an excellent interest rate as low as 7 3 4% (8.05% annual percentage rate) is available, a spokesman for Kurth & Associates, Inc., said.

There are just 31 townhomes in the new development and the terraced viewsites have been carefully planned to take full advantage of the panoramic ocean and valley views.

The townhomes are available in three innovative multi-level floorplans and offer two generaous bedrooms and 2 1 2 baths. Immediately occupancy is available now, according to the sales agent.

Modern "sea-architecture" by Robert M. Thomas & Associates, AIA, of Newport Beach, gives the homes a contemporary woody effect carried out in shingled exteriors.

Custom-qualityappointments of the unique townhomes include formal tiled entry foyers and large living rooms and dining rooms on the contemporary-styled lower levels. There are high vaulted ceilings, an abundance of view windows, wood- burning fireplaces and wet bars.

The decorator furnished model homes are open weekdays from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and weekends from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., but closed Wednesday, according to Kurth & Associates, sales agent.

The development may be easily reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Camino Las Ramblas (Pacific Coast Highway) exit. Drive approximately 1 2 mile towards the Dana Point Marina area and Del Obispo St., then right 1 4 mile to Stonehill and Dana Terrace.

Top value homes are offered at the Pines

In an independent residential sales survey conducted by the First American Title Insurance Company, The Pines is one of the best values in the Orange County area.

According to Bob Warmington, President of the Robert P. Warmington Company, The Pines is Anaheim's first single story condominium conversation community designed exclusively for mature adults 50 years of age or better.

With the average cost of a new home in Orange County running in excess of $60,000, The Pines offers an outstanding combination of low price per square foot and an exceptional amenities package for the mature individual seeking the security of home ownership at a modest price.

Intimately clustered in three unit buildings, all units are single story designs providing garden level entries, completely eliminating stairways and overhead neighbors.

The Pines garden homes are surrounded with an abundance of lush mature landscaping. All exterior gardening, and landscape maintenance is taken care of by the Homeowner's Association, freeing residents to enjoy all the recreational facilities both within and surrounding the community.

A choice of two different plans are offered, a two bedroom model with 1075 square feet and a two bedroom plus den model which is a spacious 1,200 square foot design. Both plans have two baths.

All homes feature enclosed private patios, fireplaces, draperies, air conditioning, fully tiled showers in master bedroom suites and quality carpeting. In the convenient easy clean kitchen are ceramic countertops, general electric dishwasher, disposal, range and oven, all included in the purchase price.

Set in a mature park-like atmosphere, new homeowners will share in a full compliment of recreational facilities. There is a swimming pool and jacuzzi, a clubhouse for those weekend gatherings, a putting green for the "scratch" duffers, plus shuffleboard courts and bar-b-que areas.

With a total of only sixty-four units in the adult community, there is ample covered parking with a special area set aside for recreational vehicles.

Within ten minutes by car is the Regional Anaheim/Broadway Shopping Center. Also within easy freeway access is the Civic Center, Orange County Airport and beach resorts.

The Pines is located at 134 S. Magnolia Blvd., just 1 2 block south of Lincoln. The two and three bedrooms are priced from $31,990 to $33,990. Decorated models are open daily from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m.

Property care is expanded

JACK KELLY

Announcement has been made of a new community administration division within Pacific Property Care, Inc., a landscape and exterior maintenance company located in Irvine and headed by Jack Kelly and Tony Nunez.

TV star, Kelly, said Nunez and he meshed 21 years of cumulative financial property management and licensed landscape contracting experience into the comprehensive service they now offer.

Kelly said the five year old firm has operated as consultants and complete exterior maintenance contractors to major projects managed by Lincoln Properties; some important developments of Christiana Corporation and large condominium projects in Huntington Harbour, Costa Mesa and other South Coast cities.

Limited number of homes at Country Club Gardens

Time is growing short for buyers to make their selection of the limited number of townhomes available at Country Club Gardens in Long Beach.

The elegant built-in features and outstanding dollar value have been the major factors in the outstanding sales rate to date, according to Sterling Development Corp., the builder.

The new adult-oriented townhome development is situated in the prestigious Virginia Country Club neighborhood, an ideal central location freeway-close to employment and metropolitan areas of Los Angeles and Orange County.

The split level townhomes are set amid sparkling streams, waterfalls and lush green gardens and are priced at $52,950 and $53,950 with excellent conventional financing available.

The remaining homes feature a three bedroom, two bath floorplan. Wood-burning fireplaces, separate dining areas, wood parquet entry foyers and cathedral ceilings are among the homes' excellent features. Ceramic tiling and upgraded wall- to-wall carpeting are more price-included features.

Each home has a trellised entry, private garden patio and over-sized two- car garage with laundry area and automatic door opener.

A large free-form swimming pool, jacuzzi and night-lighted paddle tennis court are provided in private recreation areas.

Model homes and the sales office are open daily from 10 a.m. at 3655 Country Club Drive and Cedar Avenue for selection in the final group of homes.

Country Club Gardens may be easily reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Long Beach Boulevard exit, then north on Long Beach Boulevard to 36th Street, and west on 36th (which becomes Country Club Drive) for one-quarter mile to Cedar Avenue and the new adult townhome community.

Baldwin's West Hills Homes . . . among University City's last

Some of the last single-family homes to be built in the University City section of San Diego are just getting underway at West Hill Homes, announced James Baldwin, a principal of The Baldwin Co., the Irvine developer.

Situated along winding streets and cul-de-sacs, 40 single-family detached homes will be built on a ten-acre site at the northwest corner of Streseman Street and Governor Drive.

"The Baldwin Co. has refined for San Diego County a series of one-and two-story floorplans which proved very popular in Orange and Los Angeles counties," explained Baldwin. "The plans will be some of the largest offered in this area."

Featuring three to five bedrooms, the homes range in size from 1,962 to 2,487 sq. ft. All will have family rooms, formal dining rooms, and attached two- or three-car garages.

Versatility keynotes many of the plans, which feature wall-removing options to enlarge family rooms, create master suite sitting rooms, or upstairs hobby or game rooms.

"We expect a sell-out before the homes are built," noted Baldwin. "Already a number of people have contacted our corporate office for information, and some have even driven approximately 100 miles to Central Orange County to view the models."

Just two blocks from West Hill is Stanley Park, a 24-acre city-owned facility with Olympic-size swimming pool; a bathhouse; picnic, tot, and play areas; lighted tennis and handball courts; multi-purpose baseball fields; and a 14,000 sq. ft. recreation building with two indoor basketball courts, meeting rooms, and craft rooms.

Close-by is a shopping center, Marcy Elementary School and the just-completed Stanley Junior High School. In two years, students will be able to attend the University City High School, now under construction. Downtown San Diego is less than 15 miles away, while the University and the La Jolla beaches are only a five-minute drive.

Prices are expected to range from the mid-sixties into the eighties. Three models are scheduled to open in July. Pre-sales are scheduled to begin in June, while the first move-ins will be in January, 1977.

The Baldwin Co. also is the developer of Sea Village, the award-winning townhome community adjacent to Torrey Pines State Park in Del Mar.

Park-like view from new homes

Trees, a lake and a golf course form the view from the fairway phase of the award-winning Rancho San Joaquin townhomes in the City of Irvine. Homes in this last phase of the adult-oriented community are priced from $77,000.

New homes in Mission Viejo are now open

One of the most desirable neighborhoods ever to be offered in the Madrid de Espana series at Mission Viejo opens this weekend, according to Grant Sullivan, general sales manager for the 10,000-acre planned community.

Madrid's Neighborhood 32 will feature 51 homes in one single-level and four two-story plans. Fifteen distinctive elevations are offered.

Located just west of Marguerite Parkway near the Mission Viejo Country Club, many of these homes will offer excellent sunset views. The view potential is enhanced by the fact that some of the homes will be built on single-loaded streets, added Sullivan.

Priced from $66,495 to $92,095, Madrid de Espana homes include such custom features as dramatic staircases, master suites that extend the length of the home, one or two fireplaces, laundry chutes, and multi-level design. Homes are expected to be ready for occupancy in September.

Homes range in size from the 1,775-square-foot Casa Roya with three bedrooms and two baths to the 2,920-square-foot Casa Sarga with four bedrooms, three baths, and a library.

Standard Madrid de Espana features include built-in Whirlpool double ovens, separate built-in range, dishwasher, disposal, fireplaces with gas log lighters, heavy duty exterior wall and ceiling insulation, carpeting in most rooms, and concrete driveways.

Optional features include air conditioning, tile roofs in some plans, balconies, wet bars, mirrored wardrobe doors, and glass cook-top ranges.

For including devices in the Madrid de Espana series that "contribute significantly to the conservation of energy and to more economical operation for the consumer," Mission Viejo Company was recently awarded a "Certificate of Commendation for Energy Conservation" by Southern California Gas Company.

Centrally located in Mission Viejo, the homes in this Madrid de Espana neighborhood are within minutes of all three volunteer-membership recreation centers. Two golf courses (one public, one private), the Mission Viejo Equestrian Center, and a newly completed skating rink are nearby recreational amenities.

Madrid de Espana models are open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. at the sales complex, adjacent to the Marguerite Recreation Center, home of the 1975 AAU national swimming champions.

To reach the models, take the San Diego Freeway south to the La Paz Road exit and drive east. Turn left on Marguerite Parkway and follow the signs to Madrid de Espana.

RV park at Big Bear is nearing completion

Construction is nearing completion on Holloway's Recreational Vehicle Park at Big Bear Lake in the San Bernardino Mountains. The park, which is scheduled to open this summer, is located on Metcalf Bay on 5.5 acres of lake front property. Holloway's, established in 1913, is the oldest existing marina on the lake. Normal marina operations are continuing during the construction period.

The 66 RV sites are large and all have a view of the lake. Native plants have been used in landscaping to add to the privacy of each site. All sites will have complete electrical, sewer and water hookups; cable television will also be available. A camp store will offer convenience shopping and food items.

Holloway's has one of the largest marinas on Big Bear Lake; offering fishing and speed boat rentals, a launching ramp, mooring facilities for private boats with buoys and slips available, outboard and inboard engine repair service, Standard Oil marine products and Johnson outboard motors and parts. The marina facilities are open to the public as well as guests of the RV Park.

Construction and design have been under supervision of Holloway's.

Ground broken for Park Vista

Fullerton City Councilman Duane Winters was on hand with William Okell, president of Century Community Developers, Hugh L. Berry, Fullerton Public Works Director, and Roy Humphreys, project manager for Century Community Developers, for ground breaking ceremonies for Park Vista, the company's new single family home development located on Pioneer Road off Gilbert in the Sunny Hills area of Fullerton.

Scheduled to open in early June, Park Vista will offer a total of 234 homes in four distinctive designs. The three and four bedroom plans will be in one and two story plans, with prices ranging from the mid-$50,000's to approximately $80,000.

Village planning explored

"The Most Unique New Housing Development to hit the United States in a Decade" is the topic of the speaker, Kenneth W. Agid, Director of Residential Marketing for The Irvine Company who will be exploring the planning and development of The Village of Woodbridge.

According to spokesmen, "it's the biggest, most important single project ever undertaken in the City of Irvine in terms of physical size, front end investment, complexity of land uses and diversity of products". The occasion is the regular monthly meeting of the Sales and Marketing Council of the Building Industry Association of California.

Meeting at the Grand Hotel in Anaheim on Wednesday, members of the council, under the presidency of Pete Mayer, publisher of HomeBuyers Guide, will follow Agid's detailed account of the four years of planning leading up to the opening which is scheduled for June.

The dinner meeting Wednesday, will be preceded by a social hour beginning at 6:00 p.m. and the public is invited.

Decorator bonus offered at SeaScape townhomes

Barely a dozen townhomes remain to be sold during the final closeout sale now in progress at the leisure oriented community of SeaScape located at Huntington Harbour.

As an added incentive during SeaScapes final closeout each purchaser will receive a $750 "decorators allowance" which can be applied toward drapes, upgraded carpets, mirrored wardrobes or in any manner the homeowner desires.

The remaining townhomes are the last of 71 residences designed primarily for young marrieds, singles, and active adults who desire a recreation-oriented lifestyle.

Residents at SeaScape can enjoy the lavishly equipped clubhouse, a sparkling swimming pool, jacuzzi, sauna or the lighted tennis court. These amenities coupled with the development's close proximity to the Harbour beach and shopping, have all been major factors in the project's success.

Prices of the two-bedroom townhomes with 2 ½ baths begin at $48,950 with 80% and 90% financing available.

"Never again will the quality and value be offered to the public at this price in this location and now with the "decorators bonus" being offered for a limited period only, it is the best time for potential buyers to select one of the award-winning townhomes," said Gregg Kent, spokesman for SeaScape.

The SeaScape sales office is open daily at 16744 Algonquin with sales representatives on the premises.

To reach SeaScape, take the Garden Grove Freeway to the Valley View exit. Drive south on Valley View (which becomes Bolsa Chica Avenue) to Warner Avenue, then west on Warner to Algonquin Street. Turn right again and go three blocks to the site.

From Pacific Coast Highway, drive East on Warner Avenue to Algonquin and turn left to the townhome community near Huntington Harbour.

Preview sales at CorteVista

Now is the time to make your selection at Corte Vista, a new community of single story cluster homes in Placentia, during preview sales.

Nestled in the foothills of Northern Orange County, the Costa Construction community offers a fresh new opportunity for carefree townhome living in friendly, small-town surroundings.

Four distinctive floorplans are priced from $49,500 to $56,400. The two and four bedroom residences feature two baths and offer from 1312 to 1467 square feet of living area.

A variety of handsome Spanish-styled exteriors are gracefully accented with tile roofs, wood beams, masonry and wrought-iron detailing.

Inside the residences, a lengthy list of features include vaulted ceiling, wood-burning fireplaces, wall-to-wall carpeting, spacious dining areas and large private patios.

Master suites are complete with private bath/dressing room and walk-in closet or double wardrobe.

Contemporary kitchens feature built-in range, oven, dishwasher, disposal, pantry and luminous ceiling.

Most plans have wet bars and each Corte Vista home includes an enclosed two car garage. In addition, there are separate laundry rooms or garage laundry areas in various plans.

Corte Vista is oriented to the maintenance-free leisure lifestyle and will feature two private tennis courts, a swimming pool and jacuzzi for residents within abundantly landscaped grounds.

The Corte Vista sales facility is open daily for preview selection from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The development may be reached by taking the Riverside Freeway to Tustin Avenue. Drive north on Tustin Avenue which becomes Rose Drive to the intersection of Rose Drive and Buena Vista Avenue and the model homes.

JUNE 23-25:

'Petaluma Decision' topic of upcoming conference

A cross-section of prominent Western builders will direct three days of educational programs during the upcoming Pacific Coast Builders Conference that will reveal, among other things, whether the recent "Petaluma Decision" is the death knell for builders and if the "basic house" is indeed basic.

In announcing the programs for the PCBC, to be held June 23-25 at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco, Conference Program Chairman Bernie Hagan said the impact of the Petaluma case on the future of the building industry and on the ability of consumers to buy homes will be a keynote question at PCBC.

The recent decision by the Supreme Court not to review a lower court ruling in favor of Petaluma's right to control the number of housing units built in the community is regarded by builders to have potentially widespread ramifications, Hagan said.

The impact of the skyrocketing costs of developing land as relates to initiating a housing project will be a central theme of a session on "The Advantages of Buying Developed or Unfinished Lots." Scheduled to head this panel discussion is Emmett Clifford, vice president of McKeon Homes of San Mateo.

PCBC is the nation's largest regional builder's gathering and annually draws in excess of 6000 people to its educational sessions and product exhibition.

Rich or poor, you need estate plan

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a three-part series dealing with the importance of estate planning at all income levels. Subsequent articles will discuss joint ownership of property and trust programs.)

By GERALDINE STROZIER
Knight News Service

Dying is not as easy as you think, at least not the kind of dying that leaves everything in order and your family well provided for.

But thinking about the financial well-being of your family after you are gone involves thinking about your own going, a topic most people are less than eager to approach.

And the few who face the inevitable usually skip lightly over getting their affairs in order, figuring a life insurance policy and a house in the suburbs is about the best their families can expect.

But it isn't. A little time and planning now can save your heirs a great deal of trouble and possibly thousands of dollars in unnecessary death taxes. Trust funds, adequate life insurance and general estate planning are not only for the rich. Anyone who has a family and a modest amount of property can benefit.

Yet many middle-income people don't know about estate planning nor recognize the need to find out about it. Their vague, usually mistaken assumptions about the laws of inheritance place in jeopardy a lifetime of hard earned savings:

1. "If I die without a will, all my property will go to my wife anyway."

2. "My husband and I have all our property in joint ownership. So when one of us dies, the other will get everything and not have to pay any death tax."

3. "There's no point in setting up a trust for my children — middle-class people like me don't have enough money to make it worthwhile."

Wrong on all counts.

If you die without a will, leaving a wife and children, division of your estate probably will depend on state laws. In some states, for instance, a wife would get one-third of the estate while the other two-thirds would go to your children.

If you have all your property in joint ownership, you may be able to avoid state inheritance taxes, which are extremely low, anyway, in many states, but it won't help with federal tax.

The IRS will assume that the spouse who died is the actual owner and tax it accordingly. The only exception is property the survivor can prove he or she paid for with the survivor's own money. And the IRS does not include the labor of a lifetime housewife. Cash contributions are all that count.

The IRS allows a surviving spouse half of the entire estate tax free, plus an additional deduction of $60,000 that every estate may claim regardless of the heir.

Spouses who cannot prove they contributed to the estate will have to pay death taxes on the remainder. But because of the exemptions, this tax will be felt only by the relatively well-to-do.

A SURPRISING number of middle-income people will leave an estate large enough to pay estate taxes on, and therefore large enough to justify a trust to reduce those taxes.

"The $120,000 estate is a middle-class reality today," says Sylvia Porter, the financial columnist. And a great many fairly ordinary people who never had very much money during their lifetime are leaving estates of $200,000 and up.

But because people often fail to realize their true financial situation, they do not put their money where it can work best for their families.

Most people accumulate their estates in a haphazard way. They pick up an insurance policy here, a little property there, a few shares in General Motors or participation in an employer's profit sharing program.

They rarely sit down and decide exactly what they are aiming for, either in terms of their own retirement, or what they want to leave their spouse, or whether they have adequately provided for their school-age children, says Donald Levitt, a financial planner for Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. Yet without such planning people can waste many of their resources.

A man could leave a successful business to his children, for example, but if he failed to leave them enough cash to pay death taxes, they would have to sell the business to raise the money.

The first thing people need to do, says Levitt, is to total up exactly what their estate would be if they died right now. Then they need to decide, given their particular circumstances, what they need to leave their families to ensure their well-being.

It is not difficult to figure how much you are worth. Total up your life insurance, the market value of your house minus the mortgage, the value (resale, not replacement) of the furnishings, your automobiles and other personal items with cash value, real estate holdings and stocks and bonds. Then figure out what the income on this property would be. Many people, for example, will not want to sell their home to invest the money for income.

The next step is to decide what kinds of conditions you want to cover. If you have young children, their education must be considered. If your spouse works and earns enough to support the family without you, then your family will probably need less income from your estate than you might think.

If the income from your current holdings would be less than your family will need, you have some planning to do.

MOST ESTATE PLANNERS say you should leave your family in roughly the same economic position they are in with you here. If you deduct Social Security payments and the cost of your living expenses, your family should be able to manage on roughly 60 to 75 per cent of your current income.

If you are wealthy, 50 or even 35 per cent would probably be enough.

Part of this income may come from investments, but for most middle-class families, it will come mostly from a combination of life insurance and Social Security payments.

Social Security pays benefits to surviving spouses over 60 or those with dependent children under 18, to totally disabled spouses over 50, to children under 18 who are unmarried or under 22 if they are fulltime students, to toally disabled adult children whose disability predates their 22nd birthday and in some cases to dependent parents 62 or older.

The payments vary according to how long the

Lewis J. Arthur had beans for lunch three days in a row.

Arthur (that's not his real name) is not all that thrilled about beans. His problem was that he couldn't read the label even with his glasses. He was pulling beans off the pantry shelf even though he was hoping he might come up with corn or peas.

Then Arthur heard about the new Low Vision Center at St. Mary Medical Center in Long Beach. It has solved a lot of problems for him and provided him with a balanced diet as well.

There are thousands of persons in the harbor area who, like Lewis Arthur, have special problems of low vision, according to Dr. Orville W. Cole, Long Beach ophthalmologist who is the guiding force behind the establishment of the center.

Who qualifies for the center? Anyone who can't perform his normal activities with eyeglasses.

Do you have to live in Long Beach? Not especially. The second person to visit the center was a woman who resides in Missouri.

And what does the center do? It provides magnification and lighting devices, holding equipment for reading materials, and special large-type periodicals and books.

One of the most spectacular devices available in the center is a visual aid to assist persons with moderate to severe visual limitations. It's a closed-circuit television arrangement that can magnify up to 60 times and enable the individual to read and write.

The lettering on the TV screen can be reproduced as black on white or white on black. The latter is easier on the eyes of a light-sensitive person.

Three such devices are to be made available at the St. Mary center.

SMALLER AIDS will be given free to the person attending the center. These will include items such as hand magnifiers, stand magnifiers (both fixed focus and adjustable focus), headborne magnifiers, visorettes (fits glasses to eliminate glare), reading stands, large-print telephone dials, large playing cards, bold-ruled writing paper and a check-writing guide (stencil that fits over check to make writing easier).

Information about large-print publications will be made available. About 300 books, records and tape cassettes are obtainable from the Library of Congress.

Dr. Cole says that among the eye patients who may benefit from the Low Vision Center are those who have a disorder known as senile macular degeneration or disorders such as retinal hemorrhages, opacities in the vitreous, retinitis pigmentosa, diabetic retinopathy or congenitally poor vision.

Although services at the Low Vision Center are free, patients must first undergo a medical eye examination by a physician and then be referred to the center.

One or two technicians will be present at the center. Currently the facility, located in two third-floor rooms, is open three half days a week, but the goal is to be operational five days a week.

At the center there will be an hour-long eye examination in an endeavor to select the best possible visual aids for the patient. A follow-up visit about a week later will be given to those who require it.

The Low Vision Center was made possible by a substantial gift to the St. Mary Foundation from the estate of the late Nancy and Bill Brooks. Mr. Brooks was a prominent Long Beach industrial realtor. Mrs. Brooks had expressed to Dr. Cole a desire to leave funds for eye care. A recognition plaque honoring the Brooks is to be erected in the center.

SPECIAL goggle-like magnifying glass fits over regular eyeglasses of Helen Suder, helped on a visit to Low Vision Center by Karen Hansen, center technician. Headgear, known as Opti-Visor, leaves individual's hands free to turn pages or to write.

ROCK STAR Elton John — answers to variety of questions about his clothes, glasses, career, personality, where he lives, how to write to him.

SINGER Ginger Rogers — gala birthday celebration on stage.

COMEDIAN Godfrey Cambridge — bag prevents bulges.

hy gardner

Q: Is Elton John a pushy, swaggering celebrity like other superstars I'd rather not mention? Or is he a gracious person?

A: Elton is a shy guy whose head is not inflated with his own press clippings. He's as normal as any 29-year-old boy millionaire who earned, not inherited, his fortune.

Q: Where can we write to Elton John for pictures? And how do we get personal messages to him? And is there a fan club near us?

A: Address such notes in care of the Howard Rose Agency, 9720 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Ca. (Then cross your fingers hoping they'll land in Elton's hands.) Try the same source for information about a fan club in your area. For photos, write M.C.S. Records, 2711 Gatehouse Drive, Village of Purnell, Baltimore, Md., 21207.

Q: Where in France is Elton John living?

A: He's not living in France but in Middlesex, England.

Q: Did James Caan ever give an excuse for turning down an invite to pose for one of those nude centerfolds, a la Burt Reynolds? — B. Delgado, Pittsburgh.

A: "My refusal," the canny Caan commented, "is not because my hands are too small!"

Q: Any reaction on the part of any American League pitchers who have to face Hank Aaron again this season — after the home-run king said he was going to retire in '76? — Lawrence Dreyfuss, Baltimore.

A: Yes. "I threw him his last home-run pitch and thought I'd be remembered for that," Bill Lee, the Red Sox lefty, lamented. "Now I'll have to throw him another."

Q: When he's on TV talk shows, why does Godfrey Cambridge wear a shoulder bag? — Bernie Miller, Syracuse, N.Y.

A: "Because I'm in the habit of carrying so many things I find I bulge in the behind unless I wear something like a sack or shoulder holster," the comedian explains. "The 'things' include bottles of vitamin pills, an address book, a writing pad, a stack of credit cards, reading and sun glasses and a handy tape recorder in case I think of something funny I don't want to forget."

Q: The highlight of my vacation in Las Vegas would be if I could catch Ginger Rogers' highly acclaimed new act there. When will she be appearing? Also where was she born and when? — D. O'Connell, Youngstown, Ohio.

A: Ginger (the second-most-famous American born in Independence, Mo.) will celebrate her 65th birthday on the stage of the Frontier Hotel July 16. She'll be there through Aug. 4. Prior to that she'll play the Desert Inn from June 1 through 28.

A tip: If you make her July 16 show at the Frontier you may see many of her contemporaries, maybe even Fred Astaire, in the audience toasting her birthday. (Ginger's respect, affection and admiration for her former dancing partner is so deeply ingrained she still refers to him as "Mr. Astaire.")

Q: Settle a bet. We've seen Robert Mitchum in uniform in so many movies ("G.I. Joe," "30 Seconds Over Tokyo," "Gung Ho," etc.) that we'd like to know if he ever was a G.I. for real — Jen Johndrow, St. Louis.

A: Yes. Right after "G.I. Joe" made Mitchum a star in 1944, he turned in his movie uniform to his studio's wardrobe department, was drafted and spent eight months in various Army posts as a G.I. But he didn't like it. "The Army," he said, "is geared to the constitutionally, psychopathically inferior. You're in a box — one, two, three, four. You never get beyond four!"

ACTOR James Caan — small hands not his problem.

ACTOR Robert Mitchum — Army life not for him.

BASEBALL great Hank Aaron — retirement record premature.

Twice the entertainment pleasure

When the bright young eager beavers who inherited MGM discovered old musicals lying fallow in the studio vault, the result was "That's Entertainment!", an all-star compilation of musical film clips that reaped a bonanza. It was like discovering oil in the parking lot outside Louis B. Mayer's office.

Well, it was inevitable. If so many old movies excited so many people, there was more where that came from, wasn't there? So they went back into the vaults and came up with a sequel called "That's Entertainment 2."

It was also inevitable that, like all overnight successes, "That's Entertainment!" and its glittering sequel would spawn a swarm of rather hateful little kissing cousins who would emerge from the woodwork uninvited to fight for scraps, like all the mysterious claimants now scratching around for pieces of Howard Hughes' will.

The first to show its ugly head is an anthropomorphic ripoff called "It's Showtime!", which is a kind of four-legged "That's Entertainment!" passing itself off as an entertainment for children. My advice is to keep it on a high shelf, away from reach, with a skull and crossbones on its label. But more about that anon.

"That's Entertainment 2," which opened last week in New York and then unfolds as the opening-night gala at the Cannes Film Festival, is everything it claims to be. While it is easy to find fault with most sequels, I cannot imagine anyone being too disappointed with this one.

It's a glittering extravaganza of music, dancing, comedy and Technicolor excitement. Neither can I imagine two more reliable hosts than Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly, who sing and dance together in brand new numbers for the first time since "Ziegfeld Follies."

There are special lyrics for the title song that enable these Terpsichorean marvels to lead us in a time-step through the various phases of the movie, and enough rhythm and pizazz in the old boys to remind one and all that they could easily make a penny-bright new musical tomorrow if all the heads were in all the right places.

IF I HAVE ANY reservations about "That's Entertainment 2" they concern the structure of the film, not the content. There is too much introductory material when we want to skip the dialogue and get to the musical numbers. At times, the whole enterprise looks more like a TV special than a nostalgic tour through the great moments in movie history, and unless I'm wrong, I could even spot the commercial breaks.

The sections of the film have been extended to include not only musicals but also comedies, romantic teams and favorite one-liners from MGM classics. I would have preferred some of the more obscure musical numbers, even from bad movies, to the

familiar, tried-and-true numbers from "Easter Parade" and "Annie Get Your Gun."

Everyone will have a particular favorite that is missing (mine is the "Stanley Steamer" number from "Summer Holiday"). But that is mere carping in a dazzling movie with more than enough to go around for all. Besides, they had to leave something for "That's Entertainment 3!"

You'll see what I mean. There's the indefatiguable Eleanor Powell, clomping her way through "Fascinatin' Rhythm"; Jimmy Durante, growling his way through the immortal "Inka Dinka Doo" with Harry James; Jeannette MacDonald chirping to Nelson Eddy "Oh, Charles, you can't fight the whole French fleet!" before swooning her way into "Lover Come Back To Me" ("New Moon"); and Judy, Mickey, the whole Tommy Dorsey orchestra and hundreds of rope-twirling Busby Berkeley cowboys doing "I Got Rhythm" (from "Girl Crazy").

Bobby Van stops the show with a number from "Small Town Girl," in which he jumps through an entire town and ends up in the traffic followed by cheering mobs and dogs doing the same dance steps. Bob Fosse, Ann Miller and the late, great Carol Haney leap through walls in "Kiss Me Kate" as though their feet had wings. The amazing Oscar Levant plays Gershwin's "Concerto in F," acting out the roles of each member of the orchestra and the conductor, too!

Ethel Waters shows what legends are made of in a number from "Cabin in the Sky." Gene Kelly dances with cartoon genies in the "Sinbad" number from "Invitation to the Dance," then sails through the streets of New York on roller skates in "It's Always Fair Weather." Ah, they sure don't make them like they used to. Today he'd get mugged.

GRETA GARBO will surprise and delight her fans doing a wild dance called "La Chica Chaca" ("Two-Faced Woman"); Rodgers and Hart, who we all know looked like Tom Drake and Mickey Rooney, show us how they wrote "Manhattan" ("Words and Music"); Judy Garland breaks Margaret O'Brien's heart on Christmas Eve singing "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas" ("Meet Me in St. Louis"); and it wouldn't be a show without Esther Williams, wet and wonderful, leading an entire flotilla of water-skiers through Cypress Gardens before an airplane lifts her into the sky and plops her into the Atlantic as thousands cheer.

Lassie comes home, Tracy punches Hepburn, Gable tells Scarlett he doesn't give a damn, the Marx Brothers stuff a flotilla into a closet-size stateroom, and all of Fred Astaire's socks and accessories match. (When I was a kid, I used to march around the South, in and out of haberdashery stores, trying vainly to find yellow socks and yellow sweaters like Fred's, not realizing that MGM was designing them that way.)

Intellectual weight-watchers who thrive on lean, sparse movie material are advised to forget the calories and gorge. This spectacular, finger-snapping sequel to "That's Entertainment!" is a Baskin-Robbins special, with 40 flavors of mouth-watering surprise. It will make you feel full, rich and happy to be alive.

"IT'S SHOWTIME!" is a sleazy affair, produced by Fred Weintraub and Paul Heller, whose researchers combed through miles of film going back to early

DANCERS Fred Astaire, left, and Gene Kelly are film hosts for "That's Entertainment 2," which gets high marks from Rex Reed for its nostalgic look at movies and stars of bygone years. AP Wirephoto

AT WIT'S END

One day at a time

My son is a Bicentennial graduate.

He looks like any other kid. He's 18. Eats unbalanced meals. Would kill for car keys. Has fruit flies around his locker. Threatens to self-destruct if we bring a camera to his graduation.

I didn't wake up 18 years ago and announce, "Hey, we've got to get going on a Bicentennial graduate." It just happened.

I'm sorry in a way. I wish I could spare him the same exploitation as the Bicentennial key ring, the Bicentennial

erma bombeck

hamburger, the Bicentennial fireplug decorating competition, and the Bicentennial headache.

HE AND MILLIONS of graduates are going to get it come commencement — the forefathers-on-the-threshold-of-a-brand-new-destiny number comparing today's graduates with their forefathers.

Not that it isn't a good pitch. I've heard it before. It makes you square your shoulders, sit up a little straighter (the girls often cry), and for a moment you want to walk out on Lake Erie and be by yourself.

Then, the "threshold of a brand new destiny" speech wears off like a shot of Novocaine and you are left on the brink with a brave, exciting future and $1.40 in your pocket.

What does my son know? What has he been taught? He knows you can't march in a graduation line and chew gum at the same time. He knows you can't make it in this world unless you know how to diagram a sentence. He knows you can't pass phys. ed. unless you take showers. He knows gym clothes can be a major air pollutant. Some school lunches must be accompanied by a prescription. His typing teacher is into TM.

He suspects every other graduate knows exactly where he is going — but him.

He's apprehensive about his future. He's scared and he's confused. He feels like a kid who has just been given an award for being able to cope and someone stole his chair while he was receiving it.

I WISH I COULD assure him there is no comparison whatsoever between him and his forefathers. It was one thing to write the book on a new land. It's another to live in it 200 years later. No one, not even his forefathers, could possibly imagine the burden of raising a country from birth to maturity.

I wish I could tell him that the day after graduation he will wake feeling no different than he did today. He won't be wise, dedicated, or chomping to get off his brink.

He will only be meeting his challenges one day at a time ... which is the way his forefathers did it ... 200 years ago.

Almost any plant takes on a new and attractive appearance when placed in a gay and attractive planter. Not only that, planters provide you with many of the delights of full scale gardening and are much easier to maintain.

This mobile garden can move into the sun or shade to give your flowers the exact amount of light needed.

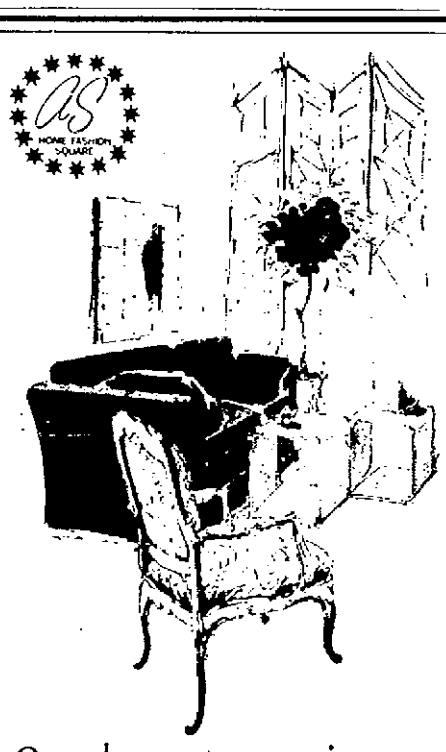

The planter pictured here is made of exterior plywood with three stepped-up trays for planting and maintenance. Our easy-to-follow plan includes a complete materials list, trace-on designs and a cutting diagram that shows how to lay out the design on plywood. Any amateur can tackle this project on a weekend and have the planter in bloom in no time at all.

To obtain the full-size planter pattern Number 318, send $1.50 (includes first class postage and handling). For our special Lawn and Garden Packet (9 patterns including a chaise lounge, window boxes, awnings and many more lawn projects), send $4 by cash, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Dept. SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Guests 'n' gargoyles ogled the same sunset

BILL AND CAROLYN Steuber invited some 40 friends to get high in the sky. No, that doesn't mean that the guests over drank the cocktails.

It means that the Steubers opened the penthouse on the 16th floor of the Villa Riviera for a "come and watch the sunset" cocktail hour.

There is some question whether the penthouse is

carolyn mcdowell

on the 16th or 15th floor since, like many tall buildings, the Villa has no superstitious 13th floor.

Anyway, the elevator was busy transporting party-goers to the top of the building. Party site is now an apartment but in bygone days, the living room area was called a chapel complete with organ loft.

A hand painted ceiling three stories high is the main feature of the residence which has been termed a mini-San Simeon through the years. The apartment also contains what may be the highest fireplace in town.

The three-way view was all the entertainment the guests needed but there was more.

When the sun set, watchers were given questionaires asking them to guess the square footage of the apartment (1,750) and a prize was supposed to be given to the person who came up with the best name for the gargoyles.

You probably can't see them while you are whizzing down Ocean Boulevard but there are five pairs of the bizarre figures encircling the tower.

Don't think anyone won a prize because the names they came up with were more bizarre than the carved creatures.

Patti Carey, there with husband Dale, thought the names should be Oscar and Felix (after the characters in "Odd Couple"), Pete and Lydia Kent opted for Batman and Robin, Dave and Kay Berg weren't even in the running with Old Baldy and Fido.

The host couldn't recall the wag who came up with Laurel and Hardy but did mention that Bud and Bonnie Baccus voted for Jeannette McDonald and Nelson Eddy.

The powder room was in constant use, not because of the facilities but because everyone wanted to see the hand glazed tiles set with fish figures swming endlessly around the room as they have been doing since 1932 when the building was completed.

Among other visitors were Ron and Pat Wilkinson, Hal and Gay Steuber, Norm and Bea Scott, Judy Nixon, John and Joan Knight, Bob and Lucille Metcalf, Dick and Pat Watkins, Doug Lefler, Don and Suzanne Wilson, Tom and Sandi Shadden and Sid and Margie Peizer.

SPEAKING OF HOMES...

Contingent of Long Beach ladies headed South of the Border for annual Tijuana Home Tour. This year's tour featured four homes in Tijuana Shores.

The sponsoring Caridad Internacional is a group of 25 women from Tijuana and 25 from San Diego who join hands in promoting international good will along with supporting various philanthropies with tour proceeds.

The Long Beach ladies also supported most of the shops in Tijuana with purchases of everything from a child sized table and chair for Iola Masterson's granddaughter, Megan, to clothes from Sara's and brass-bound glass boxes from Tolan's purchased by Julia Cheney. Julia buys the boxes for friends. Since she is an expert at needlepoint, she does a piece the to fit the bottom of the see-through containers in appropriate colors and sometimes initals.

Co-shoppers with Julia were Dorothy Lineberger, Virginia Welch, Evelyn Miller and Francine Collins.

Other tourers included Elaine Grobaty, Grace Cameron, Middie Masterson, Marie Hauck, Agnes Markle, Joan Knight, Jean Sanders and former Long Beacher Pat Swanson, now of Los Angeles.

In addition to the home visits, guests were treated to an exhibition of precision horseman(woman?) horsepersonship by eight young Mexican ladies.

Might not sound so novel to you unless you knew that they were garbed in black boots authentic sombreros and long white gowns.

DINAH SHORE used to sing "See The USA in your Chevrolet."

The Atzens, Terry and Janice with youngsters Jennifer, 13, and Jonathan, 11, chose Amtrack.

Cross country trip was months in the planning.

The Atzens bought an Amtrack Rail pass and the odyssey was on.

They began the 23-day trip at Union Station in Los Angeles and went on to Ft. Madison, Iowa, where they had to rent a car since the train didn't go to Des Moines where they wanted to visit relatives.

Itinerary included stops at Chicago, Boston, New York City, Washington, D.C., and even Concord and Lexington to visit the statue of the Minuteman.

Janice reports that they spent only six nights on the trains, rest of the nights were at hotels or homes of relatives. The food on the trains was not expensive and while it was not gourmet, it was good. The majority of the trains were modern, air conditioned and comfortable. Janice said they rode only one that should have been retired — many were even plush.

Next time take the train?

THEY TOOK a boat.

Bill and Georgia Chelius and daughter Suzie chose the cruise ship Nordic Prince for a Caribbean vacation. Good friends Bill and Dorothy Watson joined them for stops at St. Thomas, San Juan, Caracas, Aruba, Curacao, Jamaica and Haiti.

Women are asking...

'I love to wear denims, but others seem to look better in jeans than I do. Is there some way they can be fit to flatter more?'

"Blue jeans are one of America's finest contributions to the fashion scene." This is the opinion of a group of European designers who state a love for Levis is international. In some foreign countries, visitors are even stopped on the street and asked to sell their denims. According to a leading tailor, "The fit is the important thing. The length of the jean should be tapered. On a woman, the leg length should be ½-inch shorter in the front than the back (because of heels). One inch shorter in front on a man. If the Levis are stitched at the sides, use matching thread and stitch them around the hem. If they are plain, use a blind stitch. The fuller figure looks best in a flared leg. If you're slender and the pants look baggy, take them in at the inner seam between the legs."

Some find that the waistband is tight, and there are no seams to let out. Use material left over from shortening the pant legs, or from the underside of the cuff.

Never add material at the center back seam, for it will show. Instead make a triangle of the fabric, and open a side seam, sewing it so the point of the triangle heads down. Also, use some fabric at the center of the back of the waistband. This will give added room without spoiling the line.

The shirt or sweater selected gives the outfit a special lift. Actress Liberty Williams, starred in the Walt Disney film, "Gus," chose a sky blue and white striped T-shirt, with the words, "terrific T shirt" spelled out around the topper.

P.S. Maybe your denims reveal too much you! If so, check the lose-a-pound-a-day diet, the famous Hollywood 4-day diet. Send 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba and Bonnie Churchill, "4-day diet for figure trimmers," Independent Press Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Ca. 90046.

Help Europe's teachers 'meet the Americans'

Setting off a string of firecrackers, that's one way to celebrate the Bicentennial. Pop,pop,pop and they're gone in seconds. Illegal, too, in many areas.

There is another longer lasting way. It involves extending a hand of welcome across the sea to Europe. When that hand is figuratively clasped it can mean the beginning of enduring friendships stemming from the opportunity to show European teachers that life in the United States is different from portrayals in the foreign press and TV and movie screens.

The American Host program, aptly subtitled "Meet the Americans," brings English-speaking teachers from Europe to the United States for a one or two week stay in homes of American families.

More than 400 teachers will arrive in Southern California during July and August.

Aye, and that's the rub, for more host homes are needed in this area. Seeking a solution is Mrs. William S. Hansen, 61 Sea Isle Drive, who has been named Long Beach committee chairman of the program.

Host families and their guests are matched according to compatible interests determined by teacher interview and family questionnaire. The host family provides a room and meals for the visitor, introduces him or her to friends and neighbors and provides an opportunity to become acquainted with the community. Each teacher lives up to two weeks with two families in different parts of the area he has selected.

Potential host families should contact either Mrs. Hansen or write to The American Host Foundation, 9942 Catherine Ave., Garden Grove.

THE PROGRAM has been named the official home hospitality program of the California Bicentennial Commission. It is administered by the nonprofit American Host Foundation which has during the past 15 years brought more than 8,000 European teachers to American homes to learn about the American way of life.

The foundation's board of directors includes Congressman Barry Goldwater Jr. and William S. Hansen, president of Buffums Department Stores.

Work of the foundation has the endorsement and support of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration and President Gerald Ford.

When teachers Tom and Frances Murphy of Garden Grove were studying European school systems 15 years ago, they found many misconceptions about the United States.

Gradually the American Host — Meet the Americans program evolved until now the Murphys spend full time on the project. In the first summer, 60 British, French and German teachers and more than 100 families pioneered the project with unqualified enthusiasm.

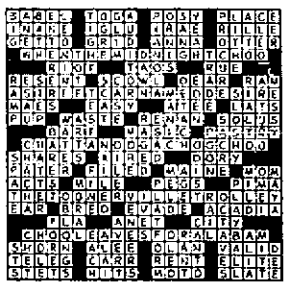

In answer to a request by the foreign teachers for intensive mini-courses in American literature, drama and poetry, seminars have taken place since 1965 in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass. In 1970 four more states offered one-week seminars, and quotas were rapidly filled.

Q. Why do we work 360 days per year 12 hrs. per day?

Planning will ease way for heirs

deceased person worked and how much she or he earned. Widows get these benefits without having to prove they were dependent on their husbands. Widowers in many cases have to prove dependency, but this matter is being challenged in the courts.

BUT — AND THIS is a very big "but" for some people — payments to surviving spouses start to decrease as soon as he or she makes more than $2,760 a year in salary. For every $2 earned over that, the recipient loses $1 in benefits.

On the other hand, earnings from investments can reach the millions and not affect Social Security payments.

Women who are widowed should be aware that the Social Security system leaves them without income between their children's coming of age and the year the wives reach 60. The fact that jobs are not always easy to find for widows in their 50s who have not worked outside the home should be part of any estate plan.

Another element in most estate plans is a pension. But women, who typically live longer than men and are less likely than men to have pensions in their own right, often find themselves without this added income when their husbands die. The men had failed to sign up for survivors' benefits.

In order to protect widows, Congress ordered all pension programs to make this option available. A participant may sign up for survivors' benefits and thus provide his wife with continued pension payments after his death, although pension income before his death will be slightly reduced.

But many people fail to take advantage of the plan. In one company, for example, only about seven per cent of the retiring employes chose this plan, even though law requires that they specifically sign away the right.

Even when a surviving spouse qualifies for a pension and for Social Security payments, survival without an outside job may be difficult.

So most men providing for a dependent wife and young children supplement their estates with life insurance — to cover inflation, unexpected expenses and the inevitable costs of college education and other expenses normally considered part of middle class life.

And most people with or without dependent spouses or young children buy life insurance to provide themselves and their spouses with a ready-made savings account for retirement and the special expenses of old age.

HOW MUCH LIFE insurance should the average person buy? According to many experts, there is no average person when it comes to life insurance. Everything depends on your circumstances — on whether both spouses work, on the ages of children, on whether the estate has a need for cash.

If you use 60 per cent of current income as a starting point and adjust it to fit your specific circumstances, you have a general formula to work with.

Assume for a moment you are a man in your 30s with a wife who stays home with two small children. If you earn $25,000 a year, you will need to leave them an income of about $16,000 in their present circumstances.

Social Security will pay your wife and young children about $8,500 a year providing she doesn't go to work. Since you have not reached retirement age, your pension will not be a factor right now.

Assuming you do not have large sums of money invested in real estate and stock, life insurance is the likeliest way to bring your family's income up to $16,000, to provide capital to withstand inflation and special expenses such as college, and to cushion your wife over the years before she reaches 60 and after the children reach 18 in case she can't find work then.

To provide an adequate yet not lavish support for this family, a man would need to carry about $200,000 of life insurance, says Don Levitt — and that coverage would be very expensive.

Whole life insurance of this amount would cost $4,000 a year — rather more than most people earning $25,000 a year can afford.

So what are the alternatives?

A mixture of whole and term insurance, says Levitt. For as little as $600 a year intitially, a man could get the same $200,000 in term insurance.

Whole life insurance is a permanent policy. It pays benefits when you die or, if you prefer, you may cash it for what you have paid in.

Term insurance provides a death benefit only. It cannot be cashed in, and it is effective only for a specified time, such as three years. It may be renewed at the end of that period but the premiums increase as you grow older. It is usually bought to cover the time when the surviving family's needs are greatest.

But Levitt also recommends some whole life insurance just because it represents a good way to force savings — "Even the most careful person tends to play tricks with his savings, investing it here and there, and often losing it," said Levitt — and because term insurance becomes prohibitively costly at later ages.

Now that you have a rough idea of what your estate will be, you need to figure out what to do with it.

MONDAY: The mysteries of joint ownership.

...guidelines to follow

The business of estate planning is a complex one. Here are a few general guidelines to help your heirs.

1. No estate inherited by a surviving spouse is charged estate taxes unless it is in excess of $120,000.

2. Anyone inheriting an estate from a spouse is entitled to a tax deduction of one half its value.

3. Every estate, regardless of the heir's relationship to the deceased is entitled to a deduction of $60,000 in addition to whatever other deductions are claimed.

4. If one's estate consists of a business, real estate or some other substantial property besides cash, provision should be made for a cash supply to pay the death taxes without having to sell the property.

5. Don't bank too far afield. When you die, it is much easier for your lawyer and heirs to locate accounts if you use banks near at hand. This applies to people who fail to keep records of all their financial transactions.

6. Leave a letter somewhere handy and visible listing your assets, bank accounts, insurance policies and other important financial documents so your family can find their inheritance without too much trouble.

7. To get advice on estate planning, check with your bank. Experts there will help you plan your estate and they can recommend reliable insurance people and lawyers to prepare trusts and wills.

8. Heirs can find out whether or not they have missed any insurance policies by checking with the Institute of Life Insurance, 277 Park Ave., New York 10017. The institute will check its members for you to see if you have any payments coming from overlooked policies. Their membership includes companies handling 90 per cent of the nation's life insurance business.

Benefit at Busch scheduled Saturday

A "Bicentennial Bash at Busch Gardens" is planned Saturday by Town and Gown Junior Auxiliary of USC.

Athletic stars from USC's past and present will compete on tricycles, with Frisbies, blindfolded, in inner tubes and with balloons as part of the odd-ball Olympics.

Gates open at 7 p.m., with events scheduled for 8. Tickets are $10 for adults and $6 for children 4 to 11 years, and cover all Busch Gardens rides and attractions. Proceeds go to provide academic and athletic scholarships to USC.

AMONG former SC athletes participating are footballers O.J. Simpson, Anthony Davis, Los Angeles City Councilman John Ferraro, Mike Garrett, Manfred Moore, Bill Fisk, Rod Sherman, Olympic pole vaulter Bob Seagren Olympic swimmer Roy Saari, Gary Carlsen and Sherry Calvert.

The USC song girls and Trojan Marching Band will add spirit to the occasion.

Among area women helping with arrangements are Mmes. G. Christopher Davis, James Prock and Edward Givens, all of Palos Verdes.

Tickets are available by mail to "Bicentennial Bash at Busch," c/o Alumni Special Events Office, Alumni House, University Park, Los Angeles 90007.

PV women set spring garden tour

Seven gardens on the Palos Verdes Peninsula will be featured at a Spring Garden Tour sponsored by Palos Verdes Women's Club Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The new administration building at South Coast Botanic Gardens, 26300 Crenshaw Blvd., will be open for refreshments from noon to 3:30 p.m. Tram tours of this facility also will be available.

Tickets are $3.50 each and information may be obtained from Mrs. Donald Austin or Mrs. Horace Maxey.

Portraits are records of the progess of time

THIS carefully wrought Sioux cradle is in exhibit of native American Indian work at Downey Museum of Art.

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Portraits that record the life of a woman over a period of 60 years will go on exhibit Tuesday at Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

The woman is Madame Helena Rubinstein and the portraits are from the Helena Rubinstein Foundation; they will hang through June 20.

Offering insight into the personality of the cosmetics industry pioneer — as interpreted by 20th century artists such as Rene Bouche, Count Emmanuele Castelbarco, Salvador Dali, Raoul Dufy, Marie Laurencin, Louis Marcoussis, Roberto Montenegro, Candido Portinari, Graham Sutherland and Pavel Tchelitchew — the paintings reflect a variety of styles.

Highlights include Laurencin's very feminine portrait of 1943; a gouache by Raoul Dufy painted in 1935 showing Rubinstein in a blue sailor suit with a bright red bow; Salvador Dali's surrealistic portrait of 1942-43 depicting her chained to a cliff by ropes of her famous jewels; and probably her most famous portrait of all by Graham Sutherland. This one, showing her wearing a red brocade Balenciaga gown, was painted in 1959 when she was 88 years old.

Aside from the portraits, Rubinstein's taste in art ranged from Impressionist, School of Paris, and contemporary painting and sculpture to decorative arts. Her African and Oceanic art is one of the greatest private collections known.

For the Los Angeles showing of the traveling exhibition of portraits, a selection of these latter wood sculptures is being lent to the museum from the Franklin Family Collection. There are Baule tribal drums, Bambara "chi-wara" dance crests, a Bakota reliquary figure and a Fang four-faced mask. A Bangwa figure of a woman, perhaps a queen, from Cameroon has long been esteemed as one of the finest known African wood sculptures.

Among Oceanic objects once owned by Rubinstein are a New Hebrides hand mask, a Maori house post with three carved figures, and a Marquesas Islands club with tiki heads in each side. This once had a place of honor atop Rubinstein's piano in her Paris residence.

CALIFORNIA EIGHT, an exhibition by the department of education at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., opens today. It represents work of the eight instructors at the museum: Harvey Barrows, sculpture and painting; Diana Manseau, watercolor and drawing; Michael Murillo, drawing; Robert Oblon, fine arts bronze casting; Vic Smith, sculpture; P.C. Tippman, ceramic sculpture; Maidy Wolf, printmaking; and Kay Yee, metalsmithing and jewelry.

The 35 works comprising the show will be on view through June 13. Instructors at Long Beach State University or nearby colleges, the artists maintain studios in the Long Beach area and have shown in various galleries.

"California Eight" will be open during regular museum hours Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m.

NATIVE AMERICAN beadwork is on exhibit at Downey Museum of Art where it may be seen through next Sunday. Hours at the museum, 10419 S. Rives Ave., Downey, are 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

Exquisite selections from the extensive Claremont University Collection show fine examples of various techniques of beadwork and include even rarer examples of quillwork. This collection has never before been exhibited publicly but has been housed in the university archives for the past half century. All work dates prior to 1900; the fine condition of each piece attests to the expertise of the early collectors and the careful storage the university has given them.

Almost all objects are clothing or body ornaments. Writes Bowdoin Gil in the catalogue, "Most of the pieces were meant to be viewed in movement. The artists consciously tried to achieve beauty in motion in almost every work."

One of the most popular pieces is a spectacular Sioux saddle blanket, imaginatively displayed with saddle bags over an invisible horse. Other objects are cradle boards, dolls and bandoleer bags.

BEGINNING June 1, the J. Paul Getty Museum, 17985 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu, will return to a Monday through Friday summer schedule. It will be effective through mid-September; the museum's hours will continue to be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Deputy director Stephen Garrett explained that the museum closes on Saturdays during the summer to avoid traffic congestion in adjacent neighborhoods and on Pacific Coast Highway.

While there is no charge to visit the museum, advance parking reservations still are recommended for guaranteed admission. Reservations may be requested by writing to the reservations office or by telephoning. Visitors who arrive by taxi, bicycle or public bus do not need a reservation. However, bus passengers must request a museum pass from the driver; RTD line 175 stops directly in front of the museum.

OUTSTANDING STUDENT works by Long Beach City College artists will be in the LBCC Gallery May 24 through June 4. The admission-free exhibit may be seen Mondays through Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Fridays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The gallery also is open Mondays through Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

The work, juried by the art faculty, will be representative of the best art produced at LBCC this year. There will be paintings, drawings, sculptures, ceramics, crafts, jewelry, prints, designs and commercial art.

ENGLISH artist Graham Sutherland painted 'Helena Rubinstein in a Red Brocade Balenciaga Gown' in 1959 when she was 88.

Copland to conduct Ojai bills

The internationally renowned American composer and conductor Aaron Copland will be artistic director of the 30th Annual Ojai Festival Friday, Saturday and next Sunday.

The often controversial, always stimulating and increasingly popular music festival is held in the outdoor bowl in Ojai, a small town inland from Ventura.

The Los Angeles Ballet, featuring artistic director John Clifford, will be center stage at the opening event Friday at 9 p.m. Members of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, under direction of Sidney Harth, will play "Concerto Barocco" by Bach, "Concerto Grosso" by Vivaldi, "Dumbarton Oaks" by Stravinsky, "Poeme Electronique" by Varese and "Terpsichore Dances" by Praetorius.

arts

COPLAND will be on the podium for both the 8:30 p.m. Saturday and the 5:30 p.m. Sunday orchestral performances. Saturday, pianist Lorin Hollander will be soloist in Copland's "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra." Other pieces by the 76-year-old-master on the Saturday program will be "Statements" and "Inscape." The Philharmonic will close the program with Mendelssohn's "Fourth Symphony" (Italian).

Copland also will conduct Copland — as well as Mahler — next Sunday. The final program of the three-day festival will open with Mahler's "Symphony No. 4," to be followed by Copland's "Symphonic Ode." Soloist for the Mahler work will be soprano Polly Jo Baker.

In addition to the three evening concerts, the festival will include a choral concert Saturday afternoon and a Sunday morning jazz concert.

Tickets are available at all Mutual Ticket Agencies.

Bowl bows to Bicentennial

Hollywood Bowl's management is proclaiming its Summer Festival 76 as a Bicentennial Season to celebrate. It unfurls, like a flag, its attractions.

These include Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic; distinguished guest conductors such as Ormandy and Rozhdestvensky; stellar soloists, including Cliburn, Rampal, Stern and Watts. There's more in the extended 11-week season with the Bowl hosting two major visiting orchestras: the Israel Philharmonic with Mehta conducting and the Cleveland Orchestra with Lorin Maazel directing and, in the best American tradition, a grand Fourth of July Fireworks concert conducted by Mehta.

Mehta will be on the podium to open the Bowl's regular season July 6, conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic in works by the two composers whose music will be featured throughout the summer: Beethoven (Ninth Symphony) and Copland (Suite from "The Tender Land").

Joining forces in this gala concert will be the famed Scottish National Chorus in its American debut as part of Britain's Bicentennial gifts to the United States, and four vocal soloists.

IN ANNOUNCING programs, general director Ernest Fleischmann said that between July 2 and Sept. 18, the Los Angeles Philharmonic will be heard in 40 concerts, 37 on the regular subscription series and three pre-season events. In addition, the Cleveland Orchestra will present three concerts and the Israel Philharmonic one.

To receive a free 1976 brochure listing complete information, write to Hollywood Bowl Brochure, 135 N. Grand Ave., Room 406, Los Angeles, 90012. Season tickets are available by mail only through May 25. Single performance tickets may be ordered now by mail; after June 14 they may be purchased at the box office.

Barenboim, not Serkin, in recital

Pianist Daniel Barenboim will play an all-Beethoven program next Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Center Pavilion, Los Angeles, when he replaces Rudolf Serkin who has been forced by illness to cancel his scheduled appearance on the Los Angeles Philharmonic's Celebrity Recital series.

Barenboim is interrupting a busy schedule to substitute for his colleague. He last appeared with the Los Angeles Philharmonic as conductor and as pianist under Zubin Mehta's baton in February, 1973.

L.B. doctor researching alpha thal

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

A deadly birth disorder, fairly widespread among certain Far Eastern peoples, is beginning to be detected more frequently in the United States.

The disorder is known as congenital alpha thalassemia ("sub 2") and is called alpha thal for short.

A Long Beach physician has found that the disorder often is accompanied by severe birth defects affecting several organs. The significance of the finding is that heroic efforts at saving the baby's life are unwarranted.

Dr. Eunice J. Larson, a pediatric pathologist at the Earl and Loraine Miller Children's Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach, says the inherited disorder

health

is well known among Filipinos, Malaysians, Chinese in Singapore and Hong Kong and in Thailand.

Some live as long as two hours, others die within minutes, still others are stillborn.

Dr. Larson said she has seen victims die only minutes after an exchange blood transfusion.

ALPHA THAL children are grotesquely swollen when born and have small lungs, enlarged hearts, defective thymus, defective kidneys, enlarged pancreas, liver and spleen and, in some instances, abnormalities in the gastrointestinal tract. Two babies in Dr. Larson's series displayed evidence of brain damage.

"These birth defects may or may not be incompatible with life," Dr. Larson says.

Diagnosis of these infants can be made while they're still in the womb by ultrasound or by amniocentesis, insertion of a needle through the mother's abdominal wall into the sac of fluid surrounding the fetus. The ultrasound procedure is easier to perform.

Sometimes the condition can be corrected by therapeutic abortion.

Invariably there is a maternal history of previous stillbirths or death of the newborn soon after birth.

Dr. Larson believes these families should not be given false hope. Five of her mothers had undergone at least one pregnancy with no infant that could live. One woman had produced three affected babies.

When such a medical history is present, Dr. Larson advises testing of both parents for the alpha thal trait.

Dr. Larson gave her report to the Pediatric Pathology Club in Boston.

IN-SIGHTS

Alienation is greatest fear

Asked to identify the single most consistent fear of people with whom I meet and work, I find it to be the sense of being alone, alienated from others, the only one who suffers. Often, when a patient comes to me with a problem, he or she cannot conceive that anyone else could have anything that bad wrong with them.

This may be true even when they know that others might have a similar problem. They may know it, but they still feel alone and separated from the rest of humanity.

In reality, there is literally nothing new under the sun; most all of the ills or anxieties which people have, have been experienced by others past and present. And it is comforting to find out that one is not alone. It may be even more comforting to share feelings and experiences with someone else who has gone through the same trouble, be it emotional or physical.

As a result of this benefit of sharing, a host of organizations has developed over the years. Alcoholics Anonymous, Parents Without Partners, Weight Watchers, Association for Retarded Children — these are but four such organizations which bring together people who have some common stress in their life, and who see an opportunity to learn from and support one another.

IT'S CLEAR that some of these organizations have done more to improve the quality of care for common sufferers than some professional people charged with treating or caring for the problem.

For instance, major legislative improvement in programs for caring for the mentally retarded has come as a result of efforts of the association of parents of retarded children.

And it's well known that Alcoholics Anonymous and some of the similarly structured organizations for drug addicts have been more effective in recovery efforts with fellow sufferers than some professionally-run treatment programs.

IT IS REGRETTABLE that under such stress, people tend to think of themselves in a self-centered way, assuming that "no one else can be like me." It is at such times of hurt and disappointment that the sense of alone-ness can be crushing.

Thus it can be extremely reassuring to encounter someone who has lived through the same travail and survived; indeed, often one finds that the person has not only survived, but become a better person because of the adversity.

One of the special values of the sharing is that both the helper and the helped benefit; it is generally a mutually rewarding encounter. The newly-suffering is brought back into the human community and learns that one can master the adversity. The veteran reinforces his mastery by reliving it, and also gains the satisfaction of relieving the suffering of someone else.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Danger to newborns

Tranquilizers of the benzodiazepine family — Librium, Valium and Serax — may, if taken during pregnancy, lead to withdrawal symptoms in the newborn baby, researchers report.

Excretion of these drugs is slow in adults and markedly delayed in premature infants. So signs of

ben zinser

drug withdrawal may be significantly delayed in the baby.

Physicians caring for infants of mothers who have received these compounds during pregnancy should be alert for a delayed withdrawal syndrome. This is especially likely to take place after the infant has been discharged from the newborn nursery.

The report is that of Brooklyn doctors in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Combating diarrhea

A combination of the drugs trimethoprim and sulfamethoxazole has proved to be the "best currently available drug" for the treatment of shigellosis, a disorder that causes diarrhea.

The finding is highly significant since the drug ampicillin trihydrate, which usually is used to treat this disorder, is sometimes failing to knock out the causative germ.

Resistance to strains of Shigella, the causative organism, to ampicillin is becoming an increasing problem in the United States.

The combination of these two medications customarily is used to treat urinary tract infections.

A liquid suspension form of the two drugs was used in a trial against shigellosis among 28 infants and children in Parkland Memorial Hospital, Dallas, Tex.

When the bacteria were susceptible, there was no difference in response to ampicillin or to the combination preparation, researchers report. But patients who were resistant to ampicillin and then treated with the combination responded well.

Researchers were affiliated with the Southwestern Medical School of the University of Texas at Dallas.

Brucellosis on increase

The largest number of cases of human brucellosis in six years occurred in 1974, reversing the gradual decline of the disease noted in the last 27 years.

The Center for Disease Control, Atlanta, Ga., says there were 246 cases in 1974 — an increase of 78 cases from the previous year.

Brucellosis is an infectious disease characterized by an acute feverish stage and later by a chronic stage marked by relapses of fever, weakness, sweats and vague aches and pains. It is also known as undulant fever.

Although slaughterhouses have long been considered a prime focus of infection, the government's latest figures show that less than half of the affected workers were in the meat processing industry.

Even so, contact with infected swine is still the greatest source of infection. But 65 cases were attributed to infection from cattle, 21 to eating unpasteurized dairy products, and four cases were attributed to contact with pet dogs. One case in Arkansas occurred in a hunter who had killed and cleaned a deer.

Details appear in Infectious Diseases, a medical newspaper.

Pollution is culprit

The increased death rate among women because of lung cancer is not due to cigarette smoking but rather to air pollution, says a doctor.

Dr. Geoffrey Myddelton of Vaud, Switzerland, says the "obvious" answer to the increase in lung cancer is air pollution by cancer-causing particles.

"The most likely cause of this is the internal combustion engine, especially the diesel," he says.

"Enthusiasm for the cigarette theory should not be allowed to hold back the thorough investigation of every possible factor."

The doctor adds:

"Whatever the truth may be on the causes of male lung cancer, it is clear that four out of five cases among women have nothing to do with cigarettes, and the steady rise in the disease must have some other cause."

He notes that in one study of 2,002 female cases of lung cancer, about 83 per cent were not associated with smoking.

Risk to babies

The use of even the most carefully monitored oxygen treatment to prevent brain damage to premature babies still carries a risk of causing blindness.

This is the finding of a team of specialists who make their report in a special supplement of Pediatrics, the monthly journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The complication that can follow oxygen use is known as retrolental fibroplasia. This is scarring of the eye's retina resulting from changes in the blood vessels of the retina, causing permanent blindness in some cases.

Even though studies 20 years ago linked oxygen with the disorder, "the problem of oxygen therapy for premature infants is far from being solved," the specialists report. "There appears to be no concentration of oxygen in excess of that in air that is not associated with the risk of developing retrolental fibroplasia."

As to whether oxygen therapy should be used, the physician must use his best judgment, the doctors say. Definite conclusions await further research.

Shaker artifacts are selling well

Q. "Please discuss American Redware pottery." — Mrs. G. L., Shamokin, Pa.

A. Devotees of American country pottery favor redware objects with their warm earth tones. The early handcrafted pieces, treated to various glazes which intensified their color and made the objects nonpourous, are prized.

The race is on for redware, particularly the slip decorated or sgraffito wares. The latter examples possess scratched or incised line motifs. The decorated redware pieces proved popular as presentation pieces. Tip: Buyer beware as numerous reproductions abound. Redware value guide: creamer, brown glaze, $80; pie plate, slip decor, yellow lines, 8-inches diameter, $95.

Q. "Any assistance you can give me in appraising my collection of Madame Alexander dolls would be appreciated." — Laverne, Thomasville, Ga.

A. These delightful dolls can be converted into dollars faster than you can say Madame Alexander. Value guide: Alice in Wonderland, composition, 14-inches tall, $37; Greek boy, 8 inches tall, $32; Margaret O'Brien, 14½-inches tall, $85; Nina, the ballerina, 1940s, $30; Princess Elizabeth, coronation, 14-inches tall, $50; Scarlett O'Hara, composition, 14-inches tall, $85; Sonja Henie, composition, 19-inches tall, $75; Snow White, 13-inches tall, $65.

Q. "Have Shaker artifacts continued to command collector attention?" — Mrs. E. F., Chattanooga, Tenn.

A. Mother Ann Lee arrived in the United States during the 1770s with a small group of dedicated followers and a century later the Shaker movement boasted approximately 8,000 members. The articles made by them in their 18 self-supporting communities are coveted, thus Shaker collectibles are solid investments. Shaker value guide: horsehair sieve, 10-inches diameter, $45; original Shaker music, 1892, $38; sewing basket, small, $85; seed bag, $20; Shaker rocker, $345; spinning wheel, $325; yarn swift, $50.

Q. "Advertising items relating to the beer industry certainly bring in substantial returns based on my shopping experience." — Bill, North Platte, Neb.

A. The Breweriana items on tap at local flea markets bring mouth-watering prices. Although close to 2,000 breweries were active in the late 1800s, this number has decreased to less than 200 currently. Consequently, antiquers have acquired a thirst for the various advertising items distributed by American breweries. Everything from a beer glass to a watch fob is considered a fortunate find in this category. Breweriana value guide: Budweiser, "Say When" tray, circa 1914, $110; mug, stoneware, "Rochester Brewing Co.", $65; paperweight, "Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer", $17.50.

Favorites sing and dance

silents and working their way up to Francis, the Talking Mule.

The program notes passed out by United Artists piously announce that "while designed as family entertainment because it's clean as a hound's tooth, it should also appeal to the college crowd." They then proceed to show Charlie Chaplin tucking a dog into his pants to sneak him into a bar. The dog's tail protrudes through a hole in his pants. Ha, ha. And vulgar, too.

Nobody can deny the movie's rather blatant attempts to cash in on the success formula of the two "That's Entertainment!" movies, because "It's Showtime!" even opens with a stage full of dogs carrying umbrellas and performing "Singin' in the Rain."

Eleanor Powell does a tap dance with a horse. Gene Kelly sings a song with a puppy named Fido. Other sections are devoted to cats, cows, monkeys, dolphins, Rin Tin Tin, lions, mules and other unfortunates — many of them involved in horrifying death scenes filmed in the days before the Humane Society was formed to protect them from such cruelties. Horses plunged to watery graves; cats are clawed to death. It's enough to frighten the children it's intended to entertain into hysterical outbursts of terror and emotional empathy.

The film isn't even well-assembled. You don't follow "Lassie Come Home" with old clips from Rin Tin Tin two-reelers unless you know nothing about dramatic impact. It's fun to watch Elizabeth Taylor win the Grand National in the immortal "National Velvet," but it would be more beneficial to all ages just to show the original film again without the butchery.

Most of the animals in this film are depicted smoking, getting drunk, killing each other and lusting after each other like performers in a porno movie. One dog even takes the law into his own hands, avenging himself for society by spraying a cop with a garden hose in his mouth.

While it reminds us how closely our ideas of comedy were (and still are) related to cruelty and violence, I still am not much amused by the thought of giving the sins and flaws of submental humans to poor, unsuspecting animals.

Since nobody of sound mind should expect an animal to be human, it's degrading to the animals and insulting to people to show them dolled up in clothes doing all the evil things to people that humans do to each other, just for the sake of a laugh.

THE WORST SECTION of the film is devoted to cats. Since I guess cats are too independent and strong-willed to train, most of the feline performers are shown eating other animals, preying on rodents, and clawing each other and various people to a bloody pulp. Nothing very entertaining about Rhubarb terrorizing an entire room by hissing and snarling at everyone from a chandelier while the humans try to knock him off with broomsticks. And I was not titillated by the endless scenes of lions being beaten, thwarted and thrown down flights of stairs.

The funniest thing in it is purely accidental. Ronald Reagan, bottling a baby chimp named Bonzo, says with a brave attempt to impersonate a living actor going through a real emotion: "I wonder if I could teach this monkey the difference between right and wrong." It's the people, not the animals, who make fools of themselves here, and the animals, not the people, who seem to know the difference.

ira corn

on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: Is bridge played behind the Iron Curtain?

Traveling Same,
New Orleans

Answer: In Russia it is considered a waste of time and the government frowns on it. It is played in several other communist countries. Poland, for example, entered a competent team in the 1972 World Team Olympiad.

Recently, past ACBL president Lew Mathe and his wife played in Hungary where most play the "Polish Club," a highly artificial system, with variations. Eugenie Mathe reports in her L.O.L. column "Only one individual was in any way unpleasant. He did not want to waste time to explain his bidding or convention card, but when I opened one heart, he started to read our whole convention card.

'Let's not waste time,' I said sweetly. He apparently couldn't believe I was showing an opening bid with a heart suit."

Dear Mr. Corn: My husband held 10 solid hearts and three diamonds to the king. They bid and made a small slam, but we had disagreement about the correct opening bid. What would you recommend?

Slow or Fast
Richardson, Texas

Answer: If I were assured the opponents would not interfere, I would open a game demand to try to find out about a diamond fit and a possible grand slam. In practice, I would give up on science and open six hearts.

Hopefully this will shut everyone out and maybe I'll make it with the right cards in dummy or the wrong opening lead or possibly by making an inspired play. I am always optimistic about such things (not as often justified).

Dear Mr. Corn: I dealt and passed this hand:

♠ — ♥ 10 8 7 5 4 2 ♦ A Q J 7 5 ♣ A 10

What should I have bid after partner opened one heart?

Nice Support,
Ft. Worth

Answer: I would have opened that hand and instead of me wondering what to bid over one heart, my partner would have had that problem. Based on Aces' Count, you have 17 points.

Given the pass, your next bid depends upon system agreement. If a jump shift is played as forcing (standard treatment), I would jump to three diamonds hoping to find out if a grand slam were possible. If the bidding might be dropped anywhere along the line, I would jump directly to six hearts and consider it a good bet.

Dear Mr. Corn: How should we have bid this hand to the right slam?

West	East
♠ A K 10 7 2	♠ Q 9
♥ A Q 9 2	♥ K 8
♦ A K J 5	♦ 9 7 4 2
♣ —	♣ A Q J 9 8

New Horizons,
Chicago

Answer: On balance, the best slam is six diamonds. This needs only a 3-2 trump break for success. I would bid:

West	East
2♠	3♠
3♥	3♦
4♦	6♦
Pass

Dear Mr. Corn: What is a free double?

Charge Card,
San Francisco

Answer: A double of a contract which represents game if undoubled (e.g. Opponents compete up to three spades with 60 on score). The only thing free about the double is that they're not doubled into game since they're already there. If they make the contract, it can be expensive.

JIM MURRAY

All the champagne you wish at brunch

NO WONDER Jim Murray of Long Beach is considered such an imaginative young restaurateur. Here's a partial list of the delectable entrees and colorful cocktails at his El Paso Cantina restaurant, 2404 Sepulveda Blvd., Torrance, a block east of Crenshaw Boulevard:

Crab enchiladas rancheras with sour cream...carne asada steak with a superlative Mexican sauce...pescado (whitefish) Vera Cruz with a shrimp sauce...18 different combination Mexican dinners...Sunday champagne brunch...beautiful Margarita cocktails by the glass or pitcher...chili Colorado...Manuel's special burrito with meat, beans, spices, cheese and guacamole...Poor Pedro's ground sirloin stuffed with ortegas and cheese...the Rosa Delgada (Skinny Rosy), ground sirloin steak for dieters...and such fascinating cocktails as the Pina Colada, Sonora Sling, Sombrero, Tequila Sunrise, Coco Loco and Tequila Maria as well as sangria (wine with fruit juices.)

El Paso Cantina is a comparatively new Mexican restaurant, but it tries to look old with a nostalgia decor reminiscent of cantinas of the early 1900s. It attracts many patrons from Long Beach because they know it serves superb Mexican specialities at reasonable prices and has excellent service by pretty waitresses. The new menus, in the form of newspapers, offer a big variety of 18 combinations, $2.60 to $3.85. There are also elaborate gourmet entrees called "especialidades."

The Sunday champagne brunch, 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., is unusual because the guests are invited to have all the champagne they wish at no extra charge. The entrees, $2.50 to $3.95, range from fancy Mexican-style scrambled eggs to fine omelettes, fiesta cakes and huevos rancheros (ranch eggs fried in butter topped with sauce.)

One of the new dinner entrees is the whitefish Vera Cruz-style, $5.50, with a fine sauce made with shrimp, fresh mushrooms and capers. It comes with soup or salad, Spanish rice and tortillas. Other "especialidades" include the carne asada steak, $5.95, the finest corn-fed eastern beef, and the crab enchiladas rancheras, $4.40. Each comes with a different kind of mild sauce and other items.

Construction has started for a second El Pasa Cantina in Long Beach's new Marina Pacifica development on the west side of Pacific Coast Highway a few blocks north of East Second Street. It will have boat access from Los Cerritos Channel. Jim, who has lived in Long Beach 20 years, has planned the new restaurant on a big scale, with 16,000 square feet of floor space. It will have many dining and banquet rooms and six cantinas (cocktail lounges.)

THERE ONCE lived a man named Andy Gassaway Sr. He was Long Beach's most famous maker of hotcakes. His recipe for buttermilk hotcakes was so wonderful that people drove here from nearby cities just for those hotcakes, topped with melting butter and lots of fresh syrup.

Andy is gone and so is his restaurant, called Andy's Hotcake House. But those wonderful buttermilk hotcakes live on. They're one of the attractions at Andy's Restaurant, Pacific Avenue at Anaheim Street. It's a cafeteria which was opened by Andy over 15 years ago. It's now owned and operated by his son, Andy Jr.

You won't be able to enjoy any of those hotcakes today at Andy's Restaurant, because it's closed Saturdays and Sundays. But those hotcakes are served every morning, Monday through Friday. They're still made exactly the same way as they were back in the 1940s and 1950s, using Andy Sr.'s old-fashioned recipe. Those hotcakes not only look good and taste good — but they also have that heavenly buttermilk aroma. Three hotcakes are 75 cents. Or you may have two of them on the special breakfast, $1.30, which includes an egg, two strips of fine bacon and delicious, fresh coffee.

Open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Andy's Restaurant is a house of unusual cafeteria quality, because everything is prepared from the recipes of the original Andy. Andy Jr.'s wife Camilla, young and industrious, does the baking, turning out the biggest cloverleaf rolls in town. Included with the luncheons and dinners, those rolls are as fresh and wonderful in their way as Andy's hotcakes. Camilla also bakes muffins, cakes, breads and rich, thick cream or fruit pies of the best quality.

Taught by his father to serve only the best, Andy Jr. buys only the most costly items for his meals, such as corn-fed beef, Alaska halibut and the tenderest turkeys. The dinners range from delectable, fresh meatloaf, $2.80, to baked, sugar-cured ham, $2.95; tender, juicy roast beef, $3.20; corned beef, $3.10; loin roast pork, $3.25; roast turkey, $3.25, and Swiss steak with gravy, $2.90. The accompaniments include soup and salad, potatoes or another vegetable, hot roll, coffee, tea or buttermilk. If you wish you can have soup or salad and two hot vegetables.

Andy's features two kinds of luncheons — large or medium. The large luncheon is for those who like their big meal in the middle of the day, such as roast beef, $2.75; roast turkey, $2.80, or corned beef, $2.65. They come with salad, vegetable, roll or muffin. The medium-sized luncheons change daily, such as chicken enchilada, $1.85, on Wednesdays, or chicken livers, $1.85, on Thursdays. They come with salad, vegetable, roll or muffin.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Coq au vin pure poetry

Today's chef of the week, Alan W. Johnson, is associate director the International Center, Long Beach State University, and has served as foreign student adviser since 1968.

Born in Coronado, Johnson grew up in San Diego. He earned his A.B. Degree in political science from USC; M.Ed. Degree in education administration, University of Cincinnati; degree in guidance and counseling, Teachers College, Columbia University.

mildred flanary

He returned to USC in 1954 for his Ed.D. degree in higher education.

Between degrees, Johnson's life has been full of varied experiences. In 1937, following graduation from USC, he served for two years as field secretary, Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, Washington, D.C., traveling throughout the United States. In 1942, he was appointed personnel supervisor and wage administration supervisor for Republic Aviation Corp. Farmingdale, Long Island, N. Y. Three years later, he joined the Solar Aircraft Co. in San Diego, where he served as personnel manager.

JOHNSON'S FIRST teaching experience was at New York University, where he was instructor in wage and salary administration. During the summer he returned to USC as instructor in personnel administration.

San Diego State College next claimed him as part-time instructor in psychology; then UCLA, as graduate assistant in the office of the dean of students.

The years 1950 to 1961 found him at San Francisco State College, in the position of associate dean of students. Johnson next journeyed to the University of Houston, where he served as dean of students, before returning to USC in 1965. He served as director of the Foreign Student Office for three years, before coming to LBSU and a similiar position.

JOHNSON IS ACTIVE in the National Association of Foreign Student Affairs, and is a member of Phi Delta Kappa education honorary. A member of the Kiwanis Club of Long Beach, he formerly was active in the San Francisco and Houston Kiwanis Clubs.

Married to the former Geraldine McGraw, there are three daughters and two sons in the family. They enjoy sailing, and belong to the Alamitos Bay Yacht Club. He is owner of a citrus ranch in Tulare County.

ALAN W. JOHNSON, ED.D

Johnson also has a talent for writing — both poetry and prose. In fact, several of his books have been published. He says, "I do my best writing in the middle of the night — that's when the ideas pop into my head."

Geraldine says, "He has so many irons in the fire that he is sometimes absent minded. But he is one of the most considerate persons I've ever known." She likes his cooking, too ... especially his Coq au Vin. Here's how he does it.

CHEF'S COQ AU VIN

1 good size chicken fryer cut-up
2 tablespoons butter
Salad herbs: a bit of oregano or celery seed, or any other tasty seasoning
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup white wine, dry or sweet, according to taste
2 tablespoons flour

Use a metal container (I use the bottom of a broiler pan). On top of the stove, melt the butter in it. Roll the cut-up pieces of the fryer in butter; then season on both sides with herbs. Bake for 45 minutes at 325-350 degrees, turning once. Take chicken from oven and set aside on plate which can be placed in oven to keep warm. Put the broiler pan on stove top over low heat. Add a bit of wine to drippings and stir. Add flour, stirring with a whisk to avoid lumping, and add remainder of wine, as in making white sauce. When done, return the baked chicken pieces to the sauce, coat and serve.

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Computing commute

DEAR MR. SMITH: After four years of semi-unemployment, I acquired a position in the Los Angeles area, 110 miles from my Santa Barbara address. Construction engineering can be unstable and at 61 years of age it would be too risky to have my wife quit her position and relocate in this area. We would be burning our bridges.

To maintain an additional residence costs $5,400 a year for rent, utilities outside meals, plus 9,000 miles to go home on weekends. In order to be gainfully employed I can accept this expense, but if I have to pay $1,500 federal tax on this added expense, I feel I am being penalized. It certainly kills incentive for wanting to work. What can I do? — N. McG.

jacob smith

All of your car mileage and other job-hunting expenses are fully deductible. I believe you will also be allowed your present mileage if your position can be shown to be temporary employment, rather than permanent or for an indefinite term.

Although you and your wife will suffer from the duplication of expenses, if you move to Los Angeles while she remains in Santa Barbara, the IRS and the courts are not sympathetic. They have each ruled that you must separately meet the requirements for deducting living expenses while away from home on business.

It would seem inadvisable to burden yourself with large amounts of additional expense, unless you are willing to accept the possibility of disallowances if IRS should choose your return for audit. However, if you decide to move to Los Angeles, you may have a deduction for moving expenses.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My wife and I are both past 65 years of age and our income consists mainly of social security. Our gross taxable income has been well under the $4,900 stated in the enclosed newspaper clipping.

How do I go about getting our names removed from the federal and state mailing list? Tax forms continue to arrive each year as they have for many years and even though we owe no tax, I do not feel that these forms should be ignored. — D.F.W.

Here are some options: 1) keep filing as before. Some taxpayers do this because they feel better if they preserve the continuity; 2) let the blanks come, but file only when required; or 3) send back the blanks with the notation: "not required to file."

Tax laws change constantly and a radical tax reform program is always a possibility. There may be some comfort in staying on the list if only to see what Washington has been up to lately.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Two years ago, after hip replacement surgery, my orthopedist recommended that I exercise by swimming daily. I found it impractical from a time standpoint to swim at a club, so this year, after getting a letter from the orthopedist so suggesting, I had a backyard pool installed. My question relates, of course, to writing off a portion of the pool's cost of about $13,000. What would be a reasonable formula and where in the return should it be? — S.H.B.

Any deduction of this type is listed with your other medical expenses on Form 1040. First determine how much your residence increased in value solely by reason of installing the pool. If, for example, the increase in value was $7,000, you subtract the $7,000 from the $13,000 spent. The balance of $6,000 is your medical deduction. You can also deduct for pool utilities, supplies, water and maintenance. Here again, you must reduce the total spent by the amount which is the percentage of use by other people. Obtain free IRS booklet 502.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I own 700 shares of common stock which I bought in 1937 at $48 per share. There was a split of two for one later on. I had to report all dividends and pay tax. If I sold these shares at the current market ($65) how would I report this sale for federal income tax purposes? — E.A.H.

The 700 shares at $48 cost you $3,360. Assuming that the split was non-taxable, you now own 1,400 shares at a cost of $24 per share. If sold for $65, you have a long-term gain of $41 per share to be reported on Schedule D. You may add to the $24 cost per share, any related broker's commissions and other expenses relating to the purchase, exchange and sale.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I earned $500 on some South Central Bell Telephone Company debentures I purchased last year. My Form 1099-Div for 1975 shows this income as 1) gross dividend and other distributions on stock $500 and 2) dividends qualifying for exclusion. I was surprised as I expected this income to be shown as interest. Although I used to handle my late employer's investments this was my first venture for myself. I mentioned it to our company auditor and he said it was a mistake and that I should report the income as interest. What do you advise? — G.P.

Most likely it is interest — but why not write to the company and ask if they didn't make a mistake? If it is interest, don't forget to deduct any purchased interest from the collection in reporting the taxable income. Also, if purchased at a premium, you may elect to amortize the premium.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P. O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed stamped envelope. Your identity will not be disclosed.

Plants do better in an air-conditioned room. Don't you?

Dear Mother Earth:

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR MOTHER EARTH:

For Mother's Day, my mother received a Shamrock plant in a four-inch pot purchased from a florist shop. They said to give the plant a spray of mist each day, but isn't there more that should be done? When should we repot it? Does it grow indoors, outdoors, shade or in the sun? The plant is growing tall. Do we pinch it back? It's amazing, but I can't find anything about the care of the Shamrock plant in any of our books. Thank you. — M.L.

DEAR M.L.:

And all the rest of you who received Shamrock plants back on St. Patrick's Day. From our own experience, when we owned our retail plant store, we always got a large shipment of Shamrocks in four-inch pots about three or four days before March 17.

No matter how hard we tried to convince people that these beautiful plants had been grown in greenhouses, especially for the occasion, and shouldn't be looked upon as anything more than cut flowers in terms of longevity indoors, their absolutely irresistible clover-shaped magenta and green leaves make the Shamrock something "you simply have to have."

The best you can hope for is to keep your Shamrock in a cool, light spot. DO mist it frequently, keep it damp, and don't bother pinching back the growth that goes upright because that's the way it's always going to go. Best place for the Shamrock is outside, planted in the ground in the shade. And that's no blarney. Happy growing!

(If you have any questions to ask Dear Mother Earth, send them in care of the Independent Press Telegram. As many as possible will be used in this column.)

THE FORMULA

Breathe new life into leather

Making leather is an ancient art that the Egyptians practiced thousands of years ago, using oak bark in the tanning process. In Europe guilds of leather makers were formed, which are believed to be the forerunners of labor unions.

Leather is a porous material that breathes. This fact sets it apart from synthetics that generally do not. But if the pores of leather are permitted to become clogged with foreign materials such as dirt, the ability to breathe and be flexible is impaired. This formula will do a good job of keeping your leather objects clean and flexible.

All you will need is: three fourths cup ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL (from your drugstore), one-half cup WHITE DISTILLED VINEGAR and one and one-half cups WATER. Mix these three ingredients together and stir. Store in glass or plastic container. To use, dampen cloth or sponge with mixture and rub into leather until clean. Note: Isopropyl Alcohol is flammable. Do not use near open flame.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

(There has never been a how-to book so practical and helpful as THE FORMULA BOOK. Hundreds of easy recipes put savings and fun into the making of your own personal and home care items. Over 200 pages of recipes, diagrams and instructions on ingredients and equipment, in a large paperback format, $5.95. Send to The Formula Book, Independent Press Telegram, P.O. Box 2218, Shawnee Mission, Kan. 66201.)

DEAR ABBY

Fine end to skiing weekend

DEAR ABBY: My friend (I'll call her "Marge") and I drove up to a skiing resort for a vacation and agreed to share expenses. We used her car.

While Marge was driving we were stopped and given a ticket for speeding. She paid the fine.

After the trip, Marge was noticeably cool toward me. I later learned from a mutual friend that Marge's nose was slightly out of joint because we had agreed to share expenses and I didn't offer to pay half the fine.

Do you think a speeding ticket is a legitimate expense? — KAY

DEAR KAY: No, it's an ILLEGITIMATE expense. But Marge violated the law herself and shouldn't have expected you to pay half the fine.

DEAR ABBY: How does a girl say no to a guy she's been saying yes to for two years? — CLAUDIA

DEAR CLAUDIA: The same way she says no to anybody else. Only louder!

DEAR ABBY: I am the woman who wrote to say that I was expecting my fourth child and my husband had been pestering me for a girl because we already had three boys. (He sent me a Valentine with the message "THINK PINK" and even kiddingly threatened to "divorce" me if I didn't have a girl this time.)

Well, I had another boy! I was in labor for 10 hours and for some reason this was the hardest delivery I've ever had, but thank God, the baby is perfect.

abigail van buren

As soon as I opened my eyes, my husband said, "You're just NEVER going to have a girl, are you?

He doesn't know it yet, but I'm never going to have another boy, either! — FINISHED

DEAR FINISHED: I am not suggesting that you initiate an argument with your husband, but you really ought to advise him that the MALE determines the sex of the child, so if he's disappointed, he should blame himself — and not you!

DEAR ABBY: I just read an article in the newspaper about the rudeness of smokers, and I had to share it with you because you are always sticking up for the rights of nonsmokers:

A Flint, Mich., school teacher who was at a restaurant recently had to endure smoke that was drifting from an adjoining booth throughout his meal.

Upon finishing, he walked over to the smoker, dropped some gnawed chicken bones on her plate and said, 'Ma'am, you've been giving me YOUR garbage for quite a while, so I thought maybe you might like some of mine.'"

Abby, I'm glad that nonsmokers have finally refused to put up with the pollution of smokers. — SIXTEEN AND STILL CLEAN

DEAR SIXTEEN: Good for you. Stay that way!

Stop the rat race, I want to get off at Sark

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

SARK, Channel Islands —— "Stop the world, I want to get off."

Everybody knows the feeling, but not everybody knows where to indulge it.

How about a feudal fiefdom where no cars or ulcers are allowed. Where the climate is relatively balmy. Where you can walk from one end to the other in a morning. Where charm drips from every hedgerow and cozy cottage. Where the food is rich as cream and has a French accent. And where the gorse, bluebells, primroses and bracken take turns painting the hillsides yellow in April, blue in May, pink in June and russet in the fall.

Fantasy tripping? Not at all. This little piece of Paradise is called Sark, and it sits in the English Channel with its larger and smaller sister islands, its remoteness and diminutive size having precluded its leap into the 20th century.

Horsedrawn carriage is the means of transportation if one chooses not to go by foot or bicycle. The island's stalwart equines, which resemble Clydesdales, clop, clop down tiny lanes which have never been violated by the automobile.

Among the nice things about Sark is that it comes in two — Big Sark and Little Sark which are connected by a dramatic carriage road rising 300 feet above the sea. Far below a deserted cove and blue water beckon and a winding cliff path provides a way if you decide to accept the invitation.

SECLUDED cove on Channel Island of Sark is typical of quiet lifestyle sans cars and planes and other distractions.

travel

SINCE THE entire island is a mere 3½ by 1½ miles, it's not difficult to imagine the petiteness of Little Sark which, nonetheless, has its own village and hostelry.

Sark is an immoveable feast for nature lovers. In adddition to island flora, there are rock pools in wild settings, magnificent cliffs for bold climbers and a series of unusual caves, most of them accessible.

The island ruler — and of course it has one — is a former London engineer who inherited Sark from his grandmother, the legendary Dame of Sark, who died a year and a half ago.

Now Le Seigneur (the overlord), as he is called, and his down-to-earth spouse have moved into Le Seigneurie, a small but magnificent manor house surrounded by impressive gardens. Le Seigneurie is open to the public several days a week.

Why the French titles? A logical reason. All the Channel Islands were French before the Norman Conquest united them with England, and the French have tried a number of times since to reclaim them.

Le Seigneur rules through a legislative body, the Court of Chief Pleas, which is composed of 40 landowners, 12 people's deputies and an executive body of island officials. There is one member of the Chief Pleas for every 10 inhabitants so, although feudal, Sark does have democratic overtones.

THE GOVERNENT was formed in 1563 when Queen Elizabeth I appointed Helier de Carteret of Jersey as its first Seigneur. De Carterets still populate the island, several of them operating hotels and boarding homes today.

Sark has a court conducted by the seneschal or judge, a prevot or sheriff and a greffier or clerk.

Th court can send felons to the island's prison — a quaint stone building — for up to three days!

Sark has a sprinkling of small hotels and bed and board places plus farmhouses that take in guests. But since the entire island can accommodate only 250 visitors at a time, reservations are a must. July and August are the busy months; the spring and fall are the ideal times to visit.

In addition to banning cars, Sark also has the No Welcome Mat out for airplanes, and access is only by boat. A motor launch runs back and forth from St. Peter Port, the capital of nearby Guernsey, several times each morning and afternoon, the trip taking an hour. Guernsey is easy to reach by air or boat-rail from Great Britain and people coming from France can reach Sark by sea from St. Malo and other channel ports or by air via Guernsey.

A TRACTOR-DRAWN wagon, seating a couple dozen people, will meet your boat and take you on the first lap from the harbor.

There are several bicycle rental places, a number of small shops specializing in woolens and jewelry, but no one has been so crass as to have built a shopping center.

Prices are lower than in inflation-plagued Great Britain, on a par with the other Channel Islands, and the food, leaning heavily on shellfish and fish, is an added enticement.

There are pubs set discreetly along the lanes. And the private homes look like storybook creations.

Even the dogs, all male since only Le Seigneur can own a bitch, have an insouciant spirit all their own, running free, as they do, of all restraint. Some of them have formed emotional attachments to certain horses, following them all day as they make their rounds, and loping along under the carriages as concerned passengers cluck-cluck for their safety.

Another special quality about Sark is its quiet. If the world is too much with you, this silence is nice.

With only an occasional farm tractor to mar the tranquil sounds of the horses (the dogs seem to have forgotten how to bark), you do indeed think the world has stopped.

Only in Sark you don't want to get off.

AMTRAK trip to Las Vegas

Eleven of the leading hotels in Las Vegas are participating in the package deal offered by AMTRAK's new "Las Vegas Limited" weekend trips from Los Angeles Union Depot, starting Friday.

The hotels include the El Morocco, Flamingo, Fremont, Hacienda, Landmark, Mint, California, Nevada, Stardust, Thunderbird and Union Plaza.

The weekend package, which includes round-trip rail fare and a room on a double occupancy basis for two nights and three days, has been developed at a special price of $89.95 per person, plus tax, and includes free champagne parties and free box lunches both ways on the train.

Another highlight of the package is a special fun book that includes coupons for $50 in cash plus free food and beverage, souvenirs and other surprises from the participating hotels and casinos.

An extra added attraction, the first weekend only, is a free ticket to the world-famous annual Elks Helldorado Rodeo.

Additional information and reservations may be obtained from the Los Angeles office of Iron Horse Inc., tour operators for AMTRAK's "Las Vegas Limited."

Exploring treasures of Taiwan

choral pepper

travel

A worldly friend of mine once described Taipei as "the yeastiest city in the Orient — a place where you can buy anything from a mistress to a murder."

Before that, I had had little interest in going there. Taiwan represented no cultural heritage in my mind. It was names like Peking, Shanghai and Canton that carried the mystery of the Orient for me.

But "yeasty"? That was the word that did it. Suddenly I could hardly wait to go.

At last I was in Hong Kong boarding a Cathay Pacific plane that would conveniently connect in Taipei with my Northwest-Orient flight from Hong Kong to California via Tokyo. We had barely landed in Taiwan before I realized that this intriguing country today embodies more of the ways of ancient China than any other place on earth.

Women worked rice paddies right alongside the landing strip, their huge straw hats repeating the upward tilt of pagoda rooftops in the background. As we drew closer to the city, flags of the inevitable laundry waving from bamboo poles overhung shop signs scribed in vivid calligraphy.

MY MOST overwhelming impression, though, was of the majestic Grand Hotel rising above the city from its hilltop perch.

Looking like a red and gold pagoda palace, this splendid hotel is architecturally unique in the world. Its lobby is a veritable museum. Spectacular Chinese rugs, ornately carved woodpaneling and elaborate handmade furniture reflect the most exalted dynasties of ancient China.

A shopping arcade on the lower level is similarly representative of the best in Taiwan with window displays of Chinese opera masks, jewelry, jade objects, ceramics and mandarin jackets. I was unable to stay here because the hotel was filled, but a new wing is almost completed, which will provide more rooms in the future.

After spending two days in Taiwan, the "yeasty" part still eluded me, but I was more than compensated by its cultural aspect.

The National Palace Museum is the place to begin. Articles carried in most of the shops are replicas of museum treasures, so it is good to see the originals and learn of their ancient uses before shopping.

THE MUSEUM is a copy of one in Peking, the Forbidden City. Its treasures date from the oldest time.

During the Sino-Japanese conflict in 1937, China's treasures were stored on Taiwan for safekeeping. When that war was followed by the Communist takeover the treasures remained with the new Republic of China and the museum was built to house them.

You will see the originals of the chic, three-legged ice buckets so popular with American shoppers that are copied from shang dynasty ritual vessels.

Later, when you visit the shops of Taipei, you will appreciate more the marble incense burners copied from ancient porcelain ones, the Han dynasty pi pendants in jade worn today as jewelry, Ming dynasty carved lacquer plates and bowls reproduced today by artisans still using age-old methods and the hand-painted china executed in today's factories by descendents of the artists who created it for Emperors.

Displays of carved ivory in the museum are incredible in detail. One multi-storied pagoda supports tiny bells at each corner of its upturned tiers. It required three generations of carvers to complete the piece.

THE JADE rooms are most impressive to Americans. Among the valuable pieces is the famous Chinese cabbage carved from a hunk of white and green jadeite with tinges of red.

The artist spent 18 years transforming the natural contours of the hard stone into the vegetable, all the time perplexed about what form to give two protruding knobs from one side. Finally he ceased work to meditate on the problem for three years.

When inspiration finally came, it was in the form of two grasshoppers that appear to have alighted upon the lovely sculpture.

Lest you think that Taipei is all art and culture, don't fail to attend a Mongolian barbecue. It won't be what you thought — no beef on a spit — but you will experience a distinctive Taiwanian dinner that is absolutely superb.

From TWA:
Charter flights that don't forget you're a paying customer.

Some charter flights act like they're doing you a favor just letting you on board. After all, you're paying less so expect less.

At TWA, we don't buy that. A TWA passenger is a TWA passenger, scheduled or charter. And to our crews, there's no difference.

We'll do everything we can to make your charter flight as enjoyable as possible. And here's why you can count on it.

50 years' experience under our wings.

We've been in the airline business for over 50 years now.

So when you take a TWA charter flight, you'll be flying on an airline that helped make flying what it is today.

You'll get the same dependable crews that fly our scheduled flights.

The same good cooks cook the food. (Delicious!)

You'll enjoy beverages and perhaps take in a movie, for the usual standard charge.

And if you find it hard to believe you're on a charter flight, just pinch your wallet.

TWA facilities at your beck and call.

Your plane will arrive and depart at the same convenient terminals as all TWA flights.

And don't forget. TWA is the only U.S. scheduled airline with a major network of offices and airport facilities both here and abroad.

And they don't disappear if there's any hitch in your plans.

Great prices to great places.

All these prices save you money. But they contain certain restrictions such as length of stay, advance payments, where you stay (if hotel is included) and when you go. All prices are subject to change. Call your Travel Agent for all the details.

New York	As low as $169* Round-trip
Paris	As low as $399* Round-trip
London	As low as $399* Round-trip

How it works.

You can sign up for a TWA charter by yourself. With another person or with a group of friends. It's up to you.

On Trans World Charters, TWA provides the plane and crew to a Charter Organizer, who then takes care of all the details.

Even though TWA cannot make your reservations, because of government regulations, we'll be happy to give you charter information. So just call us. Or you can call your Travel Agent.

Reservations will be made through your Travel Agent or a Charter Organizer. (And they're the ones who can tell you about pricing and cut-off dates for booking.)

After that, just count your savings. And pack.

Trans World Charters. They're what charter flights should have been all along.

We give charters a good name.

TWA

*TGC airfares are based on full flight. If all seats not sold, price will increase 1% to 20% (New York $202.80; Paris $478.80; London $478.80). If price increases more than 20%, flight could be cancelled at least 45 days ahead and full refund made from Escrow account. Departure taxes to/from London and Paris not included.

BRITISH CANAL LOCKS PROVIDE BOATING DIVERSION

Tea at four is British, bargaining everywhere

London

Most expensive gift in London: A quartz Piaget watch at Asprey, 165 Bond St.

A Piaget is in the upper brackets anyway. This one is in white gold with 22,000 diamonds!

Costs Pounds 19,298! Pound is $1.83 U.S. today, so why not just multiply by two? If you've got that kind of money, you don't have to worry about the odd change.

The Tea Experience begins every afternoon at 4.

We are having tea at the Ritz with a tourist board friend: Peter ffrench-Hodges (Any printer who caps those "f's" or in any way changes that name, I'll have him flogged through the Fleet.)

TEA IS SERVED by gloved waiters handing silver pots on silver trays onto starched white linens. YOU don't pour. The WAITER doesn't pour. By tradition the lady pours: "Milk? One lump or two?"

The brown bread is so thin you can read a newspaper through it. The cucumbers are sliced by Wilkinson sword razors. There is no better watercress in the world than English river cress.

Keep your voice down. Don't talk politics. "One may complain about the scarcity of domestic help or the bad growing season for prize gooseberries."

So we pass the Tea Experience while the English rain blows down the streets of London.

"We want to learn all we can about the inland waterways of Europe and how to take a boat on them?"

Top man on this is Roger Pilkington and his book

stan delaplane

is "Waterways in Europe." I used his "Small Boat on the Thames" while running a rented 29-foot cruiser on that river.

Pilkington gives not so much boatsmanship as what's going on around you. (Not much to learn about a river boat anyway. You can't get lost unless you start making U-turns.

The book is $8.95 plus $1 postage from Traveler's Library, 20 N. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60606.

"Our guide couldn't tell us about the letters 'S P Q R' we saw on buildings in Rome. Even on manhole covers . . . "

"Senatus Populusque Romanum." It's also on the flag of the City of Rome. Dates back to the time when Rome ruled the world.

The democratic sentiment: "The Senate and the People are Rome." (Also old-time joke: "Sono porci questi Romani." "What pigs these Romans are." Maybe you should wait until you cross the Swiss border to use that one.)

"There's a town famous for hand-made knives in Mexico . . . "

Oaxaca. Etched on one side — usually with a hunting scene. Some sentimental saying on the other.

Mexican generals used to have their dress swords made in Oaxaca. Pancho Villa's sword was made there. Oaxaca knives are sold in market places all over the Republic.

"Books on travel constantly talk about 'bargaining.' The thing is they never say HOW to bargain . . . "

All travel writers tell you to bargain — I do it myself. And I have only a foggy notion how to go about it. My idea is whatever the man asks, offer half.

A lot of times I offer half and he TAKES it. Gratefully. So I know I've been had.

Department stores won't bargain. They're not set up for it. What does the sales girl care if you don't buy?

Small tourist shops overseas (yes, and in the U.S. too) have flexible prices. They've marked things up enough to come down and make you feel good.

EVERYTHING'S bargaining in the Far East. Except Japan, it's not their custom.

The Chinese and East Indian merchant doesn't DREAM of getting what he's asking. He may argue. Weep. Insist you are breaking his rice bowl. But he'd drop dead of astonishment if you paid the asking price.

All Italian shopkeepers react to the word "sconto" — discount. They argue that they NEVER discount. NEVER!

Stay with it. Keep looking coldly out the window and repeat: "Sconto!" You'll win.

Whaling museum

Hunting the great whale now lingers only as a memory in American history.

The lusty cry of "Thar she blows!" will be heard no more. The death-knell of the U.S. whaling industry was sounded by Congress early in 1971 when it outlawed the killing of the big mammals.

It marked the end of an industry centuries old. It also marked the beginning of an era of preserving the whale from extinction.

Western Airlines provides daily connecting service via Honolulu to the location where much of the memory of the once prosperous industry lingers, Whaler's Village on the Island of Maui, Hawaii.

Preserved here is the atmosphere of the days when whalers came ashore after chasing the huge beasts that swam past the islands. From 1820 to 1860, Kaanapali and nearby Lahaina were winter headquarters for the New England whaling fleets.

Last word: Elocutionist

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Favorites flunk Preakness test

BALTIMORE (AP)—Speedburners Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure put on their expected act Saturday, but when the curtain fell on the 101st Preakness the star was steady running Elocutionist.

"I was hoping we could beat them," jockey John Lively said.

He found himself in fifth place after the first three-quarters of a mile, which Bold Forbes, the Kentucky Derby winner, ran in a sizzling 1:09 with Honest Pleasure two lengths behind him.

Elocutionist turned the hope into reality with a drive down the center of the Pimlico stretch that carried him to a 3½-length victory over Play The Red and made ex-Chicago cop Eugene Cashman, Elocutionist's owner, a winner in his first try at this classic.

For Bold Forbes, jockey Angel Cordero's "Puerto Rican Rolls Royce," it was a gallant third-place effort that ended in injury.

"I don't know where it happened, but he has a real bad cut on his left hind foot," said trainer Laz Barrera. "I'm most concerned with that. Yes, I think that could have stopped him."

But Cordero said Bold Forbes had no excuses and added, "He stood up like a champion under pressure."

It was also a bitter disappointment for LeRoy Jolley, trainer of Bert Firestone's Derby runnerup Honest Pleasure, who finished fifth in the six-horse field.

"Absolutely no excuse," said Jolley. "That pace was too much for both of us, and the result for my horse was he just got tired and dirty."

Paul Adwell, trainer of Elocutionist, agreed that the sizzling pace which led to a final time of 1:55 for the 1 3/16 miles, was a big factor in his colt's victory.

"A carpenter with good tools can do a lot of good things," he said. "The pace was different today and it went in my horse's favor. I think they went three quarters in nine (1:09), and that's just what my horse likes. I guess we'll be going to New York now."

The third race of the Triple Crown is the Belmont Stakes June 5 at Belmont Park.

Elocutionist's victory made a coin flip that turned in the favor of Cashman look much better to the former policeman, who now is one of the world's leading commodity dealers in soy beans.

Cashman disclosed after the race that at a Fasig-Tipton summer yearling sale in Kentucky two years ago, he wanted to buy Elocutionist while Adwell wanted another yearling—which turned out to be Bold Forbes.

Cashman won the flip, but two weeks ago at Churchill Downs it looked like he might have been a long-range loser.

Elocutionist earned $129,700 from the purse of $182,200 and paid $22.20, $8.20 and $3.60 to his backers in a stunned crowd of 62,256.

Max Gluck's Play The Red, whom trainer Johnny Campo was reluctant to send to the Preakness after an eighth-place Derby finish, returned $20.20 and $6.

"We've always known this horse has ability," said Campo. "Today he finally showed it. He likes to be on the outside better than where he was. But the rider couldn't get him out."

Play The Red, ridden by Jean Cruguet, appeared to have stuck his head in front of the wavering Bold Forbes with an eighth of a mile to go and just before Elocutionist charged by on the outside.

Bold Forbes, owned by Esteban Rodriguez Tizol and coupled in the betting with Louis Wolfson's Life's Hope as a Barrera-trained entry, paid $2.80.

Life's Hope, never in contention, finished last. The other starter, Cojak, was fourth, a neck in front of Honest Pleasure.

Each of the six carried 126 pounds.

When the gate opened, Cordero gunned Bold Forbes out of it as though the race was indeed a sprint. Honest Pleasure, ridden by Braulio Baeza, went right after him and the crowd rose in anticipation of another duel like the one they fought in the Derby.

Bold Forbes whipped through the first quarter-mile in 22 3/5, the half in 45 and the three quarters in 1:09. Honest Pleasure was right behind him all the way, by two lengths at the three-quarter mark.

Then things began to happen. Elocutionist began to move on the turn and so did Play The Red. Play The Red gunned towards the wire along the rail while Elocutionist took the turn four horses wide and shot down the middle of the track as Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure fought to slave off defeat.

They couldn't, and the day belonged to the underdogs and to backers of underdogs. The exacta of Elocutionist and Play The Red returned $347.40.

USC runs to Pac-8 crown

Gilkes wins 100, 200, anchors relay win

BERKELEY (AP)—Three dazzling sprint performances by USC's James Gilkes led the Trojans to victory Saturday with the highest point total ever in the Pacific-8 Conference track and field championships.

Gilkes ran the anchor leg of a 39.9 400-meter relay, blowing by UCLA's Orlando Johnson with an incredible burst of speed. UCLA took second place in 40.0 and Washington was third in 40.4.

Later, Gilkes came from behind again to slip by teammate Joel Andrews and win the 100 meters with a time of 10.5. Andrews also clocked 10.5, as did third-place finisher Al Davis of Washington.

Finally, Gilkes, a senior, flashed by a strong field to win the 200 meters in 21.1.

USC also won the 400-meter dash with a 46.0 performance from Ken Randle. He was followed by Bennie Myles of UCLA at 46.2 and Rod Connors of Southern Cal, also in 46.2.

The University of Washington scored a surprising second in the championship, winning all four throwing events to upset UCLA, which was a close third.

The Trojans won their third consecutive championship and fourth in five years with 180 points, surpassing UCLA's record of 156 in 1973. Washington had 99 for second and UCLA 95 for third. Washington State got 88, followed by Oregon 77, California 53, Oregon State 38 and Stanford 21.

USC's domination of the second day also included Tom Andrews' 49.9 victory in the 400 hurdles, Tom Cochee's triple jump mark of 53-9 and a winning 3:08.6 for the mile relay. Andrews and Cochee were the defending champions in their events.

Washington's Borys Chambul won the discus with a toss of 196-1 to complete a sweep of the throwing events for the Huskies, who won the hammer, shotput and javelin Friday.

Robert Gaines gave Washington another first with a 13.9 time in the 110-meter hurdles.

The host Golden Bears had a winner in James Robinson, who retained his championship in the 800-meter run with 1:49.1.

JOHNNY RUTHERFORD
Congratulations from wife

Rutherford (188.957) has Indy pole—maybe

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Johnny Rutherford was disappointed, A.J. Foyt disgraced and Al Unser heartbroken after the first day of pole position qualifying Saturday for the 60th annual Indianapolis 500.

But with a few more drivers yet to make their initial attempts, Rutherford had staked a solid claim to the No. 1 starting position in the $1 million May 30 race with a speed of 188.957 mph.

If his speed holds—and it certainly could—it would be the second time the handsome, likable Texan has won the pole for the world's richest race.

Qualifying resumes today at noon. The drivers who still are guaranteed a shot at the pole include Johnny Parsons, Mike Mosley and Gary Bettenhausen.

Al Unser also has a backup car identical to the one he has already qualified in line and it is undecided whether he will try again with a different machine.

"Things got slicker and slicker each lap and I just tried to keep it steady and not lose control," Rutherford said of the run he felt was disappointing. "The important thing is where you finish, not where you start."

FOYT, THE pole winner the previous two years, wound up a poor fifth on the provisional grid. His speeds dropped from 187.344 mph on his first circuit to 182.927 on his fourth and final trip.

"It's a disgrace to me and my car," Foyt said emotionally. "The damn thing wasn't handling."

Foyt vowed things would be better on race day or "I'll park it."

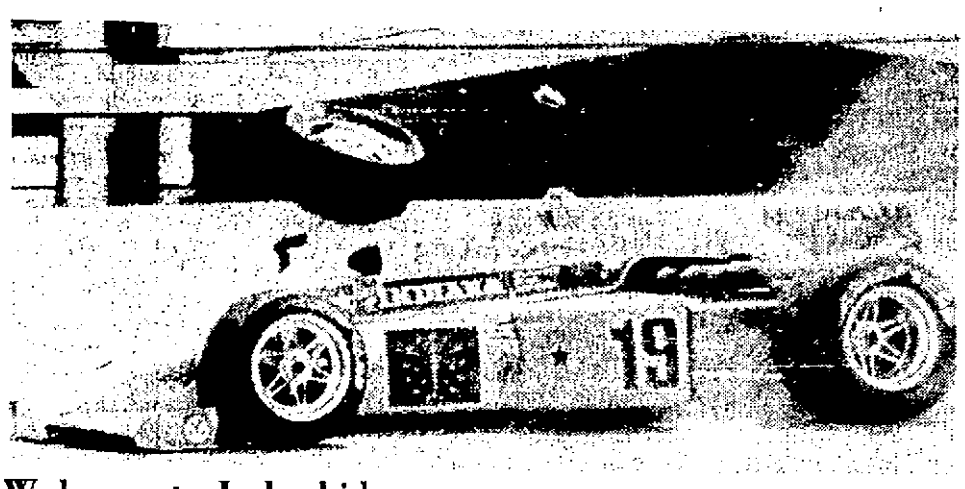

Al Unser, who was considered to have an excellent chance for the pole in the Parnelli-Cosworth, managed only 186.258 on his run.

"I'm heartbroken," he said. "I can only hope all the work we've put in on this project will be worth something on race day."

Only nine drivers took the checkered flag in the rain-shortened session.

Gordon Johncock, the soft-spoken 1973 Indy champion, occupied the front row center spot with former junior high school principal Tom Sneva securing the outside position.

Blyleven hopeful of trade

Fans 12 as Twins rock Angels twice

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Bert Blyleven would like to be attired in an Angel or Dodger uniform next season.

If Blyleven has his druthers — and it is entirely likely he will — he plans on leaving the employ of Calvin Griffith and the Minnesota Twins at the end of the season and gravitating to more lucrative climes.

A six-year veteran at the relatively-tender age of 25, Blyleven is one of 10 unsigned Twins who want to escape the parsimonious clutches of Griffith.

He said he will go where the dollars are but hopes they will come from West Coast financiers — namely Gene Autry or Walter O'Malley.

Blyleven gave the Angels pause to seriously consider a strong bid in the opener of a twi-night doubleheader at the Big A Saturday. He struck out 12 and spaced eight hits to win his third game of the season, benefitting from a 14-hit attack that brought the Twins a 5-2 victory.

Minnesota continued to maul Angel pitching in the nightcap, clubbing 17 more hits to bury the Angels, 15-5, completing a sweep.

Dan Ford, who had three hits in the opener, came back to drive in sx runs in the second game with his fifth homer, a double, single and sacrifice fly.

Pete Redfern, the former USC star who was making his major league debut, had a no-hitter working for five innings but was apparently affected by a long delay as the Twins scored seven runs in the sixth inning.

When he returned to the mound, he walked Ron Jackson, gave up Jerry Remy's spell-shattering single and saw Dave Chalk beat out a bunt to load the bases.

Then he saw Bobby Bonds unload a grand slam homer, about the only thing a Little League Night crowd of 31,534 had reason to cheer during the night.

Pirates drop lumber on Dodgers; Dodgers drop back to 2nd place

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

PITTSBURGH—The Lumber Company. That's the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Forget the stolen base and the sacrifice bunt. Let's play long ball. That's the credo of the Pirates. The only sign they ever flash from the third base coaching box is home run.

Somehow, in four previous tries against the Dodgers, the Lumber Company had been reduced to sawdust. Saturday, though, it was timber!

Pittsburgh got only seven hits in beating the Dodgers, 4-2, ending their latest win streak, a four-game run, and dropping them percentage points behind the Cincinnati Reds, who defeated the Mets, 2-0.

But two of the Pirates' hits were home runs and another was a double.

The loss was only the third in the last 19 games for the Dodgers, who have been on a home run tear themselves, belting 19 on the current trip.

But they failed to hit one Saturday. In fact, they didn't hit much of anything off George (Doc) Medich, the reknowned medical student, and they got even less off Bob Moose, a one-time ace of the staff who has taken to his new role of reliever with elan.

Dodger of the day
STEVE GARVEY doubled and singled in 4-2 loss to Pirates.

He entered Saturday's game in the ninth inning with the tying runs on base, only one out and Joe Ferguson and Steve Yeager scheduled to bat.

But Fergie popped up and Yeager hit a soft liner to end it and the Lumber Company nailed down its eighth win in its last 10 starts and first all season over the Dodgers.

"He's been doing that all year," said Danny Murtaugh, the No. 1 lumberjack, noting that Moose is yet to give up a run in eight appearances.

As for Medich, who lost to the Dodgers, 7-1, three weeks ago in Dodger Stadium, he said he learned something from that game.

"Any team that wins as many games as the Dodgers have been winning, you have to be careful," said Medich, the former New York Yankee who is a senior medical student at the University of Pittsburgh during the off-season.

"I learned a lot the last time I faced the Dodgers and I learned a few more things watching them Friday night."

Like throwing high fast balls to Bill Russell and Yeager for home runs, as the Bucs' John Candelaria did Friday night.

Russell had the Dodgers' only hit for six innings. It wasn't much, an infield single, but it extended his personal hitting streak to 13 games, longest on the club this season.

Russell was immediately wiped out in a double play as Medich faced only the minimum number of batters until Bill Buckner got a single in the seventh.

Wolfsberger gains U.S. Olympic team

Kathy Howard pulled all the tricks from her floor exercise bag Saturday night to take first place in the United States Olympic women's gymnastics trials and lead a team of six youngsters—including 17-year-old Leslie Wolfsberger of Westminster—pirouetting into Montreal.

The 18-year-old Miss Howard, of Oklahoma City, performed poorly in the first two events of the night, the side horse vault and the uneven parallel bars.

But her splendid, graceful 9.75 on the final event, the floor exercise, gave her a final total of 150.05 points for the four 40-point sessions and a narrow victory over Kolleen Casy of St. Paul, Minn.

The 16-year-old Miss Casey, a 90-pound honor student in high school, had earned 9.60 in the floor exercise to score 149.95 for what appeared to be an insurmountable lead in view of Miss Howard's broken right toe.

However, Miss Howard ignored the pain to win this meet in a wire-to-wire performance.

Kim Chace of Riviera Beach, Fla. showed the form that earned her a berth on the 1972 Olympic team in placing third with 149.90. The 20-year-old Miss Chace is the only 1972 member of the American Olympic team to make it back in 1976.

Fourth place in this meet went to powerful 16-year-old Debbie Wilcox of Englewood, Colo. with 149.70, followed by Carrie Englert, 18, of Eugene, Ore., 149.35.

Sixth and last place on the U.S. team was captured on the final event by Miss Wolfsberger, a newcomer and last-minute substitute on the U.S. qualification team three weeks ago.

The young lady from Orange County, the only Californian qualifying, scored 149.30.

The alternate on the team at 149.25 will be Jodi Yocum, 16, of Allentown, Pa.

Miss Howard, favoring the broken toe all three days of this competition structured like the Olympics, was the leader after the first compulsory round and continued to lead throughout even though she faltered early in Saturday's events.

Roxanne Pierce of Reading, Pa., who had fallen during Friday's floor exercise, suffered a sprained ankle in the vault Saturday night and withdrew from the competition.

Seventeen-year-old Denise Cheshire of Burbank, who won the national all-around championship just three weeks ago, dropped to 17th.

Final scores in the 1976 United States women's Olympic gymnastics trials at the Los Angeles Sports Arena:

1. Kathy Howard, Oklahoma City, Okla., 150.05 points; 2. Kolleen Casey, St. Paul, Minn., 149.95; 3. Kim Chace, Riveria Beach, Fla., 149.90; 4. Debbie Willcox, Englewood, Colo., 149.70; 5. Carrie Englert, Eugene, Ore., 149.35; 6. Leslie Wolfsberger, Westminster, Calif., 149.30; 7. Jodi Yocum, Allentown, Pa., 149.25; 8. Tammy Manwite, Scottsdale, Ariz., 149.00; 9. Diane Dunbar, Walnut Creek, Calif., 148.70; 10. Tie between Jeanne Beadle, Baton Rouge, La. and Janice Baker, Syracuse, N.Y., 147.60; 12. Kathy Johnson, Doraville, Ga., 147.50; 13. Ann Carr, Philadelphia, Pa., 147.45; 14. Susan Archer, Long Beach, Calif., 147.35; 15. Robin Heubner, Dickinson, N.D., 147.20; 16. Debbie Fike, Los Alamitos, Calif., 147.05; 17. 2 LBCC records in SoCal JC trials

Long Beach City College placed eight individuals and its mile relay team Saturday in qualifying for the Southern California junior college track finals at Mt. San Antonio College.

The contingent is the largest the Vikings have placed in the finals since 1967.

Dave Fuller (discus) and Larry Norwood (400 intermediate hurdles) set school records. Fuller's toss measured 169-11¼. Norwood clocked 53.5 in a second-place finish.

Gerald Peete won his 400-meter heat in 48.2—the best time of the day.

Barry Welsch finished fourth in the 1,500 with a 3:59.2, Ed Vallez qualified in the steeplechase with a 10th-place finish (10:16.4), Craig Wilson jumped 16-0 to qualify in the pole vault, Shaughn Ward (191-¼) was 11th in the javelin and Gerald Halcomb (49-7) was fifth in the triple jump.

The mile relay team of Larry Flewellan, Lynn Hawkins, Mike Griffith and Peete finished second at 3:16.2

The finals will also be at Mt. San Antonio next Saturday.

ANGELS SWEPT—

"I'm definitely going to play out my option...I've got to get out of Minnesota," Blyleven remarked between games. "All winter I asked to be traded but Mr. Griffith said he couldn't get anything for me, or enough to satisfy him. It was the same old stuff.

"I'd be kidding if I didn't say money wasn't the main issue," he went on. "Money and respect and I don't think he (Griffith) has respect for a lot of his players.

"I've had good years, won a lot of games, pitched a lot of innings and had good ERAs. I've been consistent but when I negotiate he knocks me and tells me I'm not a good pitcher. I'm tired of it. I think some other club would appreciate me more."

Blyleven specifically mentioned the Angels and the Dodgers as among the teams he would prefer to pitch for but he said he would likely accept the high bid.

"Security is my basic goal," Blyleven said. "You're only in this game so long and you have to make it while you can. I'd like to have some sort of pension plan set up."

Blyleven insisted his outlook had nothing to do with his teammates or the Twins' management.

"This is strictly a personal thing between myself and Mr. Griffith," he said. "It's something that has been building up for the past five years."

Blyleven grew up in Garden Grove and now resides in Irvine. Asked he'd like to pitch in Anaheim (where his record is 8-4) every four days he replied, simply, "Yeah."

He pitched like it in the first game with his 12-strikeout effort and the Twins supported him with some robust hitting against Gary Ross and Andy Hassler.

Rookie catcher Butch Wynegar, who was performing in the Class A League last summer, sealed Ross' fifth successive loss with a two-run third inning homer.

Ross did not have it on this night, surrendering four runs (three earned) and eight hits in two-plus innings. But Hassler, making his first appearance since May 2, threw encouragingly. He yielded one run and six hits in his seven innings of toil.

ANGEL ANGLES: The home stand and series concludes today with Jim Hughes (0-2) opposing Don Kirkwood (0-2) in the matinee...The Angels leave immediately after the game for Chicago, opening a two-game series there Monday night...At last count, there were still 10 Twins who had not signed contracts...Former Twin manager Frank Quilici is now Herb Carneal's partner in the Minnesota radio booth..."I don't seem to have as many gray hairs these days," Quilici smiled...Dave Chalk had fanned five times in a row before lashing a double to left in the fifth inning of the first game...He is still suffering from a sore left shoulder, a reminder of a recent collision with Oakland's Campy Campaneris...Andy Etchebarren had reached base nine successive times before flying out in the seventh inning of the opener...Etch had five consecutive hits in addition to walking twice, being hit by a pitch and reaching on an error.

Six Lakewood wrestling titles

The Lakewood Parks and Recreation Department emerged with six championships Saturday at the Southeast Municipal Athletic Association wrestling championships at Rio Hondo Park in Pico Rivera.

Lakewood's winners were: Chad Nelson (88 pounds), Craig Feinstein (99), Herb Berlin (88), Mark Lancter (95), John Romo (110) and Danny Romo (120).

DODGERS Canadian girls swim standouts

Steve Garvey also singled in the seventh but Ron Cey, the hottest of the hot Dodgers, popped up for the third out of the inning.

It wasn't until Ed Goodson hit a scoring fly ball in the eighth that the Dodgers were able to score.

In the ninth, after they got one run and had runners at first and against Dave Giusti, Moose took over and that was the end of the Dodgers.

Manny Sanguillen, who batted .488 last year against Dodger pitching and is 7-for-17 this year, doubled and scored on Bob Robertson's single in the first inning off Doug Rau, who lost for the second time in a row after winning 10 consecutive decisions.

Then came the home runs.

Bill Robinson, who is replacing the ailing Dave Parker, slugged his first of the year in the fourth—only his second RBI of the season—and then Al Oliver, the man the Dodgers had hoped to obtain in a trade last winter, unloaded a mammoth two-run shot in the fifth.

It was the fourth this season for Oliver and the 108th of his career, tying him with the legendary Paul Waner for eighth place on the Pirates' all-time home run list.

"Rau pitched all right," Dodger manager Walt Alston analyzed, "but I've seen him better. Anytime you hold these guys to six or seven hits you're done a good job."

Except when two of the six or seven hits are home runs.

DODGER DOPE: In a pregame meeting the Dodgers voted to honor a strike by NBC technicians and not appear in any interviews for the nationally televised game. "We didn't have any interviews anyway," said Tony Kubek, one of the announcers, and there was never any issue. . . . Tommy John, hit on the right ankle by a line drive Friday night, jogged five miles Saturday and reported he'll make his next scheduled start.

How they scored

PIRATES FIRST
With one out, Sanguillen doubled Oliver grounded out, Robertson singled, scoring Sanguillen. Zisk fouled out. One run, two hits, one left.

PIRATES FOURTH
Robinson homered to center, his first. Hebner grounded out, Mendoza fouled out. Medich struck out. One run, one hit, none left.

PIRATES FIFTH
With one out, Sanguillen singled. Oliver homered to center, his fourth. Robertson and Zisk flied out. Two runs, two hits, none left.

DODGERS EIGHTH
Ferguson and Yeager walked. Russell forced Yeager. Goodson batted for Bowling and hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Ferguson. Lopes grounded out. One run, no hits, one left.

DODGERS NINTH
Buckner singled. Giusti replaced Medich. Baker forced Buckner. Garvey doubled. Cey got an infield single, scoring Baker. Moose replaced Giusti. Ferguson popped out. Yeager lined out. Out run, three hits, two left.

Casals spurs Strings win

Rosie Casals played on Los Angeles' winning women's doubles and mixed doubles teams, and Dianne Fromholtz won her singles match to rally the Strings to a 21-17 World Team Tennis victory over the San Diego Friars Saturday night at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Casals teammed with Ann Jones to score a 6-0 doubles victory over San Diego's Bettyann Stewart and Terry Holladay, then joined Vijay Amritraj to down the Friars mixed doubles team of Janet Young and Ross Case 6-3.

Fromholtz topped Stewart 6-2 to help the Strings even their mark at 4-4. The Friars are now 4-5.

UCLA rally tops USC for CIBA crown, 7-6

UCLA freshman Steve Splitt lashed a two-run single with two out in the ninth and Brian Viselli followed with another run-scoring single Saturday to give the Bruins a 7-6 victory over USC and the California Intercollegiate Baseball Association championship.

The UCLA triumph marked the end of USC's league domination spanning the last six years. The Bruins were the last team other than the Trojans to win a league title, in 1969.

Splitt, who had just three hits in 14 at-bats this season, delivered the bases-loaded single that tied the score off Trojan reliever and loser John Racanelli. Viselli then singled to left to score Bobby Dallas from third.

Ed Cowan went the distance for the Bruins, notching his 10th victory in 12 decisions, as UCLA finished with a 16-8 conference mark.

The Trojans ended with a 15-8-1 mark, having agreed earlier not to replay a 1-1 tie with California.

Catcher Dennis Delany hit a solo homer in the seventh inning for the Bruins, who had just four hits and three unearned runs entering the final frame.

Tim Tolman, Doug Stokke and Mark Carpenter had three hits apiece for the Trojans, who had beaten UCLA Thursday and Friday to delay the Bruins' claiming the league title.

The next stop for UCLA will be the Western Regionals—via a selection process that appears automatic.

No cliques, noncomformists

Rangers a big, happy family under Lucchesi

Frank Joseph Lucchesi (pronounced "Lou Casey"), 5-8 and 180 pounds, is a tough, 48-year-old Italian from San Francisco. He has taken the Texas Rangers from a 79-83 club that finished 19 games behind the Oakland A's in 1975 into first place in the American League West in the first five weeks of the '76 campaign.

He has been "through the grinder," playing and managing in such places as

"The key to the Texas Ranger turnabout is our manager. Frank Lucchesi has degrees of tolerance and kindness that I've never seen before. He cares about his players." — Jeff Burroughs.

Bisbee, Ventura, Twin Falls, Thomasville, Pine Bluff, High Point, Williamsport and Pocatello. He never played in the majors.

He started his player-manager career at the age of 23 in Medford, Ore. He is kind and understanding, but when his temper explodes, it's akin to watching Vesuvius erupt.

In Pine Bluff, Ark., in 1954, as player-manager of a club in the low, low minors, he nearly died when an errant fastball caught him on the side of the head and his life hung in the balance for several days.

WHAT MAGIC potion has Lucchesi brewed to make the Rangers break so fast from the gate and boast the best record in baseball?

"Every manager has a different philosophy," explained Frank, before an Angel game a few evenings ago. "Mine is to take the pressure off the kids and put it on me. I can take it.

"Also, and this may surprise you, I'm never concerned about the players who play every day. The starters don't need any special pat on the butt. I give special attention to the kids who aren't playing. I communicate with them more than I do with the regulars. The guys on the bench are the ones who need moral support.

"How do I communicate? For one thing, I pick up a kid's tab in a restaurant. I call over the waitress and tell her to give me the check. This makes the guy feel important.

"I don't do this every time I see a player eating, mind you, but I pick up a tab at what I think is an appropriate time."

"BASICALLY," Frank Joseph continued, "you start with players' attitudes. Don't get me wrong. You have to have talent, but you assume that everybody on a major league roster has talent to some degree. Then, you go from there.

"I was aware of this team's attitude long before spring training finally got started. These players worked together in Florida during the lockout and they picked up their own tabs in the process. I admired them for that.

"A guy here or there from other clubs was working out, too, but just about all the guys on this club were getting into shape together on their own. I was impressed the way they went about this without griping.

"Oh, I sneaked a couple dozen baseballs for them from the team's supply when the owner wasn't looking, but the players did the rest.

"There are no cliques on this club and everyone's working together. I sensed that from the start. There's a lot of togetherness and harmony on this club. There are no nonconformists."

FRANK WAS especially happy about the unexpected togetherness of his pitching staff. All four starters were spring training question marks.

Gaylord Perry was 37 and coming off a so-so 18-17 season, split between Cleveland and Texas. Jim Umbarger had a fair 8-7 rookie campaign. Bill Singer and Nelson Briles had come from the Angels and Royals, respectively, off bad seasons and with injury-prone tags.

"Frank Lucchesi is a different kind of manager. He has gone through the grinder and can be tough. He also is understanding, and makes a player, young or old, want to put out 110 per cent every minute." — Bill Singer.

The quartet looked like a collective prize from a crackerjack box, but each won three games in the first month of th season.

"The pitching really surprised me," said Lucchesi. "I figured the short training period would hurt us badly because of our pitchers' ages and their infirmities. I knew we could hit, so when the pitching came around right off the bat, I sensed we had something going.

"I even had a tentative trade set for Umbarger early in April. Thank God it didn't go through. Now the other club wants Jim, but there's no way it'll get him."

THINGS WEREN'T always so rosy

FRANK LUCCHESI
A very happy fella

for Lucchesi. His two and one-half year record at the Philadelphia helm (1970-72) was 166-233 and he was released in midseason.

"When I managed the Phillies, they were in a rebuilding program," Frank explained. "We didn't have the talent that I have now with this Texas club. I found in Philly that I couldn't scoop water with a pitchfork.

"But this club's for real. I knew that when we beat Boston seven in a row and then Oakland three in a row.

"I'm a very happy fella. I said in the spring that this was going to be a happy year, so I'm not saying that I'm happy now just because we're in first place. The man upstairs has been good."

LIKE HIS manager, Burroughs felt from the outset that the Rangers would shake off their '75 lethargy and be wire-to-wire contenders this season.

"Frank made me a believer when he took over this club from Billy Martin last July," said Jeff, off to a fast start himself with an average around .280 and with a share of the American League home run leadership.

"We were 35-32 under Frank last season. We're good, but not great—yet. We're not lucky, either. We didn't beat the Red Sox and A's on luck."

"A big reason for the Rangers' fast start is the patience of Lucchesi. He's a tough Italian, but he's patient and the players appreciate that." — Jim Fregosi.

SINGER, baseball's bionic man, also is sold on the Rangers' togetherness, but in a slightly different manner.

"Before spring training opened, Brad Corbett (Ranger owner) gathered the players together for informal workouts. On the sly, of course. Then, Lucchesi slipped us a few baseballs and I realized immediately this whole club was harmonized.

"Corbett took us out to dinner and we drank together, owner and players.

"Corbett made me feel good, too, about the way I handled the player rep's job with the Angels. He also gave me a three-year contract before he ever saw me pitch.

"I attended a baseball banquet in January at Dallas. Toby Harrah, Lenny Randle and Mike Hargrove came up to me and told me how glad they were to have me with the team.

"I thank Harry Dalton for having sent me to Texas. It's been a lot of fun."

Frank Lucchesi is enjoying it, too.

Bukich, Dankworth keep coach guessin'

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

If UCLA's football team exposed itself to the degree its fans did Saturday afternoon, it would be treating severe sunburn today.

Playing under wraps before 5,000 sun-worshiping fans in Drake Stadium, the Bruins' Veer-T offense performed admirably. The Jeff Dankworth Golds and Steve Bukich Blues trampled the 60-yard turf for 479 yards total offense.

It is important to note those figures were accumulated without veteran running backs Wendell Tyler and Jim Brown plus seasoned linemen Mitch Kahn, Keith Eck, Greg Taylor, Rob Kezirian and Rick Walker. Also taking the afternoon off were such defensive stalwarts as Raymond Burks, Oscar Edwards, Tim Tenningkeit and Manu Tuiasosopo.

Even performing with and against second-team personnel, Dankworth and Bukich did little to help head coach Terry Donahue settle the quarterback question for next fall. Dankworth will likely get the nod on seasoning.

The senior-to-be from Reno led all ball carriers with 94 yards on 12 rushes, two of which went for touchdowns. He hit on three of seven passes, caught one from split end James Sarpy and performed about as well Saturday as John Sciarra did a year ago—and he went on to win all-America honors.

TERRY DONAHUE
In a quandary

He doesn't believe the position is his.

"We didn't decide anything today," Jeff said on the sidelines afterward. "I suppose there'll be some controversy in the fall because that's what the public likes. I like competition, too, but I'm only out there to get better every day. I never think about beating out Steve."

The Bruin offense was a carbon copy of what UCLA fans have viewed the last two seasons. Sure, there were a couple of halfback passes but those were purely for Arizona State and Arizona spies.

"We really didn't show anything," Dankworth continued. "We went with a very limited passing game and we'd be very pleased if Arizona State thought we couldn't throw."

Donahue indicated his primary concern regarding his quarterbacks is making the players aware of his philosophy.

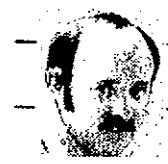

"We can't have them choosing sides between Jeff and Steve. Right now they'll both be playing. Jeff's more polished because of his experience. If I had my druthers I'd go with one guy, but history shows you can do the job with both. Didn't USC win a national championship one year rotating Pete Beathard and Bill Nelsen?"

Bukich showed he could run, producing 54 yards, the same total as 6-3, 220-pound speedster Theotis Brown. Safety John Gibbs was a hitter and linebacker Jerry Robinson proved he'd made a quick transition from wide receiver by scoring on a 50-yard interception.

Junior college transfer Homer Butler may be the swift receiver UCLA needs to play opposite Wally Henry and Frank Corral has already supplanted graduated kickers Brett White and John Sullivan.

The Riverside City College product averaged 47 yards on six punts before having one blocked. Most of his extra points landed in the vicinity of Wilshire Blvd.

Clearly, all the talent wasn't lounging on the sidelines.

RICH ROBERTS

"A lot of people are happy when they perform well. My main concern is to win. I've never been on a losing ball club, and I don't want to be here." — Bobby Bonds.

Bonds will never get used to losing

The batter's name was Bonds—Elizabeth, the mother, not Bobby, the son—and she worked the pitcher to a 2-1 count before slapping a bloop single over second base.

Usually, these pre-game, first-ball ceremonies allow a couple of erratic efforts from a flannel-armed mayor before the hook comes out, but Mrs. Bonds hadn't driven all the way from Riverside to be denied her licks.

It's clear that Bobby Bonds' competitive instincts are hereditary, but he has seldom faced the prospect of being upstaged by his mom. What else could he do but clobber a three-run homer to launch the Angels' three-game sweep of Cleveland last weekend and set himself onto what is commonly known as a tear?

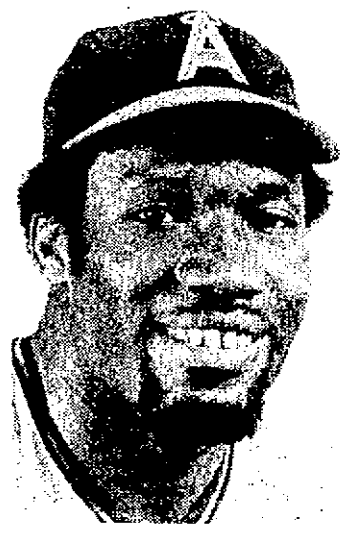

"It's gratifying that you're going good," says Bonds, noting that the Angels subsequently regressed to three successive losses, despite his exploits, "but it's not gratifying if your team is going bad. We're in this thing together—not as individuals.

"A lot of people are happy when they perform well. My main concern is to win. I've never been on a losing ball club, and I don't want to be here."

THE NUMBERS say that Bobby Lee Bonds, 30, is the best all-round player the Angels have ever had.

Twice in his seven seasons at San Francisco and again with the Yankees last year, he hit more than 30 home runs and stole at least 30 bases, a feat of versatility unmatched by anyone in baseball history. Nobody else did it more than once, except Willie Mays, who is somebody very special.

"I think every club needs a ballplayer that the other people will look up to," says Bonds, who came to worship Mays as a young member of the Giants.

BOBBY BONDS
Mays his hero

"Whether or not I'm that individual, I just want to do my part. It's going to take the whole 25 players."

The Yankees last season needed a leader, which Bonds tried to be.

"I played hurt . . . showed 'em that I'm willing to go out and do a lot of things, that winning means a lot to me, as opposed to some other guy who goes out and has a good night and doesn't give a crap what the team does."

So despite an injured knee, Bonds hit 32 homers, stole 30 bases and drove in 85 runs, while batting only three points below his career average of .273.

He doesn't mind playing hurt. It's worse not to play at all, as he discovered when he fractured a finger sliding into home plate against the Dodgers a week before the '76 opener.

"I don't think I've ever felt so bad in my life . . . don't think I ever hurt so much inside over anything. I've played hurt—pinch hit, pinch run or something—but this time I couldn't do anything.

"That part really got to me. The season's starting and the organization and my teammates are looking for me to play, and I'm on the bench with a cast on my hand."

APPARENTLY, Bonds is a fast healer, considering his performance of the past several days.

"The whole thing about having a good year is trying to keep your head on right," he says. "The least little problem around the home or any type of dissension can cause you to stop thinking about baseball.

"Anytime I have a particular problem I can get rid of it in a day. All I have to do is go fish. When I'm upset, uptight or just bugged, I head straight for the water.

"Sometimes I'll just go down and walk along the beach . . . walk out on the pier . . . just look at the water. Water is peaceful. Water doesn't fuss at you, doesn't do anything. There's always a nice breeze, and to me it's just beautiful. This is the way I find relaxation and peace."

It's been said that Anaheim Stadium is a peaceful place, even when the Angels are playing. Especially when the Angels are playing. This is a condition Bonds intends to change. He doesn't believe that losing comes with the franchise, nor does he indulge in silly superstitions when he is going well, such as wearing the same jock or socks as long as he is hot.

"I've never had a jock on," he confesses, "and I don't wear the same socks because they stink.

"If I have a superstition, it's only if I go oh-for-2 I won't use that bat a third time . . . like, it's not my fault I missed the ball, it's the bat's fault. Stupid, right?"

THERE ARE some things Bonds never changes, though—the crucifixion and Santa Barbara medals on the gold chain around his neck, as well as the puka shell necklace.

"My kids gave me that," he says. "I never take any of them off."

Bonds has three sons, ages 12, 10 and 6, "one wife," he adds, "and one dog."

Two trades in the last two years have created some upheaval in the family, which is only now becoming settled again.

"I guess my wife and I couldn't believe it because I did have a respectable season in New York last year," Bobby says. "My kids were very, very delighted because they were going to be close to their grandparents.

"Now I think coming back to California has relaxed me a lot. I was born and raised thirty-some miles from here (in Riverside), and people down here have seen me play since I was 10 or 11 years old. It's not like I have to go out and prove anything."

BONDS HAS been proving himself since he broke in under the wing of Mays, the heir apparent to Willie's role as the leader of the Giants.

"I wasn't a threat to Willie," Bobby says. "Willie and I were friends. We still are personal friends. I admire the man; I love the man.

"Willie helped me more than anybody that's put on a uniform in this game. He taught me things I probably wouldn't know right now if I hadn't been with him. I more or less try to play the game the way he used to play it. I run the bases like him. I've tried to pattern myself after him—not that I can be him, because there's only one Willie Mays.

"The whole world knows what a great player he was, but the world doesn't know Willie Mays the man. I know him both ways. He's helped me on and off the field.

"A lot of people didn't get to see Willie when he was doing a lot of things that I was able to see, playing with him and watching him day in and day out. Later, he wasn't performing like Willie the 25-year-old, but he was playing at an age when most people aren't even able to put on a uniform. I don't think he embarrassed himself.

"To say I felt sorry for Willie Mays after he hit six hundred and some home runs, three thousand and some base hits—you can't feel sorry for a man like that. A lot of players would take half of his records and have one helluva career."

The Angels would settle for that—or, better yet, Bobby Bonds.

Four-run 7th wins for Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Chambliss's two-run homer and Oscar Gamble's two-run pinch single accounted for four runs in the seventh inning Saturday and sparked the New York Yankees to a 7-3 victory over Baltimore that ended the Orioles' four-game winning streak.

Chambliss's blow kayoed Baltimore starter Mike Cuellar (1-3). The Yankees added two more runs when reliever Dyar Miller walked three men and Grant Jackson yielded Gamble's bases-loaded single.

After the Orioles took a 1-0 lead against starter Ed Figueroa (3-2) in the second inning, the Yankees tied it in the third on Fred Stanley's single, a wild pitch and Roy White's two-out single.

New York broke the tie with a run in the fifth on Thurman Munson's out-out grounder after the Yankees loaded the bases on singles by Willie Randolph and White around a walk to Sandy Alomar. The relay to first beat Munson for what would have been an inning-ending double play but umpire Ron Luciano ruled that Tony Muser took his foot off the bag too soon.

Figueroa lasted until the seventh, when he needed help from Sparky Lyle, who notched his seventh save, matching his total for all last season.

Reds blank Mets; move back on top

CINCINNATI (AP) — Fireballing Santo Alcala, making only his second major league start, scattered four hits and struck out nine as Cincinnati whipped the New York Mets, 2-0, Saturday night.

The Reds, who had four stolen bases, including Danny Driessen's theft of home on a double steal, moved into first place in the National League West by percentage points over the Dodgers, which lost to Pittsburgh, 4-2.

Using mostly fastballs and locating them well, Alcala won his second game in as many starts and permitted only five men to reach base. He walked one.

Cincinnati pitchers have allowed only 15 earned runs in the last 82 innings and the staff has recorded five shutouts this year.

The Reds scored their two runs in the second after Driessen led off with a walk off Tom Seaver, 4-2. With one out, Driessen broke for second and Tony Perez singled, with Driessen continuing to third.

Then with two outs, Perez, who stole his first base of the season Friday night, broke for second. Catcher Jerry Grote threw to second but not in time to get Perez, and Driessen raced home. Dave Concepcion's triple knocked in the second Cincinnati run.

Brewers fall to Bosox, 9-4

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice and Carlton Fisk highlighted an eight-run seventh inning with long home runs and Boston won its fourth game in a row Saturday, a 9-4 decision over slumping Milwaukee.

Fisk started Boston's biggest inning since a nine-run explosion in Chicago on July 8, 1973, with a double high off the left field wall and capped it with his fifth homer, a two-run shot into the Milwaukee bullpen in right.

Rice, benched for weak hitting earlier this week, broke a 3-3 tie by drilling a three-run pinch homer into the left field screen off left-hander Ray Sadecki, the third of four Milwaukee pitchers in the inning.

Helped by the come-from-behind explosion, Ferguson Jenkins posted his second victory in seven decisions with an eight-hitter in handing the Brewers their seventh consecutive defeat.

Two-hitter by Detroit rookie

DETROIT (AP) — Rookie Mark Fidrych, making his first major league start, fired a no-hitter for six innings and wound up with a two-hitter Saturday as Detroit edged Cleveland, 2-1.

Cleveland's only baserunner off the 21-year old right-hander until the seventh inning was Alan Ashby, who walked with two out in the fifth after Fidrych had retired the first 14 batters.

Buddy Bell broke up the no-hit bid with a leadoff single in the seventh that bounced under the glove of third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez. Rick Manning followed with a single through the box and Rico Carty ruined the shutout bid with a grounder that scored Bell.

Detroit got its runs in the first and fourth innings on sacrifice flies off Pat Dobson (3-4). In the opening inning, Willie Horton's sacrifice fly followed singles by Ron LeFLore and Alex Johnson. LeFlore's hit extended his hitting streak to 18 games, longest by a Tiger since a 22-game string by Al Kaline in 1961.

Mayberry belt beats Sox in 12

KANSAS CITY (AP)—John Mayberry crashed his second home run of the season with two out in the 12th inning Friday night to give Kansas City its fifth consecutive victory, 2-1 over Chicago.

The first baseman connected off righthander Rich Gossage, who had gone all the way for the White Sox and allowed seven hits until the gamebreaker.

The decision went to Mark Littell (2-0). Littell, who replaced lefthander Paul Splittorff at the beginning of the 11th inning, has allowed only one unearned run in 17⅔ innings of relief work. Littell struck out two and set down the White Sox in order in the 11th and 12th innings.

Gossage (1-3) struck out five and walked six in taking the stinging loss.

Ralph Garr singled home Chicago's run in the third. The Royals, who now have won 11 of their last 13 games, evened the score in the fifth on Tom Poquette's triple and Amos Otis' sacrifice fly.

Lonborg baffles Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Lonborg hurled 5⅔ innings of no-hit ball, finishing with a four-hitter, and Mike Schmidt hammered his 14th home run of the season Saturday night as Philadelphia edged Houston, 2-1.

Lonborg (5-0) lost his no-hitter when Wilbur Howard smashed a two-out double in the sixth. Howard then scored on Rob Andrews' single before Bob Watson grounded out to halt the rally.

The Phillies took advantage of an Astros error to score an unearned run in the second. Jay Johnstone was hit by a pitch, stole second and came home when losing pitcher Larry Dierker bobbled Bobby Tolan's grounder for an error, providing Philadelphia with a 1-0 lead.

Foli homers, Warthen 2-hits Braves for split

ATLANTA (AP)—Southpaw Dan Warthen fired a two-hitter and Tim Foli cracked a home run as the Montreal Expos battered the Atlanta Braves, 6-1, to split a twi-night doubleheader Saturday.

The Braves won the opener, 3-1, behind the pitching of Dick Ruthven and a two-run homer by Lee Lacy.

Foli's third homer of the year, a solo shot to left, broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning of the nightcap.

Atlanta had taken a 1-0 lead in the first when Lacy singled in Rowland Office, who had been hit by a pitch. Warthen (1-3) retired the next 14 Braves in order before Marty Perez collected the second hit, a single to center in the sixth.

Pepe Mangual tripled and scored on Jerry White's infield grounder when the Expos tied it in the third.

Montreal added two more in the fifth off Braves starter Phil Niekro (3-3). Mike Jorgensen singled in Mangual and later scored when catcher Vic Correll overthrew third for an error.

Jim Dwyer scored from first for Montreal in the sixth when Jim Wynn misjudged a liner to left, giving Pete Mackanin a run-scoring double.

Ruthven (4-4) ended a four-game losing streak while going the distance in the opener, stopping the Expos on seven hits.

He lost his shutout in the seventh when Pete Mackanin doubled to right and later scored on Pepe Mangual's pop fly single behind second.

Hrabosky's wild pitch wins for Giants, 2-0

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Relief ace Al Hrabosky wild-pitched two runs home in the top of the 11th inning, ending a scoreless tie and giving the San Francisco Giants a 2-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals behind the four-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell and Gary Lavelle Saturday night.

The Giants' triumph came after John Denny had pitched a six-hitter through the first nine innings for St. Louis in a duel with Caldwell and Lavelle.

Hrabosky spelled Denny in the 10th and struck out three Giants before Bobby Murcer singled with one out in the 11th.

Murcer advanced to third on Gary Matthews' double off Willie Crawford's glove at the wall. Both runners scored when Hrabosky (0-2) uncorked his wild pitch with Willie Montanez at bat.

St. Louis, in losing to the Giants for the first time in five games, was held hitless for six innings from the fourth while garnering only three singles and a double off the San Francisco pitcher.

Lavelle, making his 16th appearance of the season, surrended two of the hits after taking over for Caldwell in the Cards' half of the eighth.

The victory was only the fourth in 19 games for San Francisco.

Campy's error paves way for Texas, 6-4

OAKLAND (AP) — Shortstop Bert Campaneris's error on a controversial play in the 12th inning gave Texas two runs and a 6-4 victory over Oakland Saturday.

With one out and a runner on second base, Mike Hargrove hit a one-hop grounder to relief pitcher Jim Todd. Todd attempted to run down Lenny Randle between second and third but then changed his mind and threw to second attempting to get Hargrove.

Campaneris made a late tag of Hargrove and then threw to third trying to get Randle. The throw bounced off Sal Bando's glove and into the Oakland dugout. Two runs scored on the play.

The A's argued that Bando was interfered with as he attempted to field the throw. The A's played the game under protest.

It was a familiar opening round Saturday in the 52nd Long Beach City Match Play Golf Championship at El Dorado.

The players who play or practice every day had no trouble outscoring the weekend golfers as a whopping field of 186 consumed 12 hours in their bids to eliminate two-thirds of the competition.

Husky Mike Bellmar, the SoCal Publinx champion, and Chuck Wallace, the No. 2 player at Long Beach State University, carded 2-under-par 70s to lead the way.

Jeff Newell and Greg Hetzer, who work at Skylinks and hit balls every day, posted 1-under 71s along with Rick Johnson, a former Wilson golfer who recently won a tournament at Spyglass Hill as a member of the USC team.

Jeff Fredensburg, the El Dorado club champion, was one of three at 72 and he is an every-day player as well. Also at 72 were Bill Workman and Vern Brickey, both in their 20s and players not so long ago.

Tony Campregher, the 1975 champion, did not have an official score because he is exempt into the tournament. He carded a 76 and said, "my game is coming around. I'll be ready by next week."

The low 63 scorers following today's second round will qualify for match play beginning next weekend. Campregher and Bellmar are the heavy favorites. The tournament continues through May 30.

Bellmar collected five birdies and three bogies. He slipped on the final hole while Wallace earned his 70 with a birdie on the par-3 18th. It was his fourth bird of the day.

Hetzer started fast, out in 34, but had only eight pars and a bogey on the easier incoming nine.

FORT WORTH. (AP) — Don January glanced at the leader board showing Lee Trevino three strokes in front of the pack going into today's final round of the $200,000 Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament.

"It's his dice," January drawled in the Texas twang that dominates this event.

January was five shots back after three rounds.

Trevino, who shot a two-under-par 68 to take the commanding lead in the quest for his first title ever in Texas, generally agreed.

"I don't have it won by any means," he said. "But if I can shoot something around par tomorrow, maybe one under, they'll have trouble making it up."

Trevino, again exhibiting the flair and flamboyance that made him one of golf's most popular performers, completed his three rounds in 200 strokes, 10 under par.

An Act follows trend, upsets Crystal Water

Three-year-old bubbles were burst on both coasts Saturday.

A few hours after Bold Forbes was upset in the Preakness, California's top-ranked sophomore, Crystal Water, was a similar victim at Hollywood Park.

Responsible for the mild surprise locally was An Act, the Santa Anita Derby hero whose stock had dwindled sharply after his disappointing try back of Crystal Water in the Hollywood Derby.

However, An Act, who races for a syndicate that is headed by Al Yank, had his day Saturday. He outran Crystal Water through the stretch to win by a length and one-half in the $53,100 El Dorado Handicap, witnessed by 39,502 fans.

Crystal Water was the 4-5 favorite, with An Act a well-backed, 2-1 second choice. As such he paid $6.80. An Act's time for one mile on the dirt was an excellent 1:34 2/5, just one tick off the stakes record.

An Act's seven-man ownership combine voted after the Hollywood Derby to replace Laffit Pincay with Marco Castaneda for the El Dorado and the Colombian-born jockey handled him flawlessly to gain his first Hollypark stakes triumph.

"When I asked him to move, coming to the quarter pole, he gave me a good run," said Castaneda, who has been working and galloping An Act in the morning for the past two weeks. "No, I wasn't worried when Crystal Water came up on us, because I felt my horse had plenty left and he did."

Bill Shoemaker rode Crystal Water and he commented afterward that he liked his chances all the way. "We were laying perfect down the backside and I honestly thought I could take the leaders any time. He finished strongly, but so did the winner."

An Act was lapped on pace-setter Sure Fire through a 22⅘ first quarter, but Castaneda was able to rate him about a length off the lead on the backstretch.

An Act and Crystal Water, who had been racing third, moved together mid-way around the far turn, but the favorite was not gaining an inch on the winner through the final yards.

This was the fifth victory in seven career starts for An Act, a $100,000 yearling purchase. The $31,600 he earned Saturday increased his bankroll to $179,150.

Trainer Ron McAnally said afterward that he doubted An Act would be shipped east for the Belmont Stakes.

"He acted like he loves the turf when he worked on it last week and I would hope to run him next in the Will Rogers."

That $50,000 race will be on the grass Sunday, May 30.

The Hollypark greensward will be the scene of battle today, when 10 handicap stars clash in the $50,000 Lakeside Handicap.

Winds Of Thought and Pass The Glass, who finished heads apart in the recent $111,500 Cenury Handicap, head a potent Lakeside field that also includes Top Crowd, Zanthe, El Tarta, Riot In Paris, Antique and Victorian Prince, all stakes winners on the turf during their careers.

Winds Of Thought and Antique will race coupled as the Ross Gilbert-owned entry, while Mrs. Marjorie L. Everett's El Tarta and Mary J. Bradley and Charlie Whittingham's Riot In Paris will race as the Whittingham-trained entry.

With 11 starters, the race will carry a net purse to the winner of $34,600.

Winds Of Thought was the longest priced horse on the board in the Century, but came flying in the stretch to out-photo Pass The Glass. The son of Hail To Reason previously had taken a classified race over the Lakeside turf course and has more than justified the $115,000 that trainer Evan Jackson advised owner Ross Gilbert to spend for the horse last fall at the Rokeby Stable dispersal sale.

Antique, a gelding which Gilbert purchased privately from Daniel Schwartz last summer, subsequently won the Cortez Handicap over the local lawn and has ranked as one of California's better turf runners since.

Most recently, Antique finished strongly to be second behind King Pellinore in a division of the Inglewood Handicap.

Pass The Glass also was a Rokeby castoff, although trainer Tom Pratt didn't have to go six figures to obtain the son of Buckpasser last year.

Pass The Glass was voted Hollypark's grass horse of the meeting last year while racing in Sarkowsky's orange and black silks. This year, the five year old horse won the Golden Gate Handicap in course record time before his narrow defeat in the Century.

Cerritos blanks Titans

Freshman rightfielder Jim Wilson went 3-for-3 and knocked in a run while Dave Patterson and Tim Olivarez collaborated on a four-hitter as Cerritos College defeated Fullerton State, 2-0, Saturday afternoon in a benefit game at Cerritos.

The Falcons, three-time defending state junior college champions, stifled a Fullerton State lineup that included seven former Cerritos College players. The Titans won the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title for the past two seasons and is the defending NCAA District 8 champ.

Wilson's first-inning RBI single provided Cerritos with a 1-0 lead. The Falcons gained an insurance run in the eighth when Art Harold led off with a triple and came home on a fielder's choice.

Patterson fired two-hit ball for five innings to improve his record to 14-1. Olivarez permitted only two hits in four innings of relief.

All-America Dan Boone absorbed the loss but was the day's biggest winner in that the game's proceeds went to his family, whose home was recently destroyed by fire. Boone, reliever Butch Black and catcher Andy Pasillas are all former Cerritos players.

Cerritos is now 33-4, Fullerton is 44-13.

Race roundup

BELMONT PARK — Lord Rebeau, the 5-2 second choice, took the lead at the head of the stretch and drew out to an impressive 6¼-length victory in the $57,550 Roseben Handicap. The time of 1:21 for the seven furlongs broke a stakes record that had stood for 14 years. Rose Net set the previous mark of 1:21⅘ in 1962. Honorable Miss, the 9-5 favorite and 121-pound highweight, came from last place at the head of the stretch to finish second by three-quarters of a length over Amerrico.

HAWTHORNE — Honey Mark, undefeated this year, scored his fifth victory with a galloping, nine-length decision in the $56,000 Chicago Handicap. Illiopolis finished second, Marauding third in the field of five. Honey Mark paid $2.80 for his easy win.

CALDER — Favored Controller Ike drove between horses in the final 40 yards to score in the $31,250 Julian Cole Memorial Handicap as Calder opened its summer season. One Moment closed fast to finish second, catching El Rosillo in the final stride.

GARDEN STATE — Majestic Light, ridden by Carlos Barrerra, came between horse throught the stretch and held off Chati to capture the $27,050 Cavalcade Handicap. Majestic Light raced the 1 1/16 miles on the grass in 1:43⅕ and paid $15.60 to his backers in the crowd of 20,292. Fabled Monarch finished third.

AK-SAR-BEN — Favored Real Value won the $36,425 Ak-Sar-Ben Handicap by a length over Roman Zipper before a crowd of 26,412. Chance Landing was third. Real Value paid $5.60 for the win.

PREAKNESS—

It was also the biggest money victory in Lively's riding career. The 34-year-old graduate of Oklahoma quarterhorse tracks once had won a $110,000, 5½-furlong thoroughbred stakes at Sunland Park in New Mexico. The name of that horse was Admiral's Blade.

But he'll be longer remembered for Elocutionist.

ELOCUTIONIST, rated in good striking position, eased out between rivals leaving the backstretch, circled horses four-wide entering the stretch and wrested command near the furlong marker. He was brushed by BOLD FORBES a few strides later but gamely drew away under strong left-handed whipping. PLAY THE RED, unhurried while saving ground early, drifted out brushing with HONEST PLEASURE when rallying inside horses in early stretch and continued with good courage. BOLD FORBES quickly took command away from the gate, drifted out slightly entering the first turn and drew clear while racing a few feet out from the rail entering the backstretch. He swerved out in early stretch, came out under left-handed whipping brushing ELOCUTIONIST just inside the furlong marker and gradually weakened. BOLD FORBES returned with a cut on his left rear coronet band. COJAK, away in good order, was rated along the rail, eased out leaving the backstretch, gave way slightly behind a wall of horses entering the stretch but continued willingly outside rivals. HONEST PLEASURE, hand-urged shortly after the start, was taken under tight restraint when moving abreast of BOLD FORBES reaching the wire the first time. He was carried out slightly into the first turn, urged in pursuit of the pacesetter as that one drew clear, and brushed with PLAY THE RED when drifting in slightly when weakening in early stretch. LIFE'S HOPE made a mild bid outside rivals leaving the backstretch and weakened.

VIGORS was off slowly and raced unhurried along the outside, advanced through traffic into the final turn to reach contention, swung to the outside to challenge for the lead, took command and drew away in full stride. KENTITO saved ground early to prompt the pace, was sent up between horses on the backstretch to challenge for the lead nearing the final turn, held a slim edge in the drive but could not contend with the winner. SKY CHARGER set the pace from along the rail, weakened slightly in the drive and finished on even terms with PETER VADNAIS. The latter forced the pace early from between horses, dropped to the rail to save ground to the stretch and lacked renewed energy.

AN ACT broke cleanly and raced up under his own courage to press SURE FIRE into the first turn, continued to apply pressure under a snug hold to the final turn, was permitted to drift out nearing the stretch while taking command then responded to urging in the lane to impressively hold CRYSTAL WATER. The latter moved up along the outside to stalk the leaders under restraint, offered his best bid on the final turn, was fanned out a bit into the stretch but could make no impact on the winner. SURE FIRE set the pace to the stretch then lacked the needed response. REDLANDER failed to enter contention. AMANO moved up inside on the backstretch but had nothing left when the test came.

PERSONALITY KNIGHT dropped inside early to race patiently to the final turn, maneuvered to the outside to launch his bid into the stretch, took command late and held in full stride. TREVI was always a forward factor, moved up to challenge on the final turn, forged to the front into the stretch, ducked out just past midstretch and held for the place. After an objection from the rider of AMERICAN SCOUT, the stewards reviewed the films and disqualified TREVI III for interference in the stretch and placed him sixth. ROYAL RETLA lacked speed to the final turn, caught his stride from the outside and finished willingly.
Scratched—Noble Lark.

RUTHERFORD HAS LEAD FOR POLE—

Most drivers expressed dissatisfaction with their attempts.

Larry (Boom Boom) Cannon, a licensed barber and the recorder of deeds in Vermillk on County, Ill., made the day's first qualifying run at 181.388.

Cannon was followed on the track by defending champion Bobby Unser, who pulled off with mechanical troubles after one lap at 187.032, as time trials began about 3½ hours behind schedule.

Cannon, who qualified last in the 33-car field in 1974 in his only other Indy 500 appearance, got the honor of being the first qualifier when the man who had drawn the No. 1 position, Dick Simon, elected to try later.

A stiff breeze and new power restrictions enacted this year were credited with holding speeds generally below last year when it took at least 181.754 to get into the lineup.

Continual rains Friday night and Saturday morning left the track soaked until almost noon, when an armada of emergency vehicles and a jet-powered blower succeeded in drying out the surface of the famed 2½-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway oval.

As the weather cleared, a crowd estimated at well over 100,000 poured onto the speedway grounds to watch the race for the coveted No. 1 starting position and the $10,000 prize and public adulation that go with it.

A 30-minute practice session prior to time trials ended abruptly when rookie Spike Gehlhausen, the top rookie in Indy style racing last year, smacked the outside wall in the south short chute and extensively damaged his McLaren. Gehlhausen, at 21 the youngest driver entered, was uninjured.

The one- and four-lap records are held by Rutherford, clocked at 199.071 for 2½ miles and 198.413 over 10 miles in winning the pole position in 1973.

Foyt won the pole in 1974 and 1975 with speeds of 191.632 and 193.976, reflecting a series of rules changes since 1973 that have been designed to hold speeds down at the 67-year-old track.

The pole position has traditionally not been a good place to win the race from. Only eight pole starters have gone on to victory, the last being Al Unser in 1970.

Economy doesn't cheap.

Many Peugeot parts are forged instead of stamped, and that's not cheap.

Peugeot's patented shock absorbers are built to last at least 60,000 miles, and that's not cheap.

And some 46,000 points on every single Peugeot are subject to rigorous quality control before it leaves the factory. That's not cheap, either.

In short, Peugeot is an economical car specifically because it's not a cheap one. Because with a better car in the beginning, you save in the end.

USC WINS PAC-8—

Cal's Ed Miller, who led the decathlon after nine events, was badly beaten in the 1,500-meter run by UCLA's Steve Alexander. Alexander won the grueling 10-event, two-day contest with a total of 7,386 points to Miller's 7,369.

Kenyan John Ngeno won his fifth Pac-8 championship for Washington State in the 5,000 meters at 13:51.2.

Jason Meister of UCLA high jumped 7-1 to take that event. His mark was only a half-inch under the Pac-8 record. Lee Braach, Washington State, also jumped 7-1 for second place.

L.B. Masters, LBCC in VB tourney

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (Special)—The Long Beach Masters and Long Beach City College are among 90 teams who will compete in the week-long U.S. National Volleyball Championships being held at Union College.

The Masters are defending champions in the senior division, which has a 16-team draw.

LBCC will compete in the six-team collegiate division. Other college entries are Tulane, Rice, Penn State, Cornell and Kellogg Community College.

Competition in the 40-team men's open and 28-team women's open begins Monday. The seniors take center stage on Thursday while the colleges launch play on Friday. The tournament concludes Saturday night.

Wolfsberger 'relaxes' at Olympic Trials
Frantic, hectic life of a gymnast

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

For Leslie Wolfsberger, who trains with Scats in Westminster, this weekend's Olympic gymnastic finals at the L.A. Sports Arena must have seemed almost relaxing compared with her experience at the International Gymnastic Meet in Hamburg, Germany.

The 17-year-old Torrance High School junior, who is a member of the 1976 U. S. National Team, received a phone call only hours before competition and told to catch the first plane for Europe.

It seems that Kathy Howard of Oklahoma had scratched from the meet with a broken toe. This left the first alternate to take Kathy's place and Leslie to move into the alternate position.

Upon arrival in Germany, Leslie learned that alternates would not be allowed on the competition floor after a brief warm-up. So she settled down to watch and wait.

Then minutes prior to the competition, Debbie Wilcox, a youngster from Colorado who is the only girl in the world to attempt a front sommersault on the balance beam, injured her ankle during the final warm-up period and was forced to withdraw.

With 30 seconds to spare and no warm-up at all, Leslie found herself running to join the USA contingent as they marched into the arena to compete.

For Leslie it was a real challenge. Her performance was needed to give the team a finish strong enough to qualify the U.S. for Olympic competition this summer in Montreal.

Leslie came through with a remarkable set of scores to place 11th all around among the 75 women from England, West Germany, Poland, Bulgaria, Italy, Australia, the Netherlands and Cuba. The U.S. took first in the meet.

Some younger Scats members added to their laurels a week ago at the Junior National Gymnastics Championship, sponsored by the U.S. Gymnastic Federation, in Eugene, Ore.

The six-girl team, ranging in age from 12 to 14, took first with 216.425, edging the Diablos of Walnut Creek, which had a 216 score.

Members competing were Andra Turner, who finished seventh; Colleen Michaels, 10th; Donna Kemp, 11th; Lori Wright, 12th; Sheri Donaldson, 13th, and Ann McCabe; who fell from the beam and finished out of the top 13.

LONG BEACH City College swimmers didn't finish in the top three in any event, but they bettered times in every race they entered during SCCCIAC finals at East Los Angeles College.

Mary Hammond led the way, finishing fourth in the 50 butterfly with a time of 28.84. Then against 108 entrants in the 50 freestyle, Mary with finished fifth in 26.13. In her other two events, the 100 individual medley and the 100 butterfly, the LBCC swimmer clocked 1:06.58 and 1:06.3.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Janis Cook, who qualified in three events, was 14th in the 200 individual medley with 2:40.34, ninth in the 100 breastroke at 1:18.06 and eleventh in the 50 breaststroke with 35.83.

Janet Balter, Mary, Janis and Becky Thomas swam the medley relay in 2:07.8 to finish 11th, and then returned for the freestyle relay (with Susie Neumaus in the lineup instead of Becky) to capture 12th with a 1:52.98.

IT WAS a hard 5-2 loss for Sally Monsoor's LBCC tennis team during playoffs for the league championship against Golden West College.

The two teams had earned victories against each other during the regular season. LBCC wins were recorded by Chris Schrubbe and the doubles team of Jani Kuhn and Betsy Hose, who had an in-progress game forfeited by Golden West after that school was assured of the title.

Previously undefeated Marilyn Pruett lost her first match of the season, 6-4, 6-0, 6-0.

RANCHO LOS CERRITOS
BOARD OF REALTORS

Realtor of the week

MEDFORD "MED" W. COGBURN

Moving to California in 1948 with his wife, Carrie Jo, Mr. Medford "Med" W. Cogburn soon became known as a respected realtor and citizen interested in the progress and development of our Southern California communities.

Pioneering from one of the first Real Estate offices in this area, Mr. Cogburn now owns and operates his own modern "complete service" real estate business centrally located at 10001 E. Artesia, Bellflower, staffed with 16 experienced personnel. Proudly serving the community for 28 years, his business offers complete well-established and reputable services including insurance, income tax guidance and assistances. Many years have seen the consumation of thousands of sales and investments varying from acreage and subdivisions to income property and residential homes.

Years of conscientious civic dedication display Mr. Cogburn's outstanding service record; President of the Bellflower District Board of Realtors in 1953 & 1962 (member since 1948); President of Chamber of Commerce in 1956 (member since 1950); President of Community Chest in 1955; President of Bellflower Kiwanis in 1959 (member since 1955, boasting a perfect attendance record for 20 years); member of Bellflower Junior Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors and Chairman of the first Home Decoration contest, still in existence today; an organizer of Bellflower YMCA; charter member of Bellflower BPOE club lodge No. 2003; and recently active in organizing the Bellflower Savings & Loan In Organization.

One of our leading Southern California Realtors, Mr. Cogburn was voted Realtor of the Year in 1956, and in 1975 was presented the first Lifetime Membership Award for his many years of hard work for his community from the Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors.

"Med" and his lovely wife, Carrie Jo, are orginally from North California and have made Bellflower their "hometown." With his loyal support, Mr. Cogburn has devoted his interests and many talents to preserving community life and striving to better the communities of Southern California, through his real estate integrity and civic pride.

(See Page 4)

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

It's Emmy time again—who'll be the winners?

And, now, it's Emmy time.

Oscar and Tony and numerous others have had their evening in the spotlight, and now it's time for the major television awards program of the season.

The 28th annual Emmy Awards ceremonies will be televised live from the Shubert Theatre at the ABC Entertainment Center in Los Angeles at 6 p.m. Monday on Channel 7 and the ABC network.

Mary Tyler Moore and John Denver will host the program, and a number of celebrities will participate as performers or as presenters of awards.

ABC's "Rich Man, Poor Man," which is in the "limited series" category, dominated the Emmy nominations with 23, including a record 13 for acting.

ABC's "Eleanor and Franklin," in the "outstanding special — drama or comedy" category, was second in nominations with 16.

CBS' "M-A-S-H" with 11 nominations and CBS' "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" with 10 were the leaders among the weekly series in nominations.

Edward Asner was nominated both as outstanding supporting actor in a comedy series ("Mary Tyler Moore Show") and as outstanding lead actor for a single appearance in a drama or comedy series ("Rich Man, Poor Man").

Here are the major categories and nominees:

Comedy Series: "All in the Family," "Mary Tyler Moore Show," "M-A-S-H," "Barney Miller," "Welcome Back, Kotter."

Drama Series: "Baretta," "Columbo," "Police Story," "The Streets of San Francisco."

Dozen youngsters new Mousketeers

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"Mickey Mouse ... Mickey Mouse ... Forever let us hold his banner high ..."

Soon a new chorus of young voices will be singing the anthem that is remembered fondly by the generation that grew up in the 1950s. The Mickey Mouse Club, which staged a comeback with reruns across the country last year, has a brand-new set of Mouseketeers.

The new dozen differs from the original Mouseketeers in two ways. There is more of a geographical mix; new members come from St. Louis, Fort Worth, Miami and Vancouver, B.C., as well as the Los Angeles area. There is racial balance; two are blacks, one is Mexican-American, one is Chinese-Canadian.

Ages range from 7 to 13 with most of them in latter range. They are an engaging bunch, bright and alive without precocity.

"We want to avoid the slick pro, and that's why we looked beyond Hollywood," said coproducer Mike Wuergler.

"We advertised for applicants in Seattle, Atlanta, Boston, Cincinnati and Denver and held auditions in those cities. We also interviewed and auditioned in New York and Chicago, at Disneyland and Walt Disney World, and in Dallas and Phoenix."

Out of the hundreds of hopefuls came the final 12:

— William (Pop) Attmore II, 11, Mission Hills, Calif. Sang and danced in Las Vegas at 4, appeared in commercials, variety shows with Cher and Ken Berry, "The Brady Bunch," new Disney film "Treasure of Mateeumbe," nicknamed because he loves soda pop.

THE ORIGINAL MOUSEKETEERS

— Scott Craig, 12, Lakewood, Calif. Has performed on variety show for clubs and hospitals, appeared on commercials, TV specials with Lily Tomlin and Dick Cavett.

— Benita Di Giampaola (Nita Dee), 9, Lakewood, Calif. Has done jazz, ballet and tap in school talent shows and performances at Tehachapi prison and Los Angeles County Fair.

— Mindy Feldman, 7, Chatsworth, Calif. The youngest Mouseketeer, she has been in TV commercials.

— Angel Florez, 12, Hawaiian Gardens, Calif. His only professional experience: a soft-drink commercial and "Tony and Pony" kids' show.

— Allison Fonte, 12, Buena Park, Calif. Started in commercials and "Juvenile Jury," has appeared in light operas, writes own music.

— Shawnte Northcutte, 12, Los Angeles. Dances, sings, plays piano, has been in 10 commercials, "Bionic Woman," "Marcus Welby, M.D."

— Kelly Parsons, 12, Miami, Fla. Has modeled in clothing ads and commercials, has performed in ceremonies at the Orange Bowl.

— Julie Piekarski, 12, St. Louis, Mo. Appeared in telethons and children's shows, performed with Municipal Opera in "Wizard of Oz" and "Snow White."

— Todd Turguand, 11, Los Angeles. Plays stepson on "Rhoda," has appeared with Carol Burnett in commercials and stage plays.

— Lisa Whelchel, 12, Fort Worth, Tex. A ventriloquist, plays classical guitar, appeared on radio and TV commercials, in Dallas-Fort Worth musicals with Van Johnson, Yvonne DeCarlo.

— Curtis Wong, 13, Vancouver, B.C. Has appeared in TV commercials.

ALL WILL report to the Disney studio in Burbank on May 24 for the start of rehearsals. Production on the first 85 of 150 scheduled shows will begin June 21 and end late in September.

"The new series will go on the air in January," said Wuergler.

Bicentennial concert to be offered by PBS

By GEORGE MAKSIAN
New York News

NEW YORK — A concert of American music, featuring Andre Kostelanetz and the National Symphony Orchestra with violinist Yehudi Menuhin, will be televised live from Wolf Trap in Vienna, Va., by the Public Broadcasting Service Saturday, July 3.

The concert, part of the nation's Bicentennial celebration, will include Bruch's Violin Concerto No. 1 in G Minor, a medley of tunes from "Show Boat," and the premiere of a new work by composer Alan Hovhaness, commissioned by Menuhin for the broadcast.

In addition, there will be fireworks and an all-American countdown to midnight by Astronaut Neil Armstrong.

The program will be taped for retelecasting in the fall as part of PBS' "In Performance at Wolf Trap" TV series. There will be four other programs taped during the summer for airing next season.

These include: "The World Series of Jazz" (June 27), featuring the first appearance together of Billy Eckstine, Earl Hines and Dizzy Gillespie; "Cleo Laine, John Dankworth & Ensemble" (July 2), presenting an evening of pop and jazz songs; "Mikhail Baryshnikov and Gelsey Kirkland Pas de Deux" (July 20 and 21), and Verdi's "La Traviata," starring Beverly Sills and Richard Fredricks (Aug. 12 and 14), with Julius Rudel conducting.

GLEN CAMPBELL stars in a musical tour of Australia, with Olivia Newton-John as his guest star, in "Down Home, Down Under," a variety special on Ch. 2 at 10 p.m. Thursday.

In addition to starring in the opera, Miss Sills will introduce each of the five programs. The fall series also will include 11 repeats from past seasons. David Prowitt is the producer of the series.

Novelist subject of film

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1959, there was a flick called "Beloved Infidel," based on Hollywood columnist Sheilah Graham's book about her romance with F. Scott Fitzgerald in the last, sad years of the writer's life.

On Sunday, ABC will have another go at basically the same story with "F. Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood," starring Jason Miller as the writer, Tuesday Weld as his wife, Zelda, and Julia Foster as Miss Graham. (It airs at 9 tonight on Channel 7 in Los Angeles.)

It differs from the original in that it contrasts the Fitzgeralds' arrival in Hollywood at the peak of his success in 1927 with his return there 10 years later, when his popularity was gone, his wife was in a sanitarium and he was broke, battling the bottle and grateful for any work.

THIS TWO-HOUR TV movie was written by James Costigan, an Emmy Award-winner who for my dough has an annoying tendency to drag out scenes and let his characters chatter on interminably and ever so poetically.

But, by golly, he curbs this tendency for the most part in Sunday's effort, which features an unexpectedly strong performance by Miss Weld and downright brilliant work by Miller and Miss Foster.

JASON MILLER plays F. Scott Fitzgerald and Tuesday Weld portrays his wife, Zelda, in the new TV movie "F. Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood," on Ch. 7 at 9 p.m. Sunday.

Much of the show is a brisk, well-edited example of the use of juxtaposition for dramatic effect, cutting from the boozy, confident scenes of 1927 to the misery and despair of a decade later, then back again.

In an opening scene, the Fitzgeralds, fresh from the success of his novel "The Great Gatsby," arrive by train in Hollywood. They're advised by a studio publicist a gang of reporters and photographers are outside on the platform waiting to see them. The novelist asks what to tell them.

"Tell them you have the highest regard for the cinema, but, confidentially, you're here for the money," laughs his Alabama-born wife, doing her whimsical Southern belle bit in their first-class train compartment.

Ten years later he arrives alone, traveling peasant-class.

It sets the pattern for things to come, the hard, desperate work of Fitzgerald set against the alcoholic glory years when he and Zelda were wont to gather up purses and watches of guests at a party and toss them in a pot of boiling water.

Award winner

NBC News correspondent Tom Pettit is the only network television winner of the 1975 Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Award for Outstanding Coverage of the Problems of the Disadvantaged. Pettit won for his "NBC Nightly News" series of reports on feeding the poor.

The award was presented at a luncheon in Washington, D.C.

People don't expect to get rich on Social Security. But neither do they think it'll bring them to this.

Yet these people may actually be the lucky ones.

By the time the rest of us are ready to collect, the system may be totally bankrupt. This year alone it'll pay out $4 billion more than it takes in.

Be sure to watch Channel 7 tonight when reporter Geoff Smith begins his five-part Eyewitness Closeup on Social Security.

As bleak as the future may seem, we want to help you get all you're entitled to.

And who knows? With enough active concern, maybe we can find ways to put the security back in the system.

SPECIAL

ABC AFTERSCHOOL SPECIAL (7), 4:00 p.m. — "Dear Lovey Hart (I Am Desperate!)" Meegan King, Susan Lawrence, Stephen Liss, Elyssa Davalos. The story of a high school newspaper editor who launches an advice to the lovelorn column to attract more readers.

LONG BEACH youths Jim Dengerd (left) and Steve Berry demonstrate to Arte Johnson the use of special effects in the film "Zap," to be shown on Ch. 28's "Young Filmmakers' Festival" special Wednesday at 8 p.m. Dengerd and Berry are part of the Lightning Factory Movie Workshop in Long Beach that made the film. It's about a ray gun that can reduce cars and humans to toy size. Johnson hosts the TV special.

Kissinger on 'Today'

An interview with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, filmed by Barbara Walters in the State Department in Washington, will be presented on the "Today" program Monday morning, May 17, on the NBC Television Network.

BOBBY RAY HICKS of Fullerton is draped in a winner's wreath to mark his record-breaking achievements as a contestant on NBC's "Celebrity Sweepstakes," which airs weekdays at 9 a.m. on Ch. 4. In five appearances on the game show, Hicks picked up prizes totaling an all-time high for the program of $37,543, including $33,150 in cash. Panel member Carol Wayne shares his excitement.

The BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

MIRACLES HAVE CEASED NO. 4

$5000.00 Reward for one Bonified Miracle as the one we read about in Acts 3

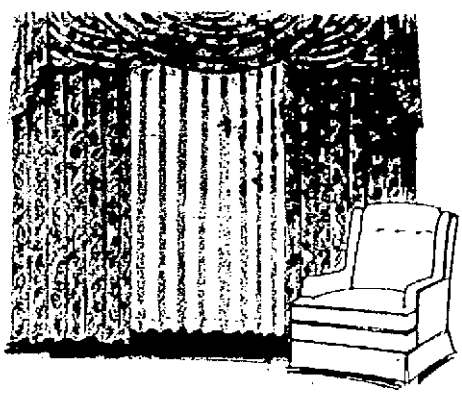

We will provide the person to be healed. We will have this person examined by two doctors in Long Beach who are members of the AMA before and after the "healing." If they, in fact, testify that the person is healed, we will provide the $5000.00 reword. We are serious about this. If miracles are still in existence today, then everyone should know about it.

DIAL A MESSAGE
Yes, you can dial 421-0309 and get a different 3-minute message each day. We hope you will take advantage of this. Tell your friends about it.

FREE CORRESPONDENCE COURSE
The Studebaker Road Church of Christ is offering a free Bible correspondence course. You can use this Bible correspondence course in your own study of the Bible in the privacy of your home — without cost or obligation. The Bible correspondence course consists of eight lessons, and will be mailed to you upon request.

SPECIAL

"ROYCE" (2), 8:00 p.m. — World Premiere Western. A strong silent man who has lived with Commanche Indians and learned well how to deal with the harsh realities of 1870 frontier life makes a dangerous journey with a woman and her two children who have been abandoned in the Kansas wasteland. Stars Robert Forster.

MOVIE (7), 9:00 p.m. — "You'll Like My Mother." A house of madness becomes a terrifying maternity ward for a pregnant young woman trapped by a snowstorm. Stars Patty Duke, Rosemary Murphy, Richard Thomas.

JACK NICHOLSON and Barbra Streisand share a romantic moment — and a lot of problems — in "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," the Alan Jay Lerner musical film making its TV debut at 8:30 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 7.

Candy Bergen on Ali show

Candice Bergen, a film actress who has exhibited a high degree of professionalism as a photo-journalist on the "Today" program on NBC-TV, will join commentators Joe Garagiola, Dick Enberg and Larry Merchant as a photo essayist for NBC-TV's coverage of the heavyweight championship boxing match between champion Muhammad Ali and European titlist Richard Dunn, Monday night May 24.

The 15-round bout, which will be colorcast, live, via satellite, from Munich, Germany, will offer Miss Bergen her first opportunity to cover a championship fight, or any fight for that matter.

TV MOVIE TIPS

TODAY

"Pink Panther," 3 p.m., Ch. 9 (1964). David Niven, Peter Sellers. Priceless gem is sought by wanted jewel thief whose accomplice is the wife of a French police inspector. Thief and his nephew romance the beautiful owner of the jewel.

"The Parent Trap," 7 p.m., Ch. 4. Hayley Mills, in a dual role, portrays teen-age identical twins who conspire to maneuver their estranged parents back together again. Brian Keith, Maureen O'Hara, Charles Ruggles and Una Merkel also star.

"F. Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood," 9 p.m., Ch. 7. Jason Miller, Tuesday Weld, Julia Foster. The drama of the brilliant but tragic jazz-age novelists' life from the height of his success to its bitter aftermath.

MONDAY

"Marilyn" 3:30 p.m., Ch. 7 (1963). Rock Hudson narrates this tribute to Marilyn Monroe which includes selections from 15 of her films, including "The Seven Year Itch," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "How To Marry a Millionaire" and her last unfinished film; "Something's Got To Give."

"The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams," 8 p.m., Ch. 4 (1974). Accused of a crime he did not commit, a fur trapper ventures into the western mountain wilderness, finding solace in a life far away from civilization and companionship with wild animals that had never seen a man before. Dan Haggerty stars.

"The Plainsman," 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1936). Gary Cooper, Charles Bickford, Jean Arthur. Post Civil War: Wild Bill Hickock, Buffalo Bill Cody and Calamity Jane set out to get the white man selling guns to the Indians leading to Custer's massacre.

TUESDAY

"Niagara," 3:30 p.m., Ch. 7 (1953) Marilyn Monroe, Joseph Cotten, Jean Peters. A two-timing wife brings her husband, a war-shocked veteran, to Niagara Falls and plots with her lover to have him pushed over the edge.

"Swingin' Summer," 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2 (1965). Teen-age drama, starring James Stacy, William A. Wellman Jr., and Quinn O'Hara. A group of teenagers, financed by the wealthy father of one of them, take over a place in Lake Arrowhead, refurnish it and open it up for the rock music crowd.

WEDNESDAY

"For Whom the Bell Tolls," 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1943). Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, Akim Tamiroff. Based on Hemingway novel: Story of a group of Spanish loyalists and an American adventurer who pledge to destroy a bridge during the Spanish Civil War.

THURSDAY

"Shark Kill," 8 p.m. Ch. 4. Richard Yniguez and Phillip Clark star as Cabo Mendoza and Rick Dayner, two ocean-oriented adventurers who sail in search of a man-killing great white shark in a 90-minute World Premiere presentation.

"The Pride of the Yankees," 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1942). Gary Cooper, Teresa Wright, Walter Brennan. Biographical-life of Lou Gehrig, the "iron man" of baseball who was also a fine and humble man.

"The Dark Side of Innocence," 9:30 p.m., Ch. 4. A 90-minute drama of today's American family, as three generations attempt to cope with the stresses of modern-day morality. World Premiere presentation. Joanna Pettet, Anne Archer, John Anderson, Kim Hunter and Lawrence Casey star.

FRIDAY

"Stolen Hours," 8 p.m., Ch. 9 (1963). Susan Hayward, Michael Craig. Wealthy American playgirl, suffering from a brain tumor, falls in love with the doctor who operates on her, and although she discovers that her illness will return, they marry and she has months of happiness before her time is up.

"You'll Like My Mother," 9 p.m., Ch. 7 (1972). Patty Duke, Rosemary Murphy, Richard Thomas. A house of madness becomes a terrifying maternity ward for a pregnant young woman trapped by a snowstorm.

"The Missing Are Deadly," 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2. Ed Nelson, Leonard Nimoy. Jeff Margolin, the emotionally disturbed young son of a research scientist, takes a rat from his father's lab, not knowing the animal is infected with a deadly virus, and leaves on a camping trip.

SATURDAY

"On A Clear Day You Can See Forever," 8:30 p.m., Ch. 7 (1970). Barbra Streisand, Yves Montand, Bob Newhart, Jack Nicholson. A young woman is accidentally hypnotized in a psychiatry class and becomes a noblewoman who lived in England in the 1880's. She discovers she has lived 13 times.

"The Call of the Wild," 9 p.m., Ch. 4. Jack London's classic story of two men driven by gold fever to battle the elements in the frozen Klondike. John Beck and Bernard Fresson star.

"The World of Susie Wong," 11:30 p.m., Ch. 2 (1960). William Holden, Nancy Kwan, Sylvia Sims, Michael Wilding. American artist in Hong Kong, falls for a beautiful Asian girl.

Truman Capote on Carson show

Famed novelist Truman Capote will make his 22nd guest appearance on NBC Television Network's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," Monday night, May 24.

Also appearing that night with Capote, when Barbara Walters is the guest host, will be Ray Bolger, Ann Landers and Eydie Gorme.

ADLAI STEVENSON ALICIA PATTERSON

Q. The late Adlai Stevenson—was he a great lover who at various times made love to Alicia Patterson, founder of Newsday; Dorothy Fosdick, daughter of the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick and a member of the State Department; and Marietta Tree of the United Nations?—L. T., Washington, D.C.

A. According to John Bartlow Martin, author of "Adlai Stevenson of Illinois": "Moreover, he [Stevenson] was seriously in love with a woman who was married to someone else. She was Alicia Patterson, the third wife of Harry F. Guggenheim, member of the Guggenheim copper family . . . founder in 1940 with his wife of Newsday, a Long Island daily newspaper." Stevenson was also fond of Dorothy Fosdick and Marietta Tree, but apparently the great love of his life was the late Alicia Patterson.

Q. Now that he is dead, I am sure Hollywood will make half a dozen pictures on the life of Howard Hughes. Who will play Hughes? How about Steve McQueen?—Helen Levin, Bridgeport, Conn.

A. David Wolper, a producer who specializes in nonfiction films, has purchased the rights to Clifford Irving's "The Billionaire." Irving sold the book to McGraw-Hill for $750,000 as the autobiography of Howard Hughes. It was denounced by Hughes as a "hoax" and Irving was imprisoned for 17½ months. McQueen would make a good Hughes, but Wolper's film has not yet been cast. Actor Warren Beatty has plans to star in another version of the Hughes story.

Q. Is Walter Annenberg, who owns TV Guide, Richard Nixon's best friend?—D. L., San Clemente, Cal.

A. Walter Annenberg, who was Nixon's appointee as U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain, is one of Mr. Nixon's close friends, but not nearly so close as Charles "Bebe" Rebozo and other Nixon cronies.

Q. It is my understanding that Robert Redford is now the highest-paid motion picture actor in the world, receiving $100,000 a day. Is this true?—Theresa Klein, Staten Island, N.Y.

A. Producer Joe Levine reportedly is paying Redford $2 million for 20 days of acting in his forthcoming film "A Bridge Too Far," the story of an unsuccessful parachute drop in Arnhem, Holland, in World War II.

Q. I notice that President Gerald Ford writes left-handed. How come he plays tennis and golf right-handed?—Mrs. Lee Ayres, Pinehurst, N.C.

A. He wrote left-handed as a boy, learned to play tennis and golf right-handed as a man.

Q. Is it true that the brain of Italian dictator Benito Mussolini is on file in the Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D.C.?—Helen Burns, Baltimore, Md.

A. A segment of Mussolini's brain was obtained by a U.S. Army psychiatrist in 1945 after Mussolini's execution by Italian partisans. It was delivered to Walter Reed Army Hospital for examination. Mussolini's widow, Rachele, insisted that the U.S. return the brain segment to her. Finally in March, 1966, the U.S. government agreed. It sent back the brain fragment in the State Department diplomatic pouch.

Q. I would like to know how much Dick Cavett paid Mae West for appearing with him on his CBS-TV show?—Maude Robinson, Salt Lake City, Utah.

A. Miss West was paid $30,000 for her appearance on the Cavett program.

DICK CAVETT AND MAE WEST ON HIS SHOW

SOLZHENITSYN AND WIFE NATALYA

Q. The Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn — isn't he fundamentally a fascist?—Ron Lovell, Chicago.

A. Solzhenitsyn believes in and will support passionately any force or ideology opposed to the Soviet Union. His hatred of Soviet communism is so visceral and pervasive that he exalts Francisco Franco's Spain and denigrates Gerald Ford's America. He loses sight of the fact that were it not for American reaction to Soviet oppression he would not be a free man today. He serves a purpose, however, in advising the West never to trust the Soviets.

Q. How old is Lowell Thomas?—D. Roth, Albany, N.Y.

A. Thomas is 84.

Q. Several years ago Mick Jagger, the rock and roll star, made an out-of-court settlement on a paternity suit brought against him by actress Marsha Hunt. What's happened to Marsha Hunt and the child she claimed was Jagger's?—T. F., Providence, R. I.

A. Marsha Hunt, who starred in the stage play "Hair," lives with daughter Karis, 5, in London, recently appeared in a London musical, "Mardi Gras." She claims that Jagger never visits their daughter, but she figures it's his loss.

Q. How old is comic Jerry Lewis, and how many children does he have? How many times married? —Alice Wertheim, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Lewis, 50, is the father of six sons, is still married to his first wife, Patti.

Q. I have been told that Barbara Walters is having a difficult time finding a husband. Is this because she lisps and has a New York accent? Is any of this true? —K.T., Mt. Vernon, N.Y.

A. Barbara Walters has a New York accent, a yearly income of about $400,000, and a demanding career as a TV personality. These last two factors make difficult the finding of a husband, since many men are reluctant to be eclipsed financially and career-wise by a successful, ambitious wife.

Giscard d'Estaing

An Interview With the French President on the Eve of His Visit to the U.S.

by George Michaelson

President Giscard d'Estaing with his wife, Anne-Aymone, and their two dogs. The photo was shot in his Elysée Palace office, where he granted PARADE a one-hour interview. There's an apartment in the palace where Giscard stays about half the time. His wife and four children live in a house about a 10-minute drive away.

PARIS.

Nearly 30 years ago, a young, athletic-looking, rather adventurous Frenchman sold his motorcycle and bought a boat ticket to America. For six months he traveled by car and train in Canada and the United States, supporting himself by teaching French and writing articles for a newspaper back in France. And while at first he didn't speak a word of English, apart from "hot dog" and "hamburger," he managed to teach himself enough so he could at least get by. In the end, when he returned home, he took with him, he now says, "a lasting impression of the U.S. where, unlike postwar France, everyone was free to buy what they wanted to buy, go where they wanted to go, do what they wanted to do; where, in a word, everyone had absolute freedom."

Tomorrow, Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, now 50 years old but still athletic-looking, is to pay another visit to America—this time as President of France. As one of the first official visitors to come celebrate the Bicentennial, he and his wife, Anne-Aymone, will spend this week visiting Washington, D.C., Yorktown, Va., Philadelphia, Houston and New Orleans (their four children, who are in high school and college, are not expected to accompany them). In addition the French President will address Congress—in his now-excellent English.

'The right thing to do'

"The main point I plan to make is that this Bicentennial year is a good time for our two countries to think about where we have been and where we are today," Giscard told PARADE on the eve of his departure for the U.S., as he sat along with his wife in his elegant office at the Elysée Palace. "As you remember, France fought alongside the American Colonies against the British. We did this not so we could pat ourselves on the back two centuries later, but because it was the right thing to do."

As it happens, the Bicentennial is actually something of a family celebration for Giscard d'Estaing. A distant cousin, Count Charles d'Estaing, commanded the first French expedition supporting the American Colonies and was wounded in battle. Thus, when the French first couple go to Yorktown to commemorate the spot where French and American forces met in the campaign against the British, the occasion will take on a personal as well as an historical significance. Adds Giscard: "What we will be honoring is the fact that after two centuries, our people still share the ideals of freedom and independence, and that we continue to travel down parallel paths, through thick and thin."

As America's oldest ally, France has indeed remained with us on a "parallel path, through thick and thin"; one has only to think of the two world wars in which we fought together. But, as Giscard is well aware, it was only a decade ago that this historical connection was at its thinnest. Throughout the 1960's, under the leadership of Charles de Gaulle, France was constantly acting in ways that American leaders found irritating—or "galling," as it was sometimes put. Against American wishes, de Gaulle insisted upon developing France's own nuclear arsenal (force de frappe); he withdrew France from the NATO command structure and had NATO forces quit France; and he never let up in his criticism of U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

In de Gaulle's cabinet

"These were not the easiest years," admits Giscard, who at the time was de Gaulle's Minister of Finance. "But today, I can frankly tell you that the state of relations between France and the United States is better than it has ever been. We have no bilateral disputes between us. So when I meet President Ford on this visit, unlike what usually happens when two heads of state meet, there will be no major disagreements to iron out."

At this point, Giscard says, there are only minor differences of opinion, ones that certainly can be managed. For instance, there is some disagreement about how our countries should relate to the Third World and certain Communist nations. (France has taken a different stance, as in their greater support of Palestinian nationalism and their recognition of Cuba and Vietnam.) And there is some concern on the French part over American willingness to fully support the Franco-British Concorde. ("Landing rights in the U.S. will be decisive for the success of our supersonic," states Giscard, who pointedly will be coming here on the Concorde.)

'We like Americans'

Then, reaching down to pet his black English hunting dog at his feet, Giscard quickly adds that these minor disagreements notwithstanding, he personally is satisfied with the good relations between our two countries. "Moreover, I can tell you that speaking for the French, we like the Americans. We do. I want to point this out because sometimes one hears of an irritation on the part of some French, say, towards the Americans. But this is never on the personal level. And really, in my opinion, what it comes down to is the historical fact that until the 18th century, France was the most important power in the known world. Now you are. You see, it's not always easy to give a hearty welcome to a young and influential newcomer."

That Giscard should see French-American relations in this perspective is, perhaps, not surprising. For, within the French political scene, he, too, is something of a "young and influential newcomer." In fact, when he was whisked into the Presidency two years ago (for a seven-year term), he became France's youngest head of state since Napoleon. And as one veteran French journalist told me: "Everything about Giscard smacks of youth, vigor and success. He's one of those enviable people who seem to come into the world with —how do you say it?—a silver spoon in the mouth."

As a matter of fact, Giscard was born with more advantages than most. One of five children of a wealthy and prominent economist, young Valéry was raised in the comfort of his family's countryside estate in Auvergne and their house in Paris. Throughout his youth he was surrounded by culture (he plays the piano and writes fiction). And, naturally, he was sent off to the best schools, where he gravitated, like his father, towards economics.

However, as with all other Frenchmen, rich or poor, when World War II came, he went and served: first, as a messenger and gun-runner in the French Resistance under the German occupation and then, after enlisting in the regular army, as an officer in the tank corps. He fought in France and North Africa and was severely wounded by a bazooka shell that struck his tank. Of his war experience, which brought him into contact with the gamut of his countrymen, he says it is an event in his life that deeply influenced and tempered him.

Career in government

After the war Giscard finished college and then went off on his solo jaunt to America. ("My family insisted I pay for it out of my own pocket, which is why I had to sell my motorcycle.") When he returned, he settled down in Paris and began to carve out a career—one that combined his bent for economics with a flair for politics. Hence, he became an assistant in the Ministry of Finance (1952); was elected to parliament (1956); formed his own small political party, a Gaullist offshoot known as the Independent Republicans (1962), and was appointed to two terms as the Minister of Finance (1962-66 under de Gaulle and 1969-74 under Pompidou). Finally, with the death of Pompidou in 1974 and the need to vote in a new President, Giscard rallied the liberal-conservative coalition around him and in a close vote beat out the Socialist-Communist candidate for his country's No. 1 job.

"His status as a liberal artistocrat who might be able to change France without disrupting things too much appealed to the majority of Frenchmen," explains Jean-François Kahn, a well-known French political commentator. "What also helped his image was the fact that he has a lively, attractive family, and, contrary to French tradition, they took an active part in his campaign, very much like you do it in America. In fact, overall, Giscard came across like your former-President Kennedy: a prince that is not out of touch with his people. And as you may know, Kennedy is still quite popular here." (Asked about the comparison to Kennedy, Giscard added: "I think Kennedy's attempt to bring spontaneity and gaiety into public life was, and still is, something the public expects—and also slightly distrusts. Personally, I admired him very much, and, yes, I have tried to do the same type of thing.")

New, informal image

Thus, right from his first day in office, Giscard began, as he put it, "to dust off the Republic." He wore a business suit instead of the customary white tie and tails to his inauguration at the Elysée Palace, and, unlike his predecessors who arrived by limousine, he chose to come by foot. Once installed in the palace, he further set about informalizing the image of the Presidency—most dramatically, perhaps, by inviting a number of "ordinary" Frenchmen to come dine with him there and, in turn, going to visit people in their homes.

Says Giscard of these unprecedented visits: "In the U.S. you are accustomed to the idea that the head of state is a person like everyone else, but here the President has always been somewhat remote, off on a pedestal. By visiting typical French families in their homes —my wife and I have enough invitations to last for every day until my death —we can demonstrate that the President is someone with whom ordinary contact and conversation are possible."

Conservative opposition

Apart from these shifts in style, Giscard has also brought about some changes in the country's structure. Though France is predominantly Catholic, he has pushed through measures which have legalized abortion, liberalized the sale of contraceptives, and made divorce easier to obtain. In addition, he has reduced the voting age to 18, ended police wiretaps, and—in a move that has been opposed by conservatives within his coalition—he has attempted to introduce progressive reforms in worker-manager relations and to levy higher taxes on the rich.

Breaking bread with the residents of an old-age home in Paris. About once a month—often with his wife—he dines with ordinary French families, and occasionally he invites folks to the Elysée Palace. Some people call it pseudo-democracy, but he feels the visits bring him closer to the people.

office.") As for France's, and Europe's, place in this world of competing superpowers, he believes they must continue to play a somewhat independent role. Says Giscard: "While we recognize the major responsibility of the U.S. in the Western world, we must continue to maintain a level of security of our own, which is why we in France have stepped up our military expenditures."

However, Giscard says he considers himself to be hopeful about where the world is going. It is not in his nature, he says, to be pessimistic. In fact, he has some positive ideas about the future. He feels that his own country has a special contribution to make as a model of a relatively small (France has 53 million people), progressive society—or société libéral avancée, as he calls it. "The world today suffers from a lack of vision and purpose," he says. "It has some practical solutions for problems, but it lacks a conception of the future. Hopefully, we in France can make a contribution there."

How has all this gone over? "Unfortunately for Giscard, not as well as he hoped," answers political commentator Kahn. "The conservatives say he is trying to do too much, and the Socialist-Communist coalition says he is doing too little. You see, France today is a divided society, and the fact that we are in a recession with 1 million people out of work makes the division even greater. For Giscard's part, in keeping with his campaign motto of 'Change Without Risk,' he has tried to bridge the gap. But more and more it appears that he may not make it. The possibility of a Socialist-Communist victory, sooner or later, begins to look very real, and right now, it's got Giscard scared."

Indeed, in recent weeks, with the victory of left-wing candidates in local elections and with students and workers taking to the streets to demonstrate, Giscard would seem to have quite a problem on his hands. And some American spokesmen have gone so far as to issue public warnings about the possible danger of Communist participation in the French government and elsewhere in Europe. Yet, at least for the moment, Giscard seems to feel he can handle the situation. Somewhat philosophically, he muses: "When there is a darkening of the political scene, people sometimes forget that in the end the sun comes back again." As for the public expressions of concern on the part of American leaders, he makes it clear that it would be better if they kept their worries to themselves. "It is up to us," he says, "to handle our own affairs. And we will."

Worry over U.S. intent

But if Giscard prefers America to be publicly silent with regard to France's domestic affairs, he makes it equally plain that he by no means wants the U.S. to withdraw militarily from Europe or other areas in the world. On the contrary, he hopes the U.S. will continue to take an active role, and he is concerned that, in the post-Vietnam period, there may be some hesitation to do so. Says Giscard, quite bluntly: "There is a feeling in the world today—in all of Africa and part of Western Europe—that the U.S. is less committed to its foreign participation than it was before. This is not desirable, and while in the long run we in Europe have not lost faith, we are concerned."

Accordingly, he supports détente but with the proviso that the U.S. continue to maintain its military strength and not fall behind the Soviet Union. (His view of détente advocate Kissinger: "He's the man with the most penetrating vision and the best analyst of the world situation I have met since taking

Observations™

Myth of oil power. The American people are being duped — there, we said it, straight out. Politicians running for office, aware that voters are frustrated and angry about many things, have discovered in the bigness of business—especially oil companies—a convenient explanation for all the things wrong with our country. But think about that "issue." Where's all that power our critics say we have? It wasn't enough, certainly, to keep Congress from raising industry taxes in 1975 or to keep foreign governments from taking over many of our producing properties. It hasn't been able to get price controls removed on oil—ours is the only industry still subject to those "emergency" controls, imposed five long years ago. Oil's power, frankly, is a myth. But it's no myth that oil companies have become scapegoats. If we sound angry about it, we are.

HE'S EXPLAINING HOW BREAKING UP THE OIL COMPANIES WOULD WORK!

Achilles' heel. America's dependence on foreign oil is bad and getting worse, according to a report prepared for the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy by the Congressional Research Service. Says the report: "A careful analysis of current worldwide oil reserves leads to the inevitable conclusion that the U.S. will become highly dependent on oil from the Middle East and North Africa during the coming decade." What to do about it? " . . . maximizing coal utilization and nuclear power would significantly reduce dependence on foreign imports of oil by 1985 and beyond," the report states.

One we won. We're delighted that Mobil's underwriting of a Bicentennial exhibit of 250 unique American posters prompted Business and Society Review to name us a winner of its 1975 Corporate Social Responsibility Awards. And we'd like to share these robust, persuasive posters with you. A part of our country's artistic tradition, they shock, entertain, entreat, admonish, invite, and rejoice. And what about the U.S. role in the future? "Well, during this, your Bicentennial year, that certainly is a question worth asking," says Giscard, as he rises and walks slowly over to the large window looking out on the lush Elysée Palace lawn.

Then, smiling broadly, he concludes: "Look, the U.S. is in many ways the most important country in the world today, so it is only natural that you will have a tremendous influence on where the world is going. For 200 years, you have had a history of freedom and independence, and, yes, you've been a model in this way. But while we in France come to pay our respects to you, to share your Bicentennial, it is not for us to predict what role you will actually play in the future. That answer, as I've suggested in our talk and as I will suggest again in my speech to your Congress, is something that still remains to be heard. Meanwhile, I assure you of this: We are all listening."

Giscard plays with his dogs outside the Elysée Palace. His informality is in sharp contrast to the unbending manner of predecessor Charles de Gaulle

Giscard is an active sportsman, enjoying skiing, tennis and soccer. He plays the piano and writes fiction, says he would like to do a personal, not political, novel.

How many times have you decided to give up smoking?

Nobody these days is telling you not to give up smoking.

But if you've given it up more times than you'd like to remember, the chances are you enjoy it too much to want to give it up at all.

If you're like a lot of smokers these days, it probably isn't smoking that you want to give up. It's some of that 'tar' and nicotine you've been hearing about.

So you tried cigarettes which were low in 'tar' and you found yourself checking every once in a while to see if they were still lit. Which drove you right back to your regular brand.

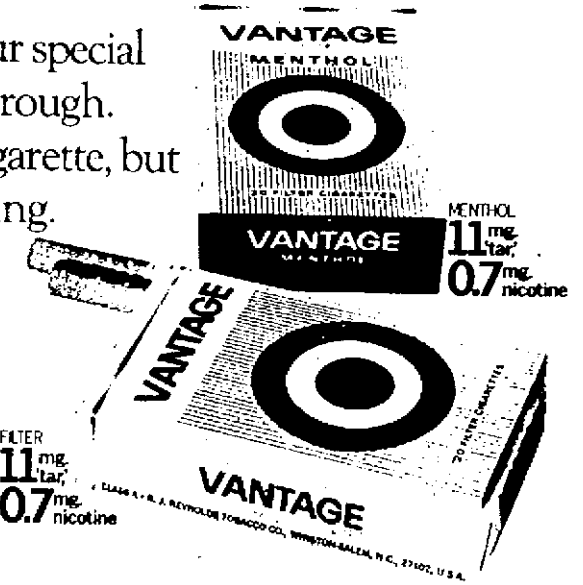

Now, there is Vantage.

Vantage cigarettes, either filter or menthol, deliver considerably less 'tar' and less nicotine than most cigarettes.

But what really makes Vantage special is our special filter which allows the tobacco flavor to come through.

Vantage isn't the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette, but it may well be the lowest one you'll enjoy smoking.

And that's what makes all the difference.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Doctors are making remarkable progress in treating severe arthritis by replacing disease-wracked joints like shoulders, knees, and hips with new plastic-and-metal devices.

The Growing Use of Surgery in Severe Arthritis Cases

by Lawrence Galton

A Bronx, N.Y., housewife today can knit a scarf. Only two months ago, her hands were cruelly deformed and made useless by arthritis. Now, thanks to new artificial knuckles, they're undeformed and uncrippled.

In Chicago, a new shoulder joint has restored use of a previously immobilized right arm for a 62-year-old woman.

In Boston, after years of intractable pain from arthritis-caused destruction of an elbow, a young woman and an elderly man are free of their pain thanks to a new, remarkably functional elbow-joint replacement.

These are just a few of the people with severe arthritis now beginning to benefit from an explosion of progress in the development of prosthetic joints.

Our most widespread chronic disease, arthritis in its two major forms—osteoarthritis, which develops with aging, and rheumatoid, which strikes younger people—afflicts 20 million Americans, one in every 11.

Its causes remain unknown; worse, there is no cure. Many victims benefit from treatment that may include medicine, exercise, heat, rest, physical therapy and mechanical aids.

But for many others, such measures are inadequate. It's for them that rapid development of joint-replacement surgery at 42 Arthritis Foundation centers and medical centers all over the country offers promise.

EXTENDING THE HIP JOINT BREAKTHROUGH: A dramatic development about 10 years ago was a workable artificial hip.

The hip joint bears body weight. The difficulty in replacing it was to find a material strong enough to withstand a cumulative burden of millions of pounds over the years, yet elastic enough to mimic the energy-absorbing qualities of living bone and cartilage. The joint had to be durable, self-lubricating and slip-proof.

How Candice Walker got Slender and stayed Slender.

Candice Walker's thick, auburn hair falls softly to her shoulders. Her eyes are sky blue. She has the cheekbones of a model. She has the figure of a model—almost. Yet Candice once weighed 220 pounds and rarely went outside her house.

Today, Candice, who's 5'7" tall, weighs 137 pounds. Her waist measures 26," not 39"; her hips are 37," not 48." Instead of a matronly 40" bustline, she's a trim 34B.

Candice did it with Slender* diet food and sensible portions of solid foods. It took 14 months. But Candice is a realist. She'd spent half her life putting it on.

"I tried lots of diets before Slender but I couldn't stay on them. I tried pills but they made me climb the walls. I screamed at everybody I was so nervous.

"You see my downfall was that I loved things like ice cream and milk shakes...so when I finally found Slender it was like a thick, creamy shake to me. I prefer Slender powder because you can shake it up. I put in the milk and a couple of ice cubes and shake it until it becomes thick and foamy. Then I sip it with a straw. I varied my Slender diet with solid foods. Sometimes I'd have nothing but Slender for 3 or 4 days. Then I'd start off with a light breakfast, Slender for lunch, and a salad and lean meat for dinner. After a week or so, I'd go back to Slender again for 3 or 4 meals a day. Yet I never think of Slender as a diet; it's more of a newfound way of eating—for my newfound life. My friends see me in the store and say—'Gee, you've REALLY lost the weight,' and they look in my shopping cart and say, 'I see you buy Slender.' I say, 'Yes, it's my favorite pal. I have it in the kitchen at all times. I put it in my purse, I take it to work with me.'

"Today I wear a size 11 or even a 9 in some clothes," says Candice, "and I used to take a size 34½. I look great in my clothes and I know it. When I'm walking down the street, men look at me. I'll admit it—it makes me feel great! I feel like a woman again!

"I'm not rich. I'm not famous. But I want to make some kind of mark in this world that says I've been here. I could be an entertainer, a country rock singer, even a face model. If I can lose 83 pounds I can do anything!"

Candice knows the hardest part is keeping it off. "Oh sure, every now and then I consume large quantities of sweets for 2 or 3 days. Then I get out my Slender and say, ok, pal, let's get together and take off those two or three pounds. That's the trick...never gain more than 5 pounds back or you're done. And I've only varied from 135 to 137 in three years. So I'm proud of myself for keeping it off.

"Slender's worked for me, and I say anybody can do it."

Candice Walker is a real Slender success story. And it all started the day she decided to pick up Slender at her market—and stayed with it. You can do the same. Just get Slender, and get started.

Ask your doctor before starting any program of weight reduction.

The hip prosthesis, developed by Dr. John Charnley of England, worked. It uses stainless steel or Vitallium for one component, polyethylene plastic for the other, with both cemented into place. Most patients walk within a few days after surgery. Pain disappears.

At first, hip replacement was limited to patients over 60 because of uncertainty about how long the prosthesis might last. Now, with a decade of satisfactory experience, surgeons are implanting artificial hips in much younger patients, even in some children. Currently, 40,000 people a year in this country are receiving the ships.

And the success of Charnley's hip encouraged other developments.

KNEES, ANKLES AND TOES: The knee was long regarded as a "nightmare joint" to replace because of its complexity. It bends, rotates, locks when extended, has a mechanism for shifting body weight during bending and straightening without which we could never get up from a squatting position.

Yet several knee joints have now become available. At New York City's Hospital for Special Surgery, Dr. John N. Insall has recently used the Freeman-Swanson knee (named for its English developers) to replace more than two dozen rheumatoid- and osteoarthritis-crippled knees with excellent results in pain relief, motion and stability.

In other medical centers, other knee prostheses — a "polycentric" knee, a "geometric" knee, and a "UCI" (University of California at Irvine) knee—now have been used successfully in hundreds of patients. Pain is relieved. After a rehabilitation period during which crutches or a walker may be used temporarily, most patients no longer need help in walking.

Until very recently, artificial ankles were of limited usefulness. The natural ankle is an intricate hinge that not only supports the body but also allows the foot to rotate and tilt. Even the best artificial ankles of the past allowed only up-and-down motion.

Now a new ankle joint developed by Dr. Theodore Waugh at UCI permits side-to-side as well as up-and-down movement of the foot. A T-shaped metal device that screws up into the shin and rocks on a rounded runner that covers the talus ankle bone, it can be implanted in half an hour. Most of the first three dozen patients to receive it have been walking on crutches five days after surgery, with many walking unaided in less than a month. Some of the patients, Dr. Waugh says, unable to walk without crutches for years, are now playing golf and tennis.

Toe implants, too, have been developed. They include half-joints, spacers and hinged devices suited to individual problems. At UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles, Dr. Andrea Cracchiolo III has reported on 19 patients receiving 25 implants to relieve foot pain and improve toe alignment. Ten now walk without limitations, while five others can walk up to six blocks at a time.

FINGERS AND KNUCKLES: Arthritis can twist and gnarl hands into grotesque shapes that even bear such descriptive names as "swan neck" and "buttonhole."

Finger-joint implants now often help. A typical one, made of silicone rubber, resembles a piece of taffy pulled out at both ends. After a deformed joint is removed, the ends of the implant are positioned in channels in bones with the thickest part of the device lying between and keeping the bones aligned.

Dr. Alfred B. Swanson, a hand surgeon at Blodgett Memorial Hospital, Grand Rapids, Mich., who developed the joints, has reported that they provide 75 percent of the efficiency of natural healthy joints. They are now being used by many medical centers.

Within the last year, successes with new prosthetic knuckles have been reported by Dr. Robert J. Schultz of the Hospital of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Bronx, N.Y. They are for patients with hands so deformed that gripping, pinching and opening the hands widely to grasp large objects are no longer possible.

The replacement knuckles, of stainless steel and polyethylene, are implanted in two hours, and patients begin to use their hands in four days. In the first 150 implanted and followed for as long as 2½ years, there have been no undesirable effects, and the joints, reports Dr. Schultz, "are not perfect, but close."

SHOULDERS AND ELBOWS: The Chicago woman mentioned earlier was one of the first to benefit from a new shoulder joint developed at the Michael Reese Medical Center in Chicago by a team headed by Dr. Melvin Post.

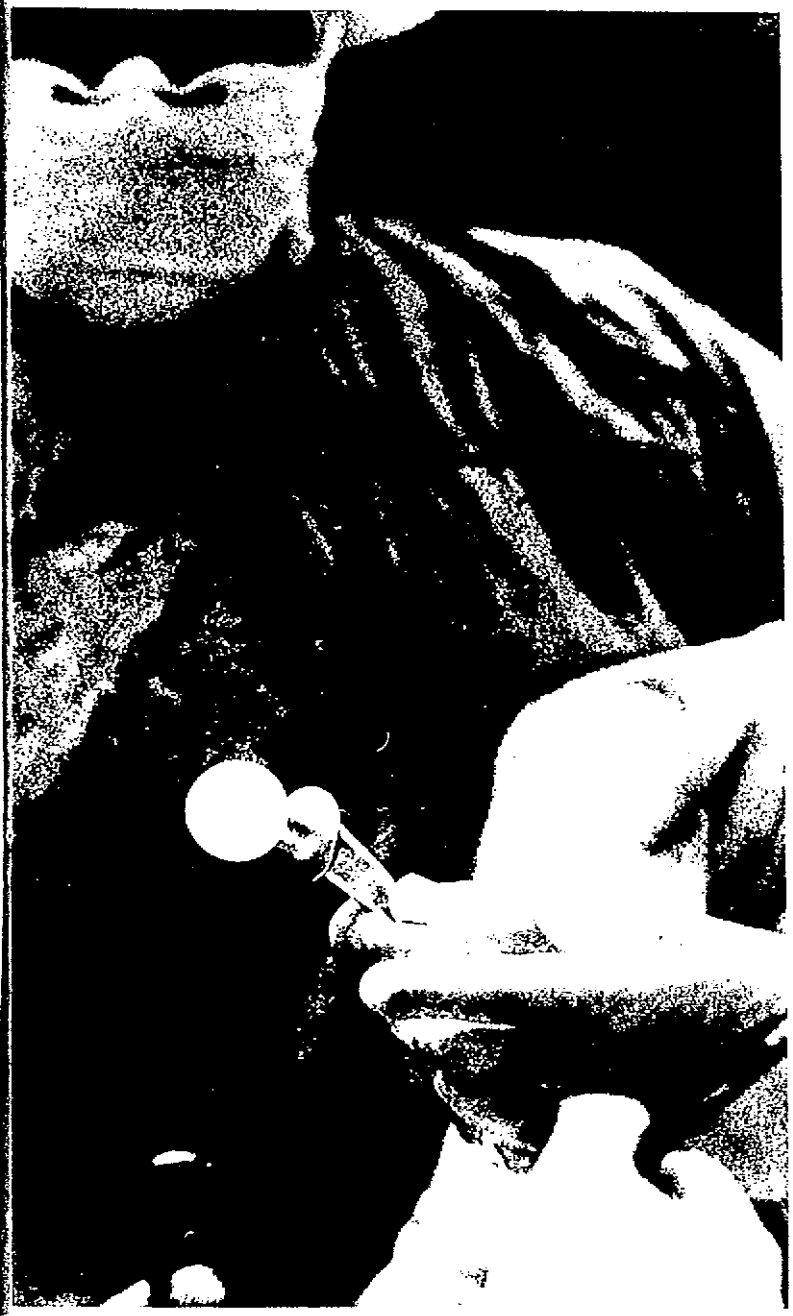

Somewhat like the Charnley hip, it replaces damaged shoulder surfaces with a metal-to-plastic ball-and-socket joint. And, because the shoulder is subject to extreme twisting, the device has a plastic collar to prevent dislocation.

After implantation, the arm is immobilized for four weeks, then gentle motion exercises are begun. The prosthesis shows promise of allowing patients to carry out ordinary shoulder movements and perform tasks that were painful or impossible before.

Just a few months ago, Dr. Frederick C. Ewald of Boston's Robert B. Brigham Hospital and Harvard Medical School reported remarkable success with a new elbow joint.

Previous elbow-joint prototypes could provide only limited motion and tended to loosen. The new one is a cup-like plastic element with a ladlelike metal component. The cup goes on top of the ulna bone on the inner side of the forearm; the handle of the ladle fits into the long humerus bone of the upper arm. Cemented into place, the two elements work like a natural elbow.

The first patients to receive it were 24 women and four men, aged 44 to 74, all with complete elbow-joint destruction and in intractable pain for three to 10 years. Now their pain has been relieved, better than 90 percent normal arm function has been restored and, reports Dr. Ewald, all the patients have resumed "the tasks of daily life, and some have returned to their occupations."

Each year, 40,000 Americans receive ball-and-socket hip implants like the one shown here. Developed in England, the joint enables a patient to walk again in a few days.

NEW HOPE: Arthritis, of course, can affect more than one joint. Not all affected joints require replacement. But now when more than one joint causes extreme and intractable pain and no longer can function, more than one can be replaced.

Often, the most troublesome may be replaced first and others later. The order may also depend upon the particular joints. When, for example, hip and knee joints require replacement, rehabilitation is easier if the hip is replaced first. Once use of the hip is regained, the knee joint can be replaced.

The great needs in arthritis, of course, are for better understanding of causes and improved means of medical control and even prevention. Until they're met, however, the development of reconstructed joints makes rehabilitation possible for many patients once considered virtually hopeless.

Readers of Parade are invited to Enjoy collecting a stirring panorama preserved for future generations.

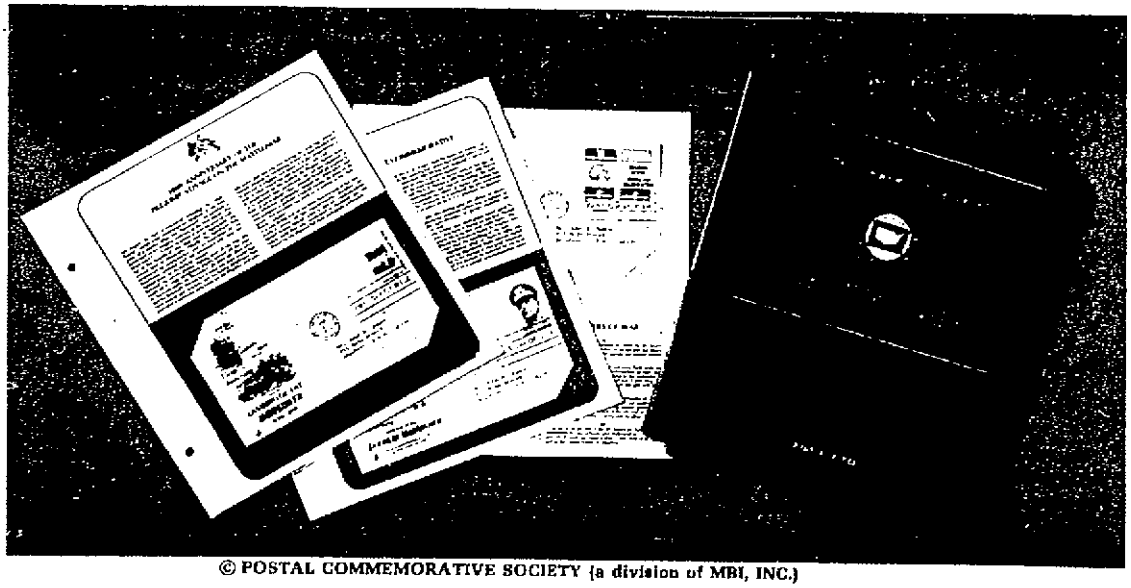

• At a surprisingly modest cost, you can receive beautiful First Day Covers for each new commemorative stamp issue of the United States. • Each First Day Cover will be individually addressed and sent automatically to the name and address you designate.

The United States regularly honors the important men, events and places in its history through the issuance of official U.S. commemorative postage stamps. When a new stamp is to be issued, one, and only one, post office is designated to provide the official "First Day" cancellation. The specially designed envelope bearing the new stamp, cancelled with the exact date of first issue of the officially designated post office, is a First Day Cover.

First Day Covers are fascinating collectors' items. As you can well imagine, the combination of a historic stamp, cancelled with the "First Day of Issue" postmark of the officially designated post office on a specially designed envelope, results in a collector's item of the first order. One that has been prized by collectors like Dwight D. Eisenhower, George C. Marshall and Franklin D. Roosevelt, plus others with the foresight to preserve yesterday and today for tomorrow.

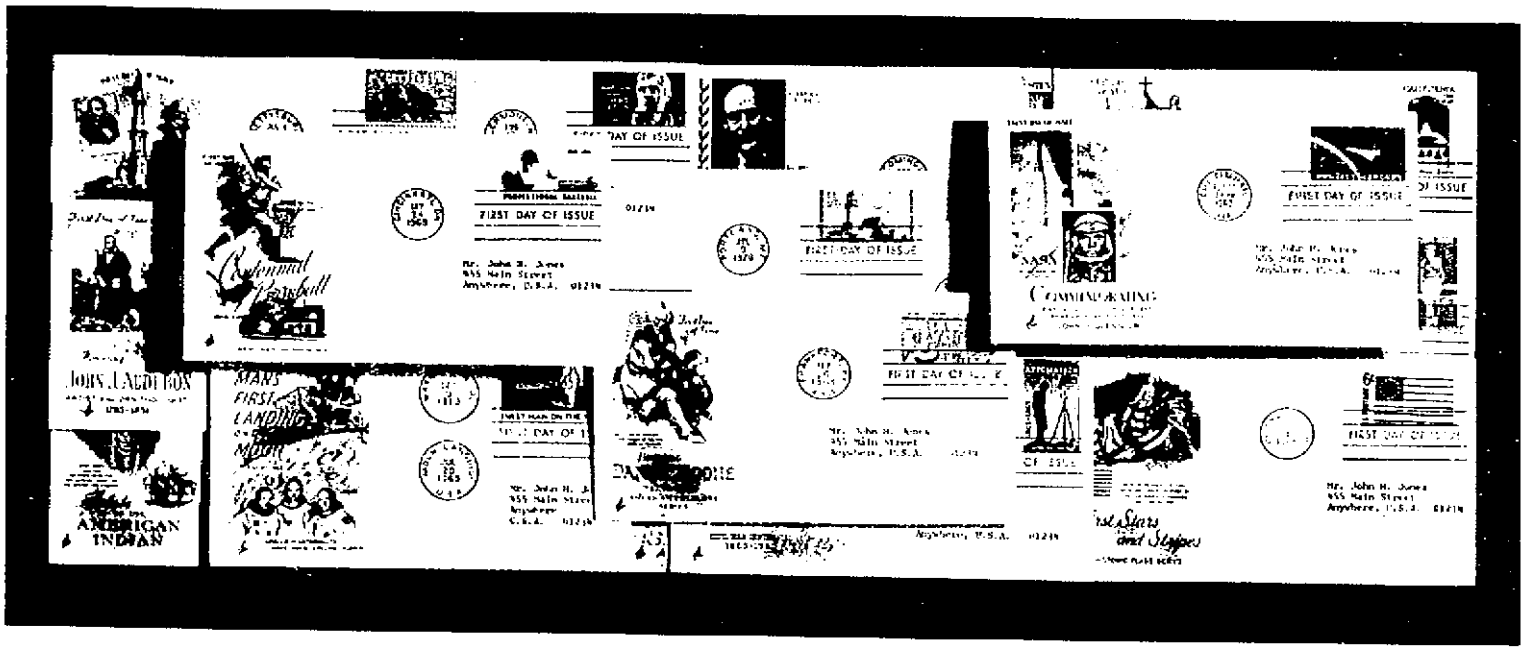

The best time to obtain these prized collectors' items is when they are issued. This is now made easier than ever by the Postal Commemorative Society.

Postal Commemorative Society members receive everything they need to build and maintain a personalized "mint condition" collection of U.S. First Day Covers. For each cover issued, the Society provides an exclusive custom designed display page, especially made for the member's personalized album.

of U.S. history. To be treasured now and

First Day Covers combine art and history in a tribute to our American heritage.

Eisenhower...The Battle of Bunker Hill...the writing of the Star Spangled Banner...the landing of astronauts on the moon...such are the subjects chosen by the United States for national honor on commemorative postage stamps.

The post office chosen for a first day of issue usually bears particular significance to the subject commemorated. For example, a first day cover of the Eisenhower stamp bears the "First Day of Issue" postmark of Abilene, Kansas.

The nation's leading artists and designers are called upon to portray the subjects chosen. Such commissions naturally are highly prized, and bring forth the best efforts of the artists involved.

Membership in the Postal Commemorative Society makes it possible to easily collect First Day Covers as they are issued.

The Society will guarantee your receiving a personally addressed First Day Cover of every U.S. commemorative stamp issue. All details of arranging for your First Day Covers to be sent to you will be handled by the Society.

Commemorative stamps normally are issued by the United States at the rate of one every three to four weeks. You will receive a beautiful First Day Cover for every United States commemorative stamp issue during the term of your membership at a total cost of just $1.65 per month.

As a member, you will also receive the Society's exclusive display page for each new issue. Each beautiful, specially designed page is die-cut to hold the First Day Cover, and contains a full description with all important historical information about the subject of the commemorative issue. These pages are available only to members of the Society.

At the surprisingly low cost of $1.65 per month, you will be building a truly worthwhile First Day Cover collection to be enjoyed now and preserved for future generations of your family. Shouldn't you really give it a try?

Becoming a member now brings you an important collector's bonus at no additional cost.

The Postal Commemorative Society makes available to its members a handsome collector's album with the member's name hand-embossed on the cover. This album, specially designed to hold the Society's display pages, makes it possible for members to keep each new First Day Cover in perfect condition. It is yours free, if you join now!

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

ROTATING PLANT STAND: If you haven't the time to rotate your house plants so all sides receive optimal amounts of sunlight, a new stand does it for you. It plugs into any household outlet, holds up to an 8" pot, rotates a plant once an hour, uses only 2½ watts. $9.95 ppd. Bryce-Branton, Dept. PP, 690 Southern Ave., Muskegon, Mich. 49442.

TORNADO ALARM: A recently discovered phenomenon is that an active tornado vortex approaching within 18 miles can turn a TV screen white, providing a visible warning. Now, based on that, a new electronic alarm system you can attach to a TV set will emit a loud, piercing warning when a tornado comes that close, then will turn itself off when the tornado passes out of range. Complete with nine-volt battery, instructions for use and what to do in the event of a tornado: $29.95. Marketing Inputs, Dept. PP, Box 11205, St. Louis, Mo. 63105.

ULTRALIGHT OUTBOARD: Weighing only 11 pounds—13 pounds less than usual two-horsepower motors — this one runs for 10 hours at top speed on two gallons of gas, for 50 hours at trolling speed, claims the maker. It develops 35 pounds of thrust and, at trolling speed, is said to be as slow and, to a fish, as quiet as an electric. With automatic rewind starter, sliding shaft for shallow running: $165. Also available: a 17.6-pounder, with 70 pounds of thrust, that operates for seven hours at top speed on three gallons of gas, for 48 hours at trolling speed. $235. AquaBug International, Dept. PP, 100 Merrick Road, Rockville Centre, N.Y. 11570. (above)

DO YOU NEED A TONIC?

Doctors report iron-poor blood definitely improves with Geritol.

As you can see from the chart and photomicrographs below, medical records show that iron-poor blood definitely improves after you use Geritol. Thin, pale, badly shaped iron-poor red blood cells become round, rich and red.

		Before Geritol	After Geritol	Improvement
Here's what GERITOL can do! (Actual Laboratory Blood Tests)	Blood Count Patient A	3,200,000 red blood cells	3,900,000 red blood cells	700,000 more red blood cells
	Blood Count Patient B	3,800,000 red blood cells	4,900,000 red blood cells	over 1,000,000 more red blood cells

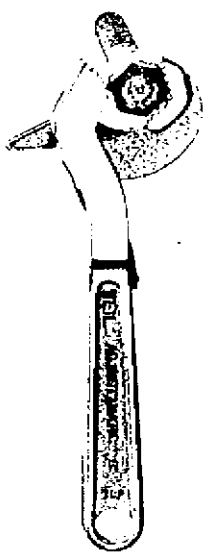

With the help of Geritol iron in your bloodstream, millions more healthy red blood cells are built to circulate all around your body 1500 times a day!

And the Geritol formula also gives you vitamins important for nutrition.

Geritol is the tonic that's protecting so many Americans today. If you need a tonic, try Geritol, tablets or liquid, starting today.

Geritol.
America's medically proved blood builder.

NEW IDEA IN A WRENCH: Useful around house, car and boat, this wrench can do the jobs of adjustable, open-end, box and pipe wrenches, turning pipes, nuts and bolts, including badly chewed and rounded nuts and bolts, claims the maker. It adjusts instantly to hardware size; just open jaw with thumb, slip wrench head around hardware, release thumb, and the jaw grips securely. With ratchet action: $4.50 ppd. Joseph Mennen Co., Dept. PP, 192 Vincent Ave., Lynbrook, N.Y. 11563. (above)

PORTABLE AND POWERFUL HEATER: Suitable for many uses, including warming garages, workshops and greenhouses, this new heater delivers 30,000 BTU's of heat an hour, nearly one-third as much as the average home heating system. Just fill with kerosine or #1 fuel oil, plug into any 110-volt outlet, and it operates for 10 hours, shuts off automatically when fuel supply runs out. It uses less current than a 60-watt bulb. Total operating cost is 11¢ an hour. 30" x 11" x 14". Suggested retail price: $119.95. Details: Koehring Atomaster Division, Dept. PP, Box 719, Bowling Green, Ky. 42101. (right)

WALLPAPER IN SQUARES: A new way to put up wallpaper is to use handy-sized, 15¾", pre-pasted squares that go up as easily as postage stamps, claims the maker. Just dip square in water, place on wall. As each square goes up, the pattern matches automatically. The paper is vinyl-coated for washability and dry-strippable for easy removal when it's time to redecorate. Available in many designs and colors, in packages of 18 squares. Details: Decro-wall, Dept. PP, 375 Executive Blvd., Elmsford, N.Y. 10523.

My favorite jokes

by Jay Marr

EDITOR'S NOTE: Originally from Boston, comedian Jay Marr makes his home these days in Miami. He's been working on cruise ships for the last few years and says: "I've been on the cruise circuit so long I walk with a list."

He broke into comedy in New York, where he lived from 1968 to '73, and recalls: "Usually my name was so far down on the bill only dogs could read it. My first job—well, it went like this. I worked with a ventriloquist who was so bad his lips moved even when he was listening. This guy was so terrible, one day his dummy went out looking for a new partner."

Here are some of Jay Marr's current favorites:

They say all those soap operas are supposed to be so true to life—I don't understand why you never see any of the people on them spending their afternoons watching TV.

A girlfriend of mine just bought a mobile home. She woke up one morning and discovered she had a sunken living room—somebody let the air out of her front tires.

A guy says to his doctor: "Doc, I'm having trouble with my love-life at home." The doctor says: "Look, take off 20 pounds. Run 10 miles a day." Two weeks later the guy calls his doctor and says: "I took off 20 pounds, and I've been running 10 miles a day." So the doctor says: "And how's your love-life?" The man answers: "I don't know, I'm 140 miles from there."

My girlfriend loves to shop. She'll buy anything that's marked down. Last week she bought a dress, handbag, and an escalator.

If, in the face of disappointment, adversity, and misfortune, you can maintain a smile and a word of cheer, some will call you an optimist. Most will call you a jerk.

•

One way to beat the system: Take a "Go Now, Pay Later" trip—but don't come back.

Things are tough. Ten percent of the people are on welfare, 30 percent on unemployment, and the rest on sedatives.

•

Some people have no sense of humor. I got in a taxicab with a woman driver. She said, "Where to?" I said, "Your place." So she took me to the garage.

A 58-year-old elephant fell into a trench and all efforts to get him out failed until someone paraded a young female elephant in front of him and out he came. Which proves that even at 58 an elephant never forgets.

It was so hot in Miami the other day the senior citizens were down to one sweater.

Doctors never listen. I called mine the other day and told him I had taken an overdose of aspirin. I said: "What do I do?" He said: "Take two aspirins and call me in the morning."

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

JENNIE DALEY: A BUSINESS DEAL

$1000 for a Husband

Jennie Daley would like to buy a husband for $1000 before July 2, 1976.

"I want the man to marry me for the money, nothing else," says Jennie, 23, a student at Portsmouth Polytechnic in England. "It will be strictly a business deal, no sex, no honeymoon, just a quick marriage followed by a quick divorce."

Jennie's problem is that she was born in Zambia and has a South African passport. Her visa to stay in Great Britain expires in July. She does not want to return to South Africa because of apartheid, which she opposes.

"It's tragic," she says, "that I should be put in this position, but I will have to leave England unless I find a British husband. I've asked about this sort of arrangement, and I've been told that 500 pounds ($1000) is a fair price for a husband. Divorce proceedings can begin at once, and after two years the marriage can be dissolved."

Jennie, who is majoring in computer sciences, has appealed over the local Portsmouth radio for a husband, and perhaps by this time she has found one.

Book Lists

Many of the books kids love to read—"Little Women," "Treasure Island," "The Arabian Nights" and the story of "Rip Van Winkle"—are not "approved" reading. Not, at least, in the "Guide to Non-Sexist Children's Books," by Judith Adell and Hilary Dole Klein. Why are these classics omitted? Because they depict women in traditional, and often uncomplimentary, roles.

Rip Van Winkle, for example, has "a shrewish wife whom we are all glad has burst a blood vessel," write publishers Jordan and Anita Miller. "Books like 'Little Women' show girls and young women only as extensions of men." And in "Treasure Island," they assert, "everything good and exciting happens to boys."

The new guidebook provides parents with a list of more than 400 fiction and non-fiction books, divided by grade level, which portray girls as heroines or as equals to boys. These books "treat boys and girls as people who have the same kinds of frailties and strengths," says actor and feminist Alan Alda in the introduction.

Mary Jane Anderson of the American Library Association says, "We encourage lists of this kind." But, she cautions, books excluded from the guidebook should also be in the library.

"Some groups in our society—blacks, Chicanos, feminists—have begun to use children's literature the way the moralists did 100 years ago—as a means to mold children's thoughts," she explains.

Fortunately, she says, parents and children still have the option to read what they want. But if any group begins to dictate which books a child should read, "we will run into serious problems."

Sad Students

A flood of depression has struck students at Lund University in southern Sweden. Last year, 53 of them took their own lives. Another 500 attempted suicide but failed. And 2000 went to psychiatrists for help. The principal motives were given as loneliness, failure in their studies and financial difficulties.

Bob Dylan Appraised

Bob Dylan is no longer the authentic voice of protest, reflecting the disenchantment of a disillusioned generation. He is merely a salesman of pop melodies.

That's the opinion of Marco D'Eramo, an Italian sociologist and journalist, writing in "Cultures," a publication of UNESCO.

D'Eramo, based in Paris, claims to have made a thorough study of Dylan's works for his thesis, "The Rhetorics of Protest," in which he writes: "He [Dylan] is now a variety act, a professional spinner of melodies—nothing more, nothing less."

D'Eramo claims that Dylan's career has plummeted sharply from the early '60's, when popularity polls rated the singer-composer directly behind President John F. Kennedy. "At age 34," D'Eramo writes, "he [Dylan] is already on the downgrade slope, exploiting the success he enjoyed formerly when he was at the height of his popularity. . . . He is no longer the spokesman of those young people who stormed American political life, fought for the civil rights of black people, revolted on the university campuses and saw Dylan as a prophet."

Today, D'Eramo concludes, Dylan has accepted his role in "the system." He is happy singing songs of domestic bliss and pastoral love.

No one, of course, stays young forever.

Drug Poll

Liquor may have reestablished itself on college campuses but other drug use remains high, especially during examination period. Academic pressures may have forced many "straight" students who would not ordinarily think of taking drugs to consume large numbers of uppers to get their work done.

"There has been a big rise in amphetamines at Yale," states David Zweig of the Yale Daily News. "More and more students are staying up late and speeding to get good grades." The use of amphetamines is another product of academic pressure.

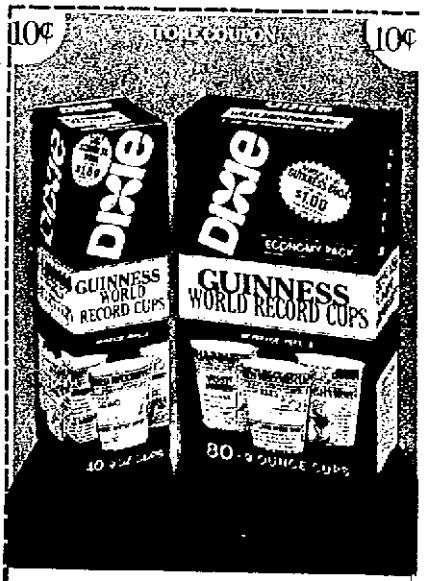

A recent survey of 811 Yale undergraduates found 78% had tried marijuana, 20% LSD, and 45% hashish. Other drugs used included cocaine, mescaline, and laughing gas.

Home fires kill 6000 a year in the U.S., but the number could be reduced if more homes had a new kind of reliable sensing device that blares at the first whiff of smoke, thus rousing a family that might wake up too late.

A New Fire Alarm For Your Home

by E. D. Fales Jr.

Night fires have always been among the most dangerous to human life because they strike when people are asleep.

Now, often fed by modern materials, night fires have become more deadly than ever. The vastly increased use of plastic furnishings and some fibers has produced a dramatic rise in deaths and injuries. At the present rate, 60,000 Americans will be killed and 3 million injured in home fires during the next 10 years.

Some plastics help bring on home fire casualties in two ways. Because of their use in wall coverings, carpeting, drapes and furniture, many fires no longer spread from room to room in the old familiar pattern. Instead, they often explode in bursts that engulf whole buildings before firemen arrive.

"We used to figure you needed at least two minutes' warning to escape a night fire," says Paul Sawin of the National Fire Protection Association. "Today when you wake up you may have 20 seconds."

Moreover, today's fires can also prove deadly when they don't flare up, but only smolder unnoticed. All such fires pour out deadly carbon monoxide. But today, to make matters worse, plastics-fed fires emit "chemical smoke" and invisible lethal fumes that can turn a home into a poison-gas factory while the occupants sleep on unaware of the peril.

Only a small fire

That may be what happened recently in Norwalk, Conn., when William Paulovic, his wife and two children died of fumes from a small living room fire that never spread and caused little property damage.

Usually the invisible fumes come first. Then comes the terrible chemical smoke—black, choking clouds that block the rescuers' vision. "We have to find victims by feel," says one fireman. "We pass our hands over the beds."

The suffocation danger is heightened in today's tight, "climate conditioned" homes where little fresh air enters. The oxygen is quickly used up, sometimes snuffing out the lives of the occupants before they even know there is a fire. Some 75 fumes can be emitted by polyvinyl chloride (PVC), a material used in curtains, carpets, furniture, packaging, drain pipes, wiring, shower curtains—even baby pants. Other plastics are used in insulation, paneling and paints.

Even the flame-retardant chemicals pose dangers. "When you force any fabric, such as a curtain or a rug, to burn slowly, it pours out more fumes," says one investigator. "And such fumes can asphyxiate you or even cause an explosion. So we trade one danger for another."

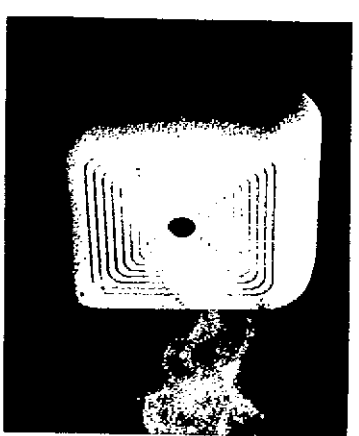

But if modern technology has increased the hazards of fires, it has also produced an ultrasensitive new warning device that can virtually erase the chance that you or your family will ever be trapped.

Uncanny ability

It's a remarkable gadget that has uncanny ability to know—sometimes within seconds—when fires start. It's not a "heat detector"—an older device which is usually hung directly over a possible fire source (such as a furnace or oven). It's more sophisticated—a first cousin to the fire-detection devices used in spaceships and nuclear plants.

Called an "electronic smoke detector" (ESD), it is an inexpensive ($25 to $50 and up) electric-powered device roughly the size of a candy box. A few costly ESD's appeared on the home market about 1970. Today there are 18 brands.

There are two basic types—photoelectric and ionization—but each contains a small leather-lunged horn intended to rouse the soundest sleeper. Most photoelectric ESD's contain a minute electric bulb (visible at night). If smoke enters, it scatters the light toward a photoelectric cell, triggering the alarm. The ionization devices utilize a tiny bit of radioactive material (less than a watch dial's) that "ionizes" air in a small pocket, causing a faint electric current to flow through the air itself. More sensitive than light, the current is disturbed if very fine (invisible) smoke enters. The interrupted current triggers the alarm. There is little difference between the two types in appearance or price. A device combining both methods is expected to reach the market in July. In addition, there are gas detectors today which sound an alarm when carbon monoxide forms.

Here's how a smoke detector looks when installed: Today there are 18 brands.

Some ESD's can send electric waves rushing through house wiring to touch off small "remote" horns in each bedroom. They are pocket-sized ($17.50 and up) plastic boxes that plug into any electric outlet.

Help from neighbors

In addition, "broadcasting" models (which may cost a few dollars extra) can simultaneously send signals over the outside utility wires and into your neighbors' homes to set off alarms there, too. Thus, if you have a fire, your neighbors know instantly and come rushing even before firemen arrive.

Experts warn that some ESD's are poor. It helps, they say, to be sure yours has an "FM" (Factory Mutual) or "UL" (Underwriters Laboratories) label.

Among the best customers for ESD's are scientists whose specialty is investigating fires. Richard Bright, who heads the U.S. Bureau of Standards' special Fire Protection Project, has installed five ESD's in his home. According to the bureau, a single ESD close to the ceiling outside your bedroom increases by 46 percent your chances of getting the precious two minutes' escape time. With an ESD on every floor, your chances go up to 86 percent.

His wife's pizza

One problem with the ESD's is their extreme sensitivity. Bright says ruefully that his ESD's went off when they were triggered by invisible fumes from a pizza his wife was cooking at 550° F.

But the risk of an occasional false alarm is worth taking, the scientists say. "Even a couple of false alarms a year are small price for your family's safety," says Jack Abbott of Factory Mutual.

U.S. Fire Administrator Howard D. Tipton estimates they could save eight out of every 10 persons who now die in night fires. He recommends them for all American homes. Laws requiring their use in new houses have been enacted in Ohio, Massachusetts and elsewhere. The Federal Housing Administration demands them in every new home it helps finance. Some insurance companies have begun to offer a slight cut in premium rates for homes with ESD's.

But the best reason for installing an ESD is basic: it may save your life one night.

Are you one of the "quiet ones" who should be a writer?

Often it's the quiet ones who have the most to say. Indeed, some of the finest novelists and poets, some of the most successful journalists and playwrights, are people of an essentially quiet nature.

If you are somewhat reserved in a crowd . . . a bit detached from others . . . shun small talk because you favor deeply felt ideas . . . you may well have the sensitivity that is the sign of a writer. You may be hiding a talent that could change your life!

Now there is a way to find out whether you are one of these fortunate people with talent in writing. Simply send for our Aptitude Test. It's free — there's no obligation. We'll grade it and tell you whether you have abilities that qualify you for further training.

Famous Writers School was created to help promising amateurs develop their talent so it means something — self-fulfillment, writing that sells, even a full-time career. The famous authors who founded the School have all had long and successful careers. Faith Baldwin, Rod Serling, Rudolf Flesch, Bergen Evans, Bruce Catton, Mignon Eberhart and Max Shulman are among those who wrote our textbooks, and their experience is passed along to you on every page.

The School is geared to your individual needs. You learn at home . . . in leisure time . . . at your own pace. Your instructors are all professional writers whose personal advice helps you learn the ropes toward realizing your goals.

Here is what two West Coast students say:
Karen O'Connor Sweeney, who sold 21 pieces during the 19 months she was in the Course, writes: "For this success — thank you!" From Charles A. Lehman: "I got a check in the mail before I finished the Course. My work has now appeared in a dozen magazines."

If you've been keeping quiet about your talent, here's a chance to do something with it. Send for the Aptitude Test today — before you forget!

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Exotic is the word for this dish. It is a taste-tantalizing treat with a base of sliced rock lobster tails, made savory with onion, garlic, bay leaf, stewed tomatoes, plus the unusual addition of cubed sweet potatoes. Served with golden-brown sautéed bananas and fluffy rice, it has a tropical air and is pretty as a picture. Your guests will be enchanted!

There is no need for a first course, though you might like to serve a crisp green salad after the main course. For dessert select something not too rich or cloying —perhaps lemon sherbet garnished with grapes, crisp wafers and espresso.

EXOTIC ROCK LOBSTER AFRICAIN

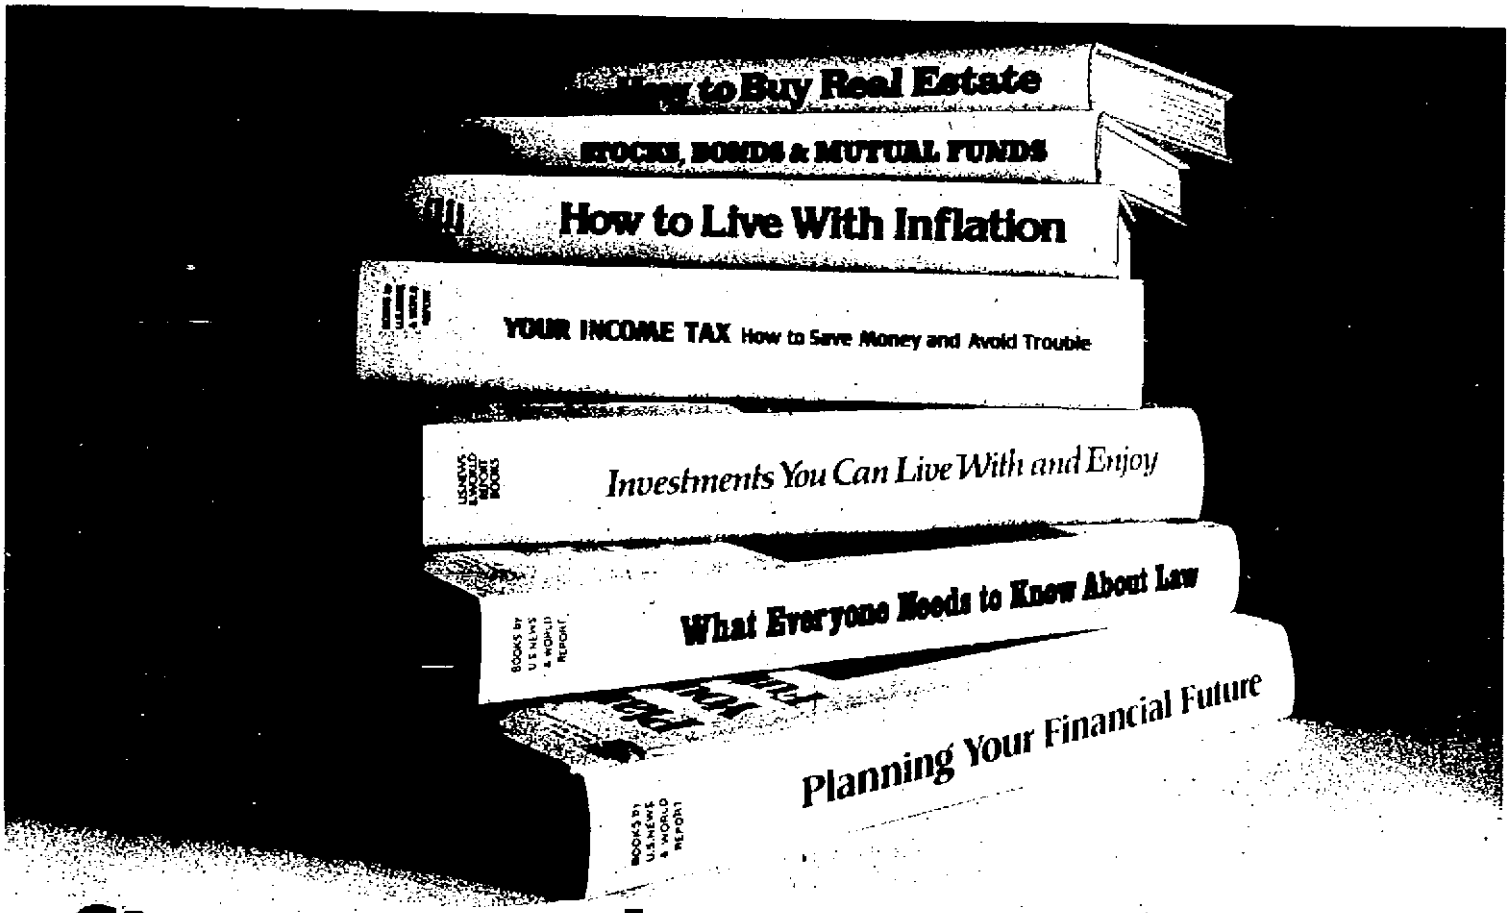

- 3 packages (8 oz. each) frozen rock lobster tails
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 small garlic clove, chopped
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cans (16 oz. each) stewed tomatoes
- 1 bay leaf
- 3 sweet potatoes, peeled and cubed
- 1 cup cream
- Salt and pepper
- 6 small bananas
- Hot fluffy rice

Parboil frozen rock lobster tails by dropping into boiling salted water. When water reboils, drain immediately, drench with cold water and cut away underside membrane. Remove meat; cut into crosswise slices.

Sauté onion and garlic in half the butter until golden. Sprinkle with flour. Add tomatoes, bay leaf and potatoes. Stir to blend. Cover; simmer until potatoes are tender. Remove bay leaf.

Add rock lobster pieces; simmer another five minutes. Add cream; bring to serving temperature, but do not boil. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Sauté bananas in remaining butter. Accompany the dish with bananas and rice. Makes six servings.

Step up toward a more secure future

. . . with these and other books in a valuable series on managing your money, prepared by U.S.News & World Report. Read here how to help yourself get started on a sound wealth-building program — then send for Volume 1 to read for 10 days free.

If you're out to build any kind of real wealth in this day and age, you've got a lot to contend with:

Inflation. Taxes. Legal considerations. Insurance needs. The ups and downs in the value of stocks and other kinds of investments.

To cope with it all, you need know-how — all the know-how you can get. Solid, reliable, factual information to help you keep more money out of what you earn . . . manage and invest it shrewdly . . . protect it against loss . . . and build it into an estate that offers you real security.

It is to provide you with this kind of know-how that the publishers of U.S.News & World Report have created the MONEY MANAGEMENT LIBRARY — a valuable series of books packed with authoritative money management advice to help you meet your goals.

Here is in-depth guidance on such subjects as "Planning Your Financial Future," "Your Income Tax," "Stocks, Bonds & Mutual Funds," "How to Buy Real Estate," "Investments You Can Live With and Enjoy," "How to Live With Inflation," and other important areas.

Read Volume 1 FREE for 10 days

To introduce you to this Library, we would like to send you the first book to read and use free for 10 days. It's on a subject which can dramatically influence your financial well-being for better or worse: the law.

Called "What Everyone Needs to Know About Law," this book discusses — in concise, easy-to-understand language — the various kinds of law that affect your life. For example, some of the things you'll learn are:

—How to use a merchant's Retail Installment Contract to find better buys

—The one legal document you should not keep in your safe-deposit box

—When you may legally break a lease

—How long you should save your income tax returns to "play it safe"

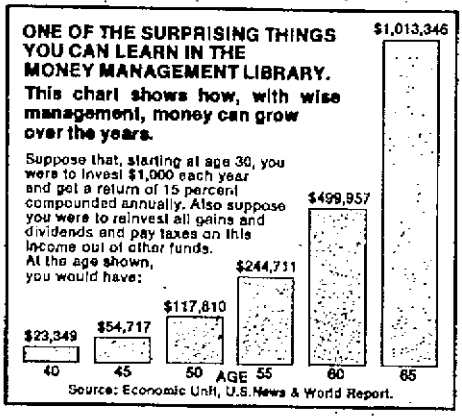

—How to see yourself as a jury would see you in court

—How to spot costly problem areas in contracts before you sign them

And this is just a small sampling of what you'll learn in "What Everyone Needs to Know About Law." See coupon for details of our free-examination offer. Then mail it today.

ONE OF THE SURPRISING THINGS YOU CAN LEARN IN THE MONEY MANAGEMENT LIBRARY.
This chart shows how, with wise management, money can grow over the years.

Suppose that, starting at age 30, you were to invest $1,000 each year and get a return of 15 percent compounded annually. Also suppose you were to reinvest all gains and dividends and pay taxes on this income out of other funds. At the age shown, you would have:

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

NUCLEAR THREAT Four of America's leading nuclear experts gathered recently in Albert Einstein's former study at Princeton University. There they were recorded for "World in Action," a TV show produced by the Granada Television Company of England.

All four spoke of the growing threat of nuclear war throughout the world.

All four felt that small, politically unstable nations or desperate groups of fanatical terrorists will inevitably make and use the atom bomb unless the controls on the use of nuclear power are tightened.

The four men, each widely respected and each involved in nuclear research, are: Dr. George Kistiakowsky, President Eisenhower's science adviser and a pioneer in nuclear explosives; Dr. George Rathjens, former chief scientist for the Pentagon; Dr. Theodore Taylor, former nuclear weapons designer, and Herbert Scoville, former chief of scientific intelligence at the CIA.

"The risk that a nuclear war will break out is growing day by day," Scoville declared.

"I believe that nuclear war is probable," he added, "and that it will involve large numbers of deaths. By the year 2000, fatalities could run to one billion."

The quartet warned of two primary dangers: (1) the irresponsible international trade in nuclear fuel reprocessing plants necessary for fuel enrichment and the production of bombs, and (2) the growing stockpile of plutonium, a highly poisonous element in the manufacture of atomic bombs.

Explained Dr. Taylor: "There is the possibility that an aggressive or beleaguered country, or a deranged leader in charge of a national government, might seek a way out of their problems by using the most powerful weapon ever invented."

Dr. Rathjens suggested Israel, Taiwan, and South Africa as possible users. He might have suggested other countries as well.

The U.S., the Soviet Union, Great Britain, and France are the world's leading suppliers of nuclear power plants. The U.S. is the world's chief supplier of enriched uranium, without which sophisticated nuclear bombs are impossible to manufacture.

Fortunately, the U.S. government currently has a monopoly on the enrichment of such uranium. Of late, however, there has been talk in Congress of turning over this vital monopoly to private industry.

MONEY, NOT LOVE Frenchwomen used to kill because of love, because men betrayed them, because they were jealous. The crime of passion is a traditional ingredient of French literature. But crimes of passion are no longer the specialty of Frenchwomen betrayed.

Dr. Susanne Troisier, chief prison medical inspector, recently studied women in French jails. She reports that women in France still kill--but more frequently for money than for love. The crime of passion, she says, is virtually passé. One in every four female prisoners Troisier studied in jail had been incarcerated for fraud.

FASHION TREND For the past 10 years women have been dressing more and more like men. So claims Gilbert Feruch, one of the top tailors in Paris. Feruch makes suits for Elizabeth Taylor, Pauline de Rothschild, Liza Minnelli, many of the jet-setters.

French dress designers say that clothes which can't be worn by both sexes are out of style.

Yves Saint-Laurent shows gentlemen's suits in his collection on the theory that women buy them because it gives them a feeling of power or equality. French psychiatrist Jean Claude Meyer thinks the trend is ridiculous. "Women," he declares, "are simply not built for suits. They should remain women--and men should remain men."

Marlene Dietrich started wearing men's suits in the 1930's.

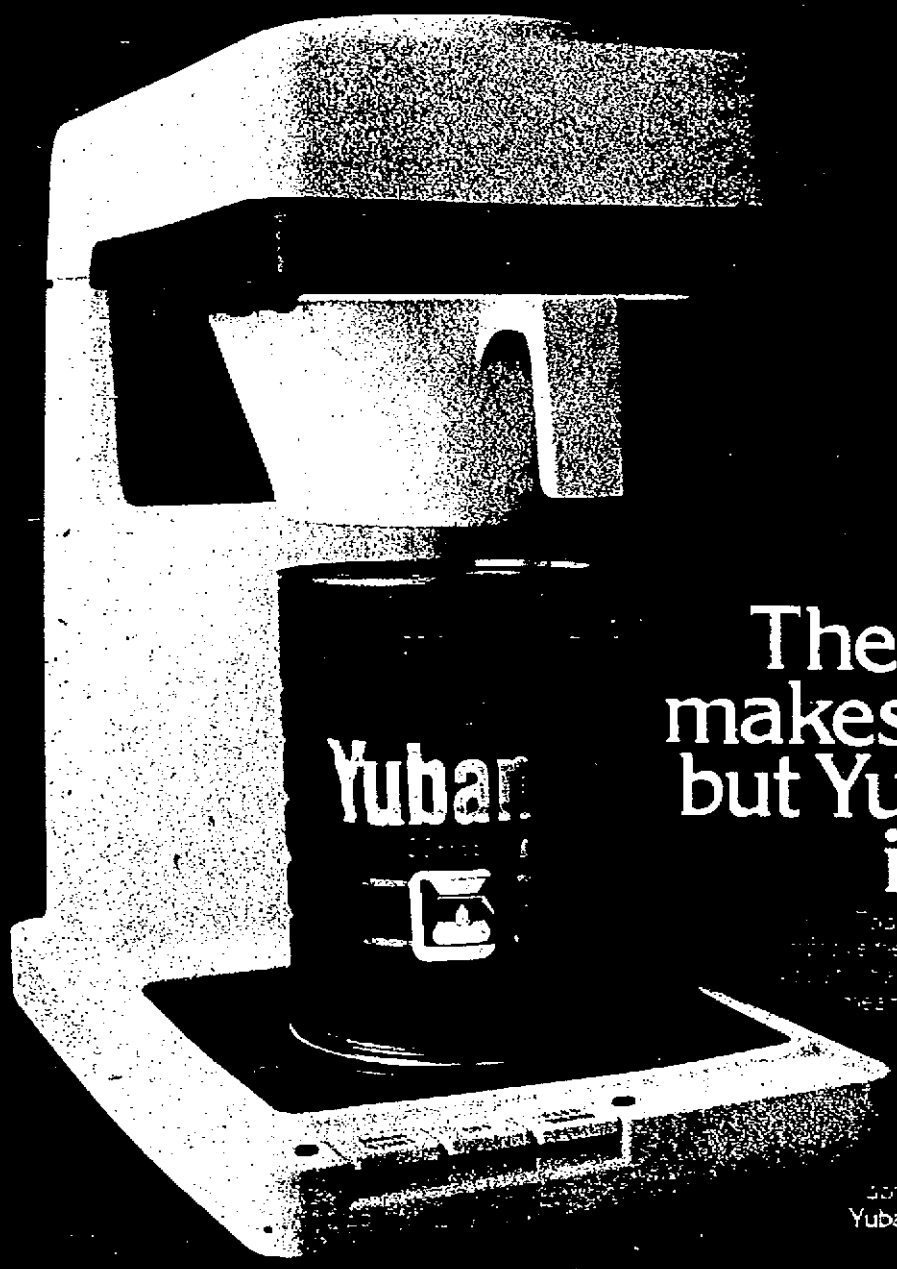

CONCORDE SCHEDULE British Airways plans to start commercial Concorde flights between Heathrow Airport, London, and Dulles Airport, outside of Washington, D.C., on May 24th.

The Concorde has been banned from Kennedy Airport, New York, at least for the time being, so British Airways and Air France will concentrate on the transatlantic run to Dulles.

The British Concorde will fly to Dulles each Saturday, returning the next day. By September it is expected to fly three round-trip flights a week.

The fare will be around $700 one way.

HOW THE SOVIETS USE CUBA The Soviet spy apparatus is now using Cuban freighters to sneak their spies into Hong Kong.

According to the South China Morning Post: "The Cubans are being used to do the Russians' dirty work. There are Russian KGB men on board almost every Cuban ship that has entered Hong Kong in the past four years."

If the Soviets are so eager to infiltrate Hong Kong with their agents, why don't they bring them in aboard Soviet ships? That's exactly what they used to do until 1972, when a group of Hong Kong's Special Branch detectives discovered and smashed a Russian spy-ring.

This prompted the KGB to alter tactics and place its spies on Cuban vessels where they masquerade as Cuban seamen. The Soviets have also trained a number of Cubans as KGB spies.

Why does the KGB want to infiltrate Hong Kong? Because the Crown Colony is next door to the People's Republic of China and serves as a listening and departure post for agents.

To date, Cuba is the only Communist country which has established official diplomatic representation in Hong Kong.

MALE MIDWIVES British babies will be delivered by male midwives in another year or so.

Britain is setting up a couple of schools for men who want to deliver babies. Under the 1951 Midwives Act, women only were specified for that position, but it is now against the law in Britain as it is in the U.S. to discriminate against a job-seeker on the basis of sex.

The new ruling has made Norman Imms, a father of three children, particularly happy. For years Mr. Imms from Peterlee, County Durham, has tried to enroll as a student midwife, but hospitals have consistently turned him down. No more.

SEAN CONNERY

CONNERY GOES POLITICAL Sean Connery, who earned fame and fortune as Agent 007 in the James Bond movies, is fighting for an independent Scotland. Connery, a tax exile whose official residence is now Marbella, Spain, wants his native Scotland to become a tax paradise, sort of like Switzerland.

"I believe," he says, "Scotland would be better off as an independent nation. If the Scottish National Party [SNP] could come to power they could nationalize the oil fields in the North Sea and the banks."

Connery is one of the leading financial supporters of the SNP and has guaranteed $1 million to the Scottish Educational Trust Foundation.

TV DATA Here's a batch of TV statistics you may find interesting: about 97% of all U.S. households now have TV sets. About 75% of these are color sets. There are around 715 commercial TV stations in this country, about 200 of them UHF.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS' RISING FEE Should you plan to climb Mt. Everest, be advised that the government of Nepal has raised its climbing fee to approximately $1200 per expedition.

NEW IQ QUESTION Does intelligence depend on genetics, race, class, income, environment--or should the number of children in a family be included in that vital question?

A study conducted by Robert B. Zajonc, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, and his colleague Gregory Markus suggests that the fewer children in a family, the more probability that the children will possess higher intelligence quotients.

Zajonc and Markus suggest that a child's rate of mental development is influenced by the amount of adult knowledge he or she shares. They contend that a child's intelligence tends to expand more rapidly when parental knowledge is not shared by two or more children.

If the theory is correct, "only children" should score the highest IQ's.

CLOTHES FOR HIRE How many men own tails or a tuxedo or a costume for a ball? The answer is relatively few -- especially in Europe.

As a result Moss Brothers in London has become the largest and oldest clothes rental establishment in the world. It boasts 37 branches, employs 800 people, and according to its chief, Montagu Moss, "We rent everything from a magistrate's robe to an ordinary raincoat."

The concern has been serving the British, including royalty, for 150 years and prides itself on offering a wide range of sizes and on keeping its stock up-to-date.

"You might say," Moss points out, "that we offer borrowed elegance at reasonable prices." An evening gown for three nights will rent for $32, a full dress suit, top hat, white tie and tails for $24, a dark suit for a funeral for about $16.

Ski clothes, riding habits, shooting outfits -- all these are rented at prices that make rental preferable to ownership.

Do you need roughage?

Roughage is important because it retains essential water to form the bulk that moves waste material through your system.

But, unfortunately, roughage is processed out of so much of the food we eat, many of us don't get enough of it.

Without sufficient roughage in your diet, you may suffer from constipation.

Here's where Serutan can help you.

Serutan is the natural ingredient laxative that contains a rich source of roughage. It has the capacity to absorb over 20 times its weight in water. But, unlike certain foods containing harsh roughage, Serutan forms gentle bulk. Your intestinal wastes remain soft and moist and they pass through your system more rapidly.

Try Serutan. You'll be very comfortable with it.

Our plans affect you. You can affect our plans.

Public Participation founded this nation. And Public Participation is needed now. This Thursday, May 20, there will be important public hearings sponsored by the Sanitation Districts of Los Angeles County and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). By reading this, then letting us hear from you, either in person or by letter, you'll have helped guide your government to a decision that will affect you and nearly 4 million of your neighbors through the year 2000. It's an important decision, one we'll all have to live with.

6 Pomona Water Renovation Plant

Why should sewers interest you? Because your land, air, water and pocketbook interest you.

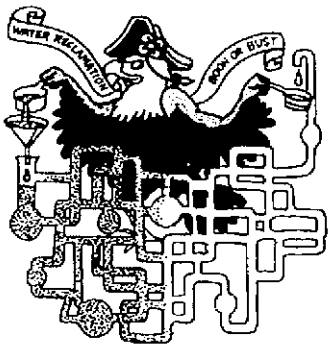

We need a wastewater management plan to serve a large portion of Los Angeles County through the year 2000. If you live within the area served by the County Sanitation Districts (see map), the plan will affect you. And it will also affect energy consumption, water conservation, public health, land use planning, air quality, the ecology, and your pocketbook. And that's why we invite you to a public hearing. You have a right to help form a plan of action. A right to be heard. But first, a little background.

Today: Serving 3,650,000 people.

We convey, treat and discharge about 415 million gallons of wastewater (sewage) daily. We service a network of over 1,000 miles of large trunk sewers. And to connect users to the trunk sewers takes over 7,000 miles of smaller sewers. Currently we operate and maintain six treatment plants. Pipes, pumps—and treatment plants all working together. Our system is one of the largest in the world today. To understand how it works—and the problems we face tomorrow—you'll have to understand (gulp!) what happens to wastewater after it reaches a sewer.

Wastewater: Repulsive...or a resource?

Drinking water starts out clean and pure. Once used, whether by industry, (historically about 1/3 of the flow) or residents, it has to be cleaned up and then disposed of...somewhere. The real questions start to crop up here...how clean is clean, where do we treat it, where do we put it? Currently the Sanitation Districts utilize two differing systems of treatment and disposal.

Coastal vs. Inland

Right now four-fifths of our wastewaters go to one coastal plant, it's one of the largest in the world—our Joint Water Pollution Control Plant, in Carson. The Carson plant provides primary treatment to some 335 million gallons of wastewater daily. Primary treatment consists of settling tanks which remove solids by gravity. The removed solids are stabilized by digestion and some are recycled—and sold commercially as nitrohumus or organic soil conditioners. After primary treatment and chlorination, the water is sent two miles out into the ocean off Palos Verdes, through two underwater pipes (one 7-1/2 and the other 10 feet in diameter) and discharged at a depth of 200 feet. There the ocean continues the purification process.

Importantly, our coastal plant creates, captures, and uses energy generated from biological digestion...it currently produces as much energy as it consumes! A consideration of growing importance, especially when you know that it takes the equivalent of a 30 watt bulb burning 24 hours a day, everyday, in every home in the District, just to treat wastewaters.

The remaining one-fifth of our wastewater is treated and discharged differently. At our five inland plants the water receives primary and then secondary treatment—biological action purifies the water after most of the solids are removed. This secondary treated wastewater has up to 95% of the solids removed.

Inland treatment provides reusable water, currently one-third of it is reused for irrigation or replenishment of ground water supplies. In effect, wastewater is recycled. The remainder of the water flows down the San Gabriel River and Rio Hondo River Flood Control Channels to the ocean.

That, very briefly, is the way the system works—today.

Tomorrow's System

Our existing collection, treatment and disposal network is a good one. But it doesn't meet recently enacted Federal and State standards. So, like many districts around the country, we've already begun adding to our treatment of wastewaters. Construction is underway, many of the improvements will be in operation by 1977.

Clean water is costly water

Improvements already underway will cost some $181 million for construction through completion. A lot of money.

And while Federal and State agencies will pay 87-1/2% of the construction costs, your County Sanitation Districts will pay 100% of the operation and maintenance costs for the improved facilities...adding six or seven dollars a year to your sewer bill. While these decisions have already been made, we want you to know what you'll be getting for your money.

Coastal plant improvements

Our large coastal plant, now providing primary treatment to 335 million gallons of wastewater daily, will, by 1977, be providing advanced primary treatment. We'll be taking out 80% of the solids. Under previous treatment methods some solids have built up on the ocean floor immediately adjacent to the outfall pipe; by 1977 the deposits should stop and the build-up reverse itself. A distinct improvement.

Another improvement will come with the addition of secondary (biological) treatment at our Coastal plant. The first module, designed to secondarily treat 100 million gallons a day, will soon be under construction. This will reduce solids discharged to the ocean by 40 tons a day. Secondary treatment also will further reduce the amounts of heavy metals and chlorinated hydrocarbons (like DDT) in the wastewater before discharge to the ocean.

Altogether, the improvements to the coastal plant mean that a greater degree of treatment will occur prior to discharge. Let's now take a brief look at what's planned "upstream."

Inland plant improvements

We've told you about primary and secondary treatment. Our inland plants will be required by the new laws to provide tertiary treatment. That means the construction of a sophisticated filtering system at each of the plants. Basically, what primary treatment doesn't settle out or secondary treatment digest out of the system, tertiary treatment filters out. In a way we're the victims of our own success. As we've increased the quality and quantity of wastewaters discharged by inland plants we've made the San Gabriel and Rio Hondo River channels more appealing for recreation. To not jeopardize the public's health, the State Water Resources Control Board has mandated the construction of filters at each plant.

That's where we've been and where we're going.

Now, on to where we've got to be.

If you've read this far, you may think you know more about "sewers" than you wanted to know. We've told you a lot about how your Sanitation Districts have worked. But now we have new, urgent, decisions to make, now we want you to tell us how you want the system to work in the future, through the year 2000. We want to hear from you. So read on.

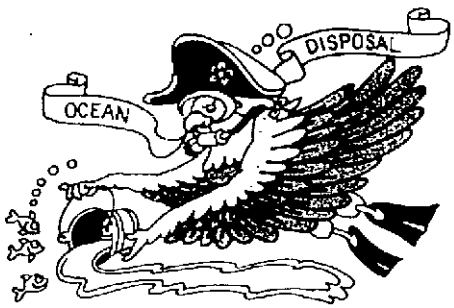

Water reclamation: Boon or Bust?

The ocean plant reclaims no water. The inland plants treat their water and release 70% to flood channels, 30% for water table replenishment or irrigation. In a sense, either inland use is a reuse; the water discharged to flood control channels provides recreation and a desirable flowing action during dry weather.

Federal and State agencies also believe that reuse is an important conservation objective. And there are many forms of reuse—including irrigation, industrial uses and water table replenishment. Early studies indicate that reuse in Los Angeles County would decrease energy consumption and costs...every gallon reused is one less gallon to be pumped to our area. And remember, water is a basic resource. History tells us that any resource, no matter how plentiful it appears, can be abused. And today's abundant resources have a way of becoming scarce in the future. But water reuse has some disadvantages. Use of reclaimed water may require a new distribution system—there could be construction impacts. Would reclamation spawn growth in the area, bringing social and air pollution

Under this alternative we would plan no additional capacity for our inland treatment plants. Instead, we will upgrade our Carson plant to full secondary treatment. Discharge will continue to the ocean through existing outfall pipes. By the year 2000 this single plant would provide secondary treatment to 400 million gallons a day; the remaining 100 million gallons a day would receive tertiary treatment at inland plants.

It is not now nor will it be practical to reclaim treated waters from the Carson plant. Because it receives heavier industrial input the salt or mineral concentrations are too high to permit reuse without desalting, a prohibitively expensive process. Also the low elevation of the plant would dictate expensive and energy-consuming power to transport the water to potential users. If this alternative is adopted the amount of treated wastewater available for reuse will remain at current levels through the year 2000.

Energy.	Under Ocean Disposal Emphasis substantial amounts of energy will continue to be recovered during the treatment process. Gross energy use for the total	system is estimated at 484 million kilowatt hours a year. Net energy use is estimated at 213 million kilowatt hours a year at probable levels of reuse.
Water Quality.	Full secondary treatment. Total discharge to the ocean: 400 million gallons a day. Swimming and shellfish standards met by chlorination levels same as inland discharge alternative. Virus control,	suspended solids removal and chlorinated hydrocarbon reductions, same as inland discharge alternative. 100 million gallons a day available inland for reuse.
Growth and Air Quality.	These are related impact areas as growth historically has brought more air pollution. Population growth projections used in these plans assume a condition of no growth which is consistent with current population trends in the districts. The system's direct emissions will be equal	under both alternatives, contributing between 1/10 and 1/2 of one percent of total Air Basin emissions through the year 2000. Construction will create 150 permanent jobs, 7,500 construction jobs, 45,000 peripheral jobs.
Costs.	Capital: $368 million (87-1/2% Federally and State funded). Operations and maintenance: $23.4 million yearly (100% locally funded). Increase in	average annual sewer taxes and assessments by $16 per household, raising the total to $31. $9–10 million additional from industrial users.
Other Impacts.	Construction nuisances: 8 to 28 miles of urban trenching. Public Health: Improvement. Biological: No known areas of special significance are threatened. Archaeological: No impact on known sites. Historical: No impact on known sites. Paleontological: Possibility of	uncovering artifacts, adverse impacts can be avoided. Rare or endangered species: No significant impact. Recreational: If channel flow decreased because more of the 100 million gallons a day was reused that could alter recreational uses in the channels.

impacts? Then there's the money needed for reclamation. Most of it up front—while the benefits are long range. Not only that, users have to want the reusable water. How quickly that market develops is another good question. Lastly, there's Public Health. What happens if minute quantities of chemicals survive tertiary treatment and somehow ultimately enter a municipal water supply? No one knows for sure—there are no Federal or State standards. Confused? You're not alone. But try to sort out those arguments and give us your ideas about reclamation. Either on page 7 or on May 20.

Over the past few years, we've examined dozens of alternative plans for wastewater management. We've held public workshops to get more input. And now we have a final two important choices before us. Below, you'll find our best arguments for emphasizing ocean disposal in the future. And our best arguments for emphasizing inland disposal in the future. Read them carefully—please. Then let us hear from you.

Under this alternative we would plan no additional capacity for our ocean treatment plant in Carson. Instead we would expand the capacities of our five inland plants. By the year 2000 these plants would provide tertiary treatment for 200 million gallons a day; our plant at Carson would provide secondary treatment to the remaining 300 million gallons a day, discharged to the ocean.

The increased flow of waters treated inland are practical to reclaim. Because the wastewaters come largely from suburban, residential areas they're lower in mineral salt concentrations. No expensive desalting processes would have to be employed. Additionally, because these plants are located at higher elevations, and scattered throughout the potential reuse area, distribution costs and energy consumption would fall within practical limits. Under this alternative, water for available reuse would increase 100% over the ocean disposal alternative.

Impacts
Energy.	Under Inland Disposal emphasis maximum amounts of energy will be recovered during the treatment process. Gross energy use for the total system is estimated at 500 million kilowatt hours a year. Net energy use is estimated at 154 million kilowatt hours a year, at probable levels of reuse.
Water Quality.	Full secondary treatment. Total discharge to the ocean: 300 million gallons a day. Swimming and shellfish standards met by chlorination levels, same as ocean discharge alternative. Virus control, suspended solids removal and chlorinated hydrocarbon reductions, same as ocean discharge alternative. 200 million gallons of reclaimed water a day available for reuse. Under this alternative ammonia control on the river system may be more important in the 1980's.
Growth and Air Quality.	These are related impact areas as growth historically has brought more air pollution. Population growth projections used in these plans assume a condition of no growth which is consistent with current population trends in the districts. The system's direct emissions will be equal under both alternatives, contributing between 1/10 and 1/2 of one percent of total Air Basin emissions through the year 2000. Construction will create 150 permanent jobs, 7,500 construction jobs, 45,000 peripheral jobs.
Costs.	Capital: $373 million (87-1/2% Federally and State funded). Operations and maintenance: $25.5 million, yearly (100% local). Increase in average annual sewer taxes and assessments by $17 per household, raising the total to $32. $10 million additional from industrial users. Reuse distribution costs would be separate.
Other Impacts.	Construction nuisances: up to 13 miles of urban trenching. Possibly a major reuse distribution system. Public Health: Improvement. Biological: No known areas of special significance are threatened. Archaeological: No impact on known sites. Historical: No impact on known sites. Paleontological: Less possibility of uncovering artifacts than under Ocean Emphasis Alternative. Rare or Endangered Species: Increases in the flow for the San Gabriel River could, in principle, affect the feeding habitat of the California Least Tern. Recreational: The initial increased flow to inland flood channels could alter recreational uses of the channels.

Decisions, decisions, decisions– here's where we need your help.

As you've seen, no matter what plan we adopt there will be environmental and other impacts. The County Sanitation Districts and the Environmental Protection Agency have written a report assessing these impacts, each County library has a copy. The Environmental Protection Agency has been, and will continue to be very much involved in all aspects of our plans that touch upon their Federal responsibilities, including among others air and water pollution, drinking water purity, and waste disposal management. No matter what plan we choose, we'll impact all of those areas—and more.

What do you want to get, what are you willing to give?

As you know from reading the preceding pages, we're faced with important trade-offs. Our job is to lessen (mitigate) impacts. To get one thing (purer discharge water, for instance) we have to give up other things (money and energy, as examples). And that's where you come in. What are you willing to give up? And what are you willing to give?

There are no "right" answers. But your answer, regardless of what it is, has importance to us. Because it will help guide us to the plan that's best for most of us.

An invitation from John D. Parkhurst

Your County Sanitation Districts are made up of twenty-seven Districts, the first established in 1926. The Districts include a total of 72 cities and are governed by a Board of Directors comprised of the mayors and county supervisors within the Districts' boundary. Our operation under a single, unified administration has permitted the development of a qualified technical staff with years of experience, able to address regional waste management problems. We regularly host tours of others in our occupation—many of whom come from around the world to tour our plants and talk to our experts.

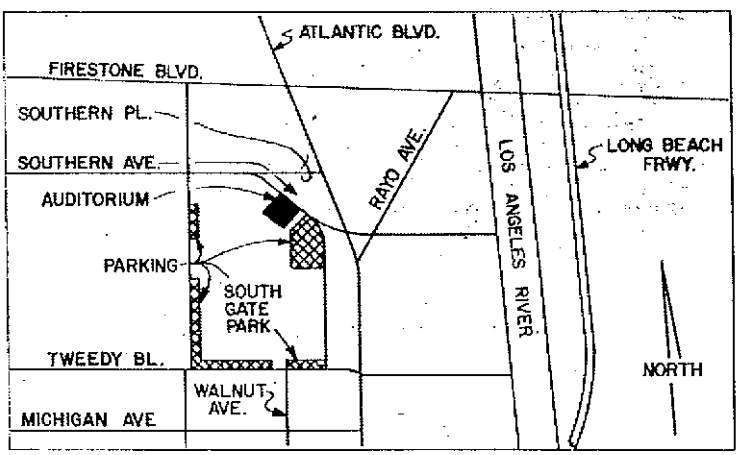

The importance of the projects discussed on these pages cannot be overemphasized. The task is monumental.

All of our technical expertise, all of our experience, mean nothing if we embark upon a plan that does not serve the best interests of the people we serve. You, in person or by letter, can help assure a brighter future for yourself and your fellow citizens. Give us just three hours of your time, just this once.

John D. Parkhurst
CHIEF ENGINEER AND GENERAL MANAGER
SANITATION DISTRICTS OF LOS ANGELES COUNTY

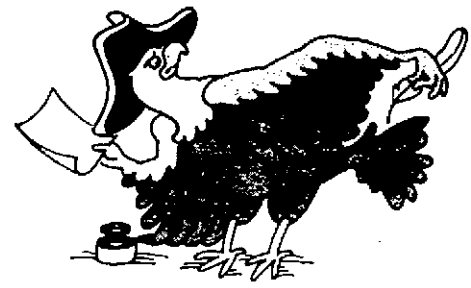

We want to hear from you May 20th

We've scheduled two Public Hearings, at 9:30 A.M. and 7:00 P.M., this Thursday, May 20, in the South Gate Auditorium, 4900 Southern Avenue, South Gate. At either hearing all you have to do is fill out a brief form telling us you want to be heard. Your comments will become part of the official hearing record. And your contribution will affect our plans...to the year 2000.

For more information, call (213) 699-7411, and ask for "Hearings."
8:00 A.M.– 4:00 P.M., Weekdays

If you can't attend a hearing, you can still be heard.

Write us. If you've read this far you know how important your opinion is. So, if for any reason you can't attend a hearing, take a few minutes and let us hear from you by letter. You can address yourself to one issue or to all of them. Tell us as much, or as little, as you want. On balance it's a small investment. Write—right now, please.

Water reclamation.
Give us your thoughts based upon what you now know and feel. Is reclamation a washout? Or is it worthwhile? How much reclamation is enough? Is wastewater a resource?
